John Jaunsem is “looking at the bright side” of the recent break-in at his Bloxom area home. “I had to guess what was going to happen the first time,” he reasons. “Now I know” and can plan for the future.

The 65-year-old seed-plant breeder said Wednesday that neighbors who weren’t armed before have bought guns and for the first time some residents are locking their doors.

His wife, Sherry, was too “mad and upset” to talk to a reporter. She was home alone when the incident occurred the morning of Jan. 11 and returned gunfire at a fleeing burglar with a .357 magnum loaded with triple-aught slugs.

Jaunsem said he was in Salisbury at the time and had the couple’s car. Their truck was being repaired, so no vehicle was parked at the Mason Road house.

The culprits weren’t planning a home invasion because evidence shows they knocked on the door in an effort to be sure the residents were out, Accomack Sheriff Todd Godwin said, adding that Mrs. Jaunsem was inside the house but didn’t answer the door. “They had no clue that she was home,” Godwin said.

The sheriff advised residents in similar situations to call 9-1-1 and yell out to alert burglars that the police have been called, which would also alert them that someone is inside.

Jaunsem said his wife heard the knock, looked out the window, and didn’t see a delivery truck. Instead, there was someone dressed in black “crouching down to look out for traffic.” She knew something was suspicious. Jaunsem believes there was a
Jeff Terwilliger, Accomack’s new director of Public Safety, was formally welcomed to the county Wednesday by the Board of Supervisors.

For two decades, Terwilliger worked for Isle of Wight County as a paid and volunteer firefighter/medic and for the City of Portsmouth where he rose through the ranks and was promoted to Battalion Chief in 2005.

“I’m very pleased at what I’ve seen here,” Terwilliger said. “I’m confident that we have a solid foundation to build upon.”

“The supervisors unanimously passed a resolution of commendation for C. Ray Pruitt, who has served as acting director since March 2012 when Jason Loftus left the job. Pruitt has gone back to being a battalion chief.

“You did a tremendous job,” County Administrator Steve Miner told Pruitt. “Thank you for filling in.”

Terwilliger earned an Associate’s Degree in Fire Science from Tidewater Community College, a Bachelor of Science Degree from Bluefield College and a Master’s Degree in Executive Fire Service Leadership from Grand Canyon University.

He holds numerous state emergency management certificates, including Fire Instructor III and Fire Officer IV. He is a National Registry EMT-paramedic and serves as a member of the Hampton Roads Incident Management Team.

In addition, Terwilliger graduated from the National Fire Academy’s Executive Fire Officer Program and received Chief Fire Officer Designation from the Center of Public Safety Excellence in 2008.

He and his wife, Tracy, have three children.

Visitor spending in Accomack County is estimated at nearly $157 million, an increase of 17 percent, according to the most recent figures cited Wednesday by David Schulte, executive director of the Eastern Shore Tourism Commission.

The industry is also responsible for more than $32 million in paychecks, 12 percent more than the four previous years, and about 1,860 jobs, a 3.7 percent hike.

In addition, more than $4.6 million in taxes are derived from tourism, nearly 11 percent more than in 2007, Schulte reported. The figures were for 2011 and include $1,106,420 in lodging taxes and $638,865 in meals taxes.

The Welcome Center serves about 330 visitors daily, for a total of 361,000 tourists since it opened. About $35,000 was spent by businesses that advertise there.

Schulte noted that several national publications have written articles about the area since last summer. “We’re the Mecca for birding in the fall and spring” and the “center of the universe for aquaculture,” he told the supervisors.

Plans include making tourists aware of repairs to Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge, NASA launches and the possibility of a water trail around the Chesapeake Bay. A yacht group also is considering holding its annual gathering in Cape Charles in May.
Company members “thought everything was right with their books” until the bookkeeper died and they lost their 501C status because tax papers had not been filed since 2007. They are now “paying a large fee ... they are trying to get everything in place. Once they do, they will be audited,” Lewis said.

In November, money was found to be missing at Onley Fire & Rescue and several members quit the department.

Supervisors Ron Wolff and Reneta Major were concerned about audit costs for the companies. Mason said he would seek proposals for the best prices, which could vary.

In other business, the supervisors voted to direct the county attorney to continue with plans to purchase the former J. Franklin Jones Lumber Mill near Accomac for a recreational park.

Details of negotiations, including the pricetag, were not made public following an 80-minute closed session because the deal has not been finalized. County Administrator Steve Miner disclosed the county would not be obligated to purchase the 35-acre parcel unless the federal government approves a land swap that would clear the way for Wallops Research Park. The seller also would be required to remove concrete pads and transformers on the Accomac site.

Supervisors agreed the northern park site, intended for recreation, complies with the Comprehensive Plan. They believe the southern section is ideal because several buildings there can be used by county departments, saving tens of thousands of dollars in rent. The Wallops property is appraised at $128,000. The park property was assessed at $394,800.

Former Supervisor Steve Mallette is acting as the mill’s agent, Miner said. Mallette once served on a committee that looked for available park sites. Stella Rohde, a real-estate agent and Parks and Recreation Board member who voted against recommending the site recently, listed the mill property for sale in 2011. She is also a former member of the Planning Commission. The price on her listing was $500,000.

Tracinda’s will be closing permanently on January 26, 2013

third person driving a get-a-way vehicle. He speculated that they had come there to steal and would need a way to transport whatever they took.

“How were they going to carry the TV?” he rhetorically asked. “If you’re going to steal, you’re too lazy to work.”

He explained that the would-be thieves used a decorative rock turtle they found in the Jaunsem garden to break a window in the garage/utility room door. Then one of the men “easily” stuck a hand in and opened it. A second door — one that opened to the kitchen — was kicked in.

The man who entered also was dressed from head to toe in black, Mrs. Jaunsem has reported. His face was covered. “You see what I have,” Mr. Jaunsem said his wife told the man, referring to the gun she was holding. “She didn’t feel like killing anybody, so she didn’t,” Jaunsem added. “The guy … realized he was about to die … she had the bigger gun.”

Jaunsem said the man ran. His wife watched him get about 150 feet away. It was then that he fired at her. Jaunsem said she wasn’t scared. She was concerned. “She knew she had the weapon. He was probably trying to scare her.” When the man shot at her, Jaunsem said his 60-year-old wife was so mad she didn’t notice the powerful gun’s kick and shot at him a second time.

Her husband is sure she hit the man. She wasn’t crazy about the notion when he taught her how to use the gun. “Now she’s glad I did,” Jaunsem said. “There’s no way she could miss even if she didn’t know what she was doing … I taught her well enough … they were after whatever the hell was in here — whatever they could steal.”

Jaunsem said he deliberately didn’t make the first door hard to enter so they could hear if someone was trying to get in. There is enough of the special ammunition “for three more home invasions.” After that, he’ll have to buy more. He advised his wife to use three shots and if they don’t do the job because of protective armor, “aim for the face” with the fourth shot. “This is serious business,” Jaunsem said.

He owner also said the gun was not confiscated by police. “They just told her to reload it.”

Godwin would not say whether blood was found. “We collected all evidence that was at the scene,” he said. “We got there quick. I thought we had contained them.” Godwin added that four units were leaving a nearby school following a DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) graduation when they were alerted.

In a prepared statement, Godwin said the incident was reported at 9:48 a.m. and “it was determined that two suspects dressed in dark clothing were involved … and that they had forced entry into the residence. The homeowner confronted one of the suspects inside the residence and both suspects then fled on foot into a nearby wooded area. During this incident, gunfire was exchanged between the homeowner and the suspects with no report of injuries at this time.”

Godwin said a perimeter was established and a search of the area was conducted using K-9 units as well as aircraft, with assistance from the Virginia Marine Police, Virginia and Maryland State Police, and Bloxom, Parksley and Onley police departments. The suspects were not apprehended.

Anyone with information about the crime is asked to contact the Accomack Sheriff’s Office at 787-1131 or 824-5666.

Northampton Grand Jury

Several Eastern Shore men were indicted Monday by a Northampton County Grand Jury on charges that allegedly involved violence by a mob at an Exmore nightspot last September.

In all, 13 people were indicted on a variety of charges. Four of those suspects were not identified because they have not yet been arrested, according to authorities. The charges for which they are accused also were not given.

Pernell Mason Jr., 23, of Exmore was indicted on three counts of malicious wounding and three counts of malicious wounding by a mob. Darion Baines, 23, of Painter and William Cordal Berryhill, 24, of Exmore were indicted on two counts of malicious wounding and two counts of malicious wounding by a mob. The Grand Jury indicted Keonyor Brison Berryhill, 25, of Belle Haven on one count of each offense.

According to Northampton General District Court records, a charge of malicious wounding by a mob was not prosecuted against Arkie (Dyce) Montwelle Davis, 27, of Exmore. The charge was reduced to assault and battery. Davis was sentenced to a year in jail, with all but two months suspended. He was put on probation for three years. He also is awaiting sentencing for possession with the intent to distribute cocaine in connection with an incident that occurred on Jan. 10, 2012. He pleaded guilty to that charge in November.

Keyon Leroy Cherry, 24, of Exmore, who also was charged with malicious wounding in the September incident, was found guilty of assault and battery. In addition, Cherry was fined $250. Markie Lavel Turner, 23, of Exmore got the same reduced charge and sentence. He was fined $150, according to the court record. Neither man was prosecuted for malicious wounding by a mob for which they were initially accused.

The Grand Jury also indicted:
- Terence D. Brisco, 38, of Nassawadox, on a count of a third offense of domestic assault;
- Joseph Lamont Hines, 32, of Birdsness, charged with possession of cocaine.
- Alonso Uvonne Parker, 55, of Nassawadox, on counts of felony eluding, DUI, refusal to take a breathalyzer test and reckless driving;
- Coley Leon Thomas Jr., 43, of Birdsness, on counts of malicious wounding and assault and battery;
- Calvin Young, 32, of Painter on two counts of a third offense of larceny.

Coast Guard Members Disciplined for Drug Violations

By Linda Cicoira

Eight unidentified active-duty Coast Guard members assigned to Chincoteague-based units admitted to using illegal drugs at proceedings held this month, according to an announcement by the 5th Division office in Portsmouth.

A hearing was held for one of the members on Jan. 3. The rest were found during administrative proceedings Monday to have committed drug-related offenses.

Using the “prohibited substances,” which also were not identified, violated the Uniform Code of Military Justice and Coast Guard policy, according to Capt. Christopher Keane, a deputy commander of Coast Guard Sector Hampton Roads. “This behavior is inconsistent with the Coast Guard mission and core values.”

Allegations first surfaced in late November 2012. Lt. Mike Patterson said that to “ascertain the scope of the (alleged) problem, drug testing” was conducted.

The members involved include ranks from seaman apprentice (E-2) to petty officer first class (E-6) from the Sector Field Office, Aids to Navigation Team and Electronic Support Detachment units.

The announcement stated that punishment includes restriction, forfeiture of pay and reduction in pay grade. Coast Guard policy also states that members would be processed for discharge by reason of misconduct if involved in drug incidents, including intentional use and wrongful possession of drugs.

Accomack District Court

An Accomack woman was ordered to report to authorities today to serve two years for embezzling more than $100,000 from a local real-estate company.

Shelly Renas, 46, of Locustville worked for Kim Starr of Chesapeake Properties when the incidents occurred between 2004 and 2009. She pleaded guilty last July to five charges of embezzlement that involved $106,913.43.

Renas was sentenced Monday in Northampton Circuit Court to 10 years in the state penitentiary on each count, to run concurrently, with eight years suspended. Renas has made restitution.

Two Northampton men were sentenced last Friday in Northampton Circuit Court on grand larceny charges, according to Commonwealth’s Attorney Bruce Jones.

Markie Dwayne Davis, 36, of Cape Charles was sentenced to 10 years on each of five counts of grand larceny. The terms were set to run concurrently, with all but three years and eight months suspended. Supervised probation and restitution of $15,235 also were ordered. Court records show the offenses occurred between Nov. 25 and 29, 2011.

Alvin Lee Rogers Jr., 33, of Painter was given five years for a third offense of larceny. Half the term was suspended and supervised probation was ordered.
By Del. Lynwood Lewis

This begins my weekly reports home about the activities in the Virginia General Assembly, which was gavelled to order on Wednesday, Jan. 9, at noon by Speaker of the House William J. Howell.

Virginia’s citizen legislature will meet for approximately six weeks and adjourn on Saturday, Feb. 23, so that the 140 members of the House and Senate can return home to their businesses and families. Members of the Assembly represent all sorts of professions and occupations. Pharmacists, farmers, real-estate agents, retirees, and a vastly reduced number of lawyers meet to pass laws in the commonwealth or to consider changes in the existing laws.

This is a non-budget-writing session and we will consider only amendments to Virginia’s two-year budget, which was written and passed during the 2012 Virginia General Assembly. The governor has proposed budget amendments, which will pass through the House Appropriation Committee and Senate Finance Committee and will be worked out by conference between the two bodies, hopefully before we are scheduled to adjourn.

In addition, while in Richmond, I usually take the opportunity to meet with representatives of state agencies and other groups on particular projects and issues of interest to the Shore.

Thus far, there have been 1,792 bills filed in the 2013 General Assembly. There are still a few days before the final filing deadline. Work began early and in earnest here. Immediately after the session was gavelled in, on the first day which is largely ceremonial with a few organizational details, two different sub-committees of the Courts of Justice Committee considered two of my bills. On Friday morning, the Militia, Police and Public Safety Committee on which I serve, considered two more. I’ve filed bills to:

• consider incentives for voluntary public access commitments in conservation easements for natural gas infrastructure in rural areas such as the Eastern Shore;
• establish a mechanism to enforce the termination of Social Services benefits for individuals incarcerated;
• allow retired police officers to work as school board security personnel without affecting their Virginia retirement pay.

We’ve already welcomed folks from the Shore to Richmond. I look forward to many more visits over the next six weeks.

I think this could be a particularly difficult session. We have a large number of weighty issues to consider in a very short time. In addition, recent events at the national level also will drive the action of the Assembly. It’s also an election year for the statewide offices in Virginia as well as for the House of Delegates.

Please feel free to contact me on any issue of concern. With the short time and the volume of legislation that passes at a very quick pace through both houses of the Virginia General Assembly, it is always helpful to have thoughts and comments as well as attention called to certain pieces of legislation that may be of interest to you. In addition, we mailed out approximately 10,000 legislative surveys which I hope you will take time to complete as they provide valuable insights as we consider these important issues in Richmond. The survey is also available online at www.lynwoodlewis.com. My contact information in Richmond is delllewis@house.virginia.gov and 804-698-1000.

Triathlon Coming to a Town Near You

By Ron West

Cape Charles Town Council received a presentation Thursday regarding an athletic event entitled the ES140 Triathlon, which is scheduled for Sept 7. Beth Davis said the 140-mile event is expected to attract 300 to 500 participants who will take a 112-mile bike ride covering much of Accomack and Northampton counties, a 2.4-mile swim in the waters off Cape Charles, and a 26.2-mile run around Cape Charles. An equal number of spectators is expected bringing considerable business to lodging and eating establishments, Davis said.

Council conducted a public hearing on a conditional-use permit (CUP) for South Port, LLC to construct a boat and marine repair facility for up to 33 boats, and a small dwelling unit on the southeast end of the town harbor. The boatel and haulout facilities will be adjacent to Coast Guard Station Cape Charles, with additional facilities across the road near the site of the former wastewater facility. South Port, LLC has invested approximately $5,000,000 in the project. Council unanimously approved the CUP. No startup date was projected for the project.

Council voted to adopt guidelines for citizen participation during meetings. They include a three-minute limit for speakers during the citizen input session, limitations on flash photography, and the addition of speakers’ comments to the meeting minutes.

Charon Ventures, LLC (Echelon), the buyers of the former Cape Charles school property, requested a postponement of work on the building until after the Jan. 25 court hearing on the sale. The original contract called for the work to begin within 90 days of closing with completion within 12 months. The plan calls for repurposing the structure to 17 apartments. The court date for the lawsuit by those opposing the sale had previously been set for December but was delayed.

Council voted 5-1 (Councilman Frank Wendell voting against), to approve the postponement request.

Cape Charles Christian School requested tax-exempt status for the school property and a refund of town taxes paid since May 2010. The Northampton County Board of Supervisors voted to approve the request for county tax-exempt status May 14, 2010. Council voted unanimously to approve the request. The estimated refund to Cape Charles Christian School is $2,836.19.

Town Manager Heather Arcos asked Council to approve a request to apply for a $12,000 Byrne Memorial Justice Grant to purchase cameras for town police vehicles. It would require a town match of $1,200 for four cameras. Council approved the request.

Prior to concluding the session, Council agreed unanimously to change the meeting date for future sessions to the third Thursday of each month.

Sims-Bell & Johnson
Lauded for Service

It was the the mid 1970s and Betty Sims-Bell and Michele Johnson were just starting out their long careers with the Eastern Shore’s local hospital. In November, Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital honored Sims-Bell and Johnson for 35 years of dedicated service to the hospital.

“When you have 35 years of commitment, it’s the ultimate display of dedication and loyalty,” said Susan McAndrews, hospital administrator. “Not only do they bring their expertise to the job, they bring their hearts and minds to the job. They bring a personal dedication to the patients and colleagues they serve. People who are so devoted to an institution, particularly health care, and who spend that much time serving others are the kind of people that become the backbone of the organization.”

Sims-Bell, 52, of Birdsnest, was 15 when she started working at the hospital in the Housekeeping Department through a program that helps young people land jobs. She went away to college at Virginia State University in Petersburg, but returned to work at the hospital during summer and winter breaks. After college, she came home to the Eastern Shore and the hospital. For a while, she worked in the Dietary Department alongside her mother, Julia Sims, a 40-plus-year employee who’s a supervisor in the dietary department. For the past 15 years, Sims-Bell has been employed in Medical Records as a code analyst.

“I still love what I’m doing,” Sims-Bell said. “I love helping people.”

Co-workers are like family to her, Sims-Bell said. When it comes to working with patients and colleagues, she said, she follows Riverside’s mission to care for others as you would care for those you love.

“I always think, ‘How would I like to be treated? What if that was my family member?’ I give them my best. I give them my all. My father always told me, ‘Whatever you do, do it your best.’”

Johnson, of Jamesville, started working at the hospital in 1973. After a brief break, she returned in 1974, and has been there ever since.

Johnson started out as a dietary aide, and then worked in the gift shop snack bar. After that, she moved to the cafeteria, where her superior work ethic helped her earn promotions to Food Services supervisor. Johnson is famous among her colleagues for her attention to detail and her catering and food presentation skills.

One of her favorite activities is visiting patients. “We have worked hard to change the perception of ‘hospital food,’” she said, “and lately patients tell me, ‘It’s the best food I’ve ever had.’”

“You can have a brand new building, but it takes the right people providing great service to deliver the level of care that our community expects,” McAndrews continued. “It’s not the bricks and the mortar. It’s the people, and Betty and Michele are two of the finest.”

“They don’t just show up for work. They’re here with a sense of dedication that goes above and beyond.”

Habitat Visitors Asked To Wear Masks

In an effort to protect patients, visitors and medical staff from the spread of flu Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital is strongly recommending that all patients and visitors wear a surgical-type mask upon entering. A mask is also strongly recommended on arrival for patients and family members seeking care at associated primary-care physician offices.

This strong recommendation comes at a time when seasonal influenza cases are double the numbers experienced at this time last year.

Since vaccines are not 100 percent effective, patients and visitors entering the facilities who have already had flu vaccines are strongly encouraged to wear a mask as an added protection for themselves and their loved ones.

Medical evidence suggests infected persons can transmit the virus as much as 24 hours before displaying symptoms.

Additionally, individuals displaying symptoms of influenza-like illness are asked not to visit the hospital. Symptoms of flu include fever and respiratory illness such as cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose, muscle aches, chills, and sometimes vomiting and diarrhea.

The recommendation to wear a mask when entering healthcare facilities will remain in effect during the flu season and while the prevalence of flu in the region is extraordinarily high.

Larry Burton Always a Hall of Famer in My Mind

I recall first seeing Larry Burton in 1968 when I was practicing football at Central High one hot August day prior to the season.

Burton was among a group standing to the side watching our practice. This was two years before full integration, but most schools had a small number of black students attending the largely white schools on a freedom-of-choice policy.

We had three black football players on our team that year, including Lemuel Shields, Larry's first cousin.

Some of Larry's friends were saying loud enough for us to overhear that maybe Larry should not attend Mary N. Smith that fall, but rather Central.

I have two thoughts on that. If he had chosen to attend Central and maybe brought the Smith quarterback, Louis Bailey, with him, it would have been the greatest backfield to ever play on the Eastern Shore. We already had Glenn Sterling, my first cousin, who scored 132 points that season and made first-team All-State.

My second thought is there would have been no room for that other Sterling in the backfield. That would be me.

Years later, I connected with Larry when I covered sports at the Eastern Shore News.

He was a first-round draft pick of the New Orleans Saints in 1975.

Football fans know how the draft is covered today.

Here is the 1975 version, as told by Larry to me on Monday when he was in Richmond to be presented as a 2013 inductee in the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame.

“I got a call at Purdue from the Saints congratulating me on being their number one draft pick,” recalled Burton. “I said, ‘Thank you’ and went to my business class with Dr. Bell.”

Today, Larry would be in New York City on national television and ready to pen his name to a multi-million dollar contract. Most first rounders don’t even return to school, much less class that day.

I am proud to say that one of the first calls Larry made when he learned he was inducted into the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame was to me.

He has become more to me than some sports figure I covered over the years. He has become a good friend, and he calls me the same.

I knew I had nominated him for inclusion into the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame and that I continued to state his case to the board these past several years.

I always admired Larry’s life after athletics more than his remarkable career on the field.

In 1980, after having what he recalls as one of his best practices ever and being in good health after seasons where a hamstring injury affected him, he walked away from the NFL and went to Boys Town USA because he felt a calling to serve youth.

Twice I have picked up the phone and asked Larry if he would return to the Shore to talk to youth for the Christian Businessmen’s Association and Boys and Girls Club. Both times he didn’t hesitate, despite the fact he was living in California.

He gives a talk that everyone should hear.

He speaks about how his parents, James and Drucilla Burton, now deceased, provided discipline with love and made it clear he was to always give his ultimate best and never quit.

He talks about how John Parsons picked him out in the hall one day and told him, “You are going to play football, Son” when he had no plans to go out for the team.

He talks about his high school teachers, who pushed him to achieve beyond his expectations to the point he was the valedictorian of his high-school class that numbered approximately 150 students.

On Monday I spent about two hours with Larry in Richmond. Do you know what he talked about this time?

He showed me a photo of his great-grandchild. Yes, great-grand child, born to grandson Trey Burton and his wife two weeks ago.

He talked about his seven grandchildren, including Trey and Clay Burton, who both start for the University of Florida football team, ranked number 3 at the end of the year.

He recalls two years ago when he was at a wedding on a Saturday and he asked his son to text him if Trey, then a freshman at Florida, did anything noteworthy.

The phone kept beeping so much he had to step outside, where he learned Trey had scored a record six touchdowns in a single game against Kentucky.

He talked Monday about his wife of 42 years, the former Ida Needam, “My bride is the first person I talked to this morning, and I will be on a plane this afternoon to get back home to see her.”

He talked about his faith and how it sustained a young man when he stepped on a Purdue campus that was home to 30,000 students, almost matching the entire Eastern Shore population, and succeeded beyond his wildest dreams.

He talked about stepping out in the stadium at the Munich Olympics and seeing 100,000 people, trying to comprehend how a young boy who ran races against his friends outside Wachapreague got to this world stage wearing a jersey with “USA” on the front.

Today, Larry is two pounds over his NFL playing weight. He watches what he eats, bikes as many as 50 miles on weekends and attends a weekly prayer group.

For all he has accomplished, he looks ahead and takes great pride in the accomplishments of his children and grandchildren.

In my book, he was a Hall of Famer long before they made it official this week.

But don’t take my word for it. Google Lawrence Burton and Sports Illustrated and read a 16-page story written in 1992 by Leigh Montville that depicts a humanitarian who was the recipient of the Arthur Ashe Award that year.

Even today, he continues, as executive director of an organization that works with adults who cope with disabilities. Larry says, “We put no limitations on what they can do. Family members are shocked when they see the results we achieve. I tell them you just have to believe. It’s a greater thrill than any I ever had in sports.”
Lawrence Burton Named to Virginia Hall of Fame

Lawrence Burton blazed a trail throughout his athletic career and continues to reap the rewards, having been among the seven inductees of the class of 2013 for the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame.

Burton, a native of Melfa who graduated from Mary N. Smith High School in 1970, was an All-American flanker at Purdue University and first-round draft pick of the New Orleans Saints in 1975. Burton was also a world-class sprinter who finished fourth in the 200 meters in the 1972 Summer Olympic Games in Munich, Germany. In 1974, Burton starred for the Purdue Boilermakers football squad and was the team captain and MVP. Among his awards at Purdue were 1974 Outstanding College Athlete of the Year, First Team All-Big Ten, and the Big Ten Medal of Honor.

Burton also starred on Purdue’s track team, earning four Big Ten titles, an NCAA title for the 200-meter dash in 1972 and tying a world record of 5.9 seconds for the 60-yard dash. Burton was inducted into the Purdue Athletics Hall of Fame in 1996.

He caught 35 passes, as well as four touchdowns, for the Saints before signing with the San Diego Chargers in 1978 and helping them in the playoffs. At age 28, Burton retired from football. Career totals include 44 catches for 804 yards, seven touchdowns, and an average 18 yards per catch.

“I was overwhelmed when I got the call from Eddie Webb of the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame,” said Burton Monday in Richmond, when he and the other inductees were presented to both the House of Delegates and the state Senate. “I haven’t played since 1980, so to get this honor now is a blessing and extremely humbling.”

Burton was always much more than just an athlete, however. The valedictorian of his high-school class, Burton was a National Honor Society student and was inducted into the Iron Key Fraternity at Purdue, a prestigious society that included Neil Armstrong and is based on academics, integrity and service.

Burton left pro football in the best health of his career when he was part of a vaunted air attack that included three Pro Football Hall of Famers: quarterback Dan Fouts and receivers Charlie Joiner and Kellen Winslow. They were featured in the Air Coryell offense run by Charger coach Don Coryell and his offensive coordinator, Joe Gibbs.

“I will never forget my first game with the Chargers,” said Burton this week. “It was a Monday night game on national television. I caught two touch-down passes. I was on top of the world.”

But Burton said a yearning to do more than sports led him to leave the Chargers and take his family to Boys Town USA, where he was a counselor to youth for 13 years.

In 1992, Sports Illustrated presented him with the Arthur Ashe Humanitarian Award for his work with youth and did a 16-page story on Burton and his decision to depart the NFL for Boys Town in Omaha, Neb.

That same year, he was selected to start the first ever Boys Town facility outside of Omaha. He and his wife, Ida, a native of Greenbush, spent 15 years in Long Beach, Calif., working with troubled youth.

Meanwhile, their own three children are successful. B.J., the oldest, is a business manager. Shanaeya is an OB/GYN physician and Christie is a businesswoman.

A deeply religious man, when Burton talks about his blessings, the one he keeps coming back to is his wife of 42 years.

“She has been my partner in everything I do,” he said. “She has been a wonderful mother to our children. We’ve had quite a journey together, and I am so grateful for her support and love. I can be watching TV and just feel so lucky to turn and see her right there.”

Burton also considers his amazing speed as an athlete “a God-given talent.”

“We did not have a track team at Mary N. Smith, but I knew I was fast,” Burton recalled. “When I would run a race as a boy, I always gave everyone a 10-yard start and was confident I could outrun everyone.”

At Purdue, he was turned away by the track coach the first time he asked to try out because it was too late in the season.

“I had no training and didn’t know any techniques, but when I finally got on the team I broke the school record the first time I ever ran from the blocks,” said Burton. “The next time, I tied the world record. Eight months later, I was in the Olympics running before 100,000 people and millions on TV. It literally took my breath away.”

In the NFL, Burton was timed in 4.2 seconds for the 40-yard dash in a league where very few athletes today run that distance faster than 4.4 seconds.

As a Sports Illustrated writer once said, “Burton was a genuine bullet.”

Other inductees in the 2013 class of the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame were:

• Franklin Allen, Roanoke College All-American and all-time leader in points and rebounds in Virginia history;

• Cornell Brown, Virginia Tech All-American, 1997 sixth-round pick of the Baltimore Ravens and 2000 Super Bowl champion;

• Dean Ehlers, first director of athletics for James Madison University and conference president during the founding of the Colonial Athletic Association;

• Robert Pratt, standout for the Baltimore Colts and Seattle Seahawks, where he started 105 consecutive games during a 12-year career in the NFL;

• Bill Roth, 10-time Virginia Sportscaster of the Year, the “Voice of the Hokies” and lead play-by-play announcer for Virginia Tech football and basketball;

• Dick Tarrant, who coached 12 seasons for the University of Richmond basketball team, where he amassed 240 wins and guided the team to five NCAA and four NIT tournaments.

The 42nd annual induction ceremony will take place on Saturday, April 27, at the Renaissance Portsmouth Hotel & Waterfront Conference Center as the headline event of Hall of Fame weekend. Tickets are on sale. For more information, call (757) 393-8031 or visit www.vshfm.com

The only other Eastern Shore member of the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame (2003) is Laura Mapp, who in 37 years (1961-98) at Bridgewater College, was one of the most successful women’s coaches in Virginia. She accumulated 876 wins as head coach in basketball, field hockey, and tennis. She also served as associate athletic director and associate professor of physical education. Her basketball teams compiled a 484-282 record and won three VAIW state championships (1976, ’77 and ‘80). Her teams also won two ODAC women’s regular season titles and one tournament championship. Mapp’s field hockey teams recorded 224 wins and won regional and state titles in the AIAW.

Jackets Take 3rd in 11-Team Diem/Miles Wrestling Tourney

Northampton placed third in the Fred Deim/Scott Miles Wrestling Tournament hosted by the Jackets last Friday and Saturday in Eastville.

Eleven teams competed in matches held over two days, with Northampton, Arcadia and Nandua the only Group A schools pitted against Group AAA schools and a private school.

Norview won the meet with 532 points, followed by Maury with 488 points. Northampton took the third place trophy with 482 points, out of second place by only 6 points.

Winning their weight divisions for Northampton with perfect 10-0 records were Charlie Demarino (113), Justin Elting (132), Alan Killebrew (138) and Casey Paglia (145).

Austin Brady (195) and Laquan Hairston (285) finished third for the Jackets, while Steven Wilson (120) and Raul Gildo (160) finished fourth.

Maurice Tolliver (152) was the only Nandua wrestler to finish in the top four, with a third-place finish.

Arcadia’s Skylar Chase (126) and Hunter Tatem (195) compiled 7-3 records to finish fourth.

The Team Sportsmanship Award went to First Colonial.

The Most Valuable Wrestler in the tournament was Corey Hubbard of Lakeland.

“I am very excited about how we wrestled,” said Northampton coach Will Land. “Many of the young guys we threw in the lineup to fill in for Bono and McCaskill wrestled very well,” added Land, referring to two key wrestlers who were missing due to weight and injury.

“We would have definitely challenged for first place with our lineup at full strength. It will be nice when we get everyone back healthy.”

Charlie Demarino on the podium after winning all 10 of his matches.

Northampton wrestlers celebrate their third-place finish in last weekend’s wrestling tournament that included 11 teams.

Casey Paglia of Northampton pins his opponent en route to 10 straight wins in the Fred Diem/Scott Miles Wrestling Tournament last weekend at Eastville.
Kristin Fox of Chincoteague drives to the basket against Salisbury School last week. The Ponies were defeated.

Salisbury Tops Ponies

The Chincoteague Ponies fell to Salisbury School 45-22 Thursday at the Pony gym.

James Goldrup scored 10 points to lead the Ponies, who were missing three starters due to injury and other reasons. Dillon Shaheen had 15 points for the winners.

“We were hurt by missing some starters, but the boys on the floor hustled and played hard,” said Coach Jay Savage. “That’s all you can ask.”

On Monday, the boys lost to Worcester Prep by a 69-27 margin.

Bryant Savage led the Ponies with 14 points on four of five shooting from the foul line and a pair of three-pointers, while James Goldrup added 8 points.

Farr led Worcester Prep with 16 points, while Nally added 15.

The Chincoteague boys host Arcadia next Tuesday.

The Chincoteague girls lost to Worcester Prep 40-5 in a Monday contest.

“We had a hard time with the man-to-man pressure. Our shots just wouldn’t fall,” said Chincoteague coach Kelly Fox.

“The Lady Mallards executed plays very well and looked for the fast break which was hard to cover. They had the height and speed,” added Fox.

Kristin Fox and Madison Jennings both had 2 points for the Lady Ponies.

The Chincoteague girls travel to Arcadia next Tuesday.

Nandua Girls Drop Two

The Nandua girls lost a pair of non-conference games, falling to Mathews at home 37-25 on Saturday and then losing to Atlantic Shores 45-37 on the road Monday.

The Nandua boys travel to Northampton next Thursday, while the Nandua girls host the Lady Jackets.

Jackets Top Warriors; Unbeaten in District

Northampton defeated Nandua 54-30 last Thursday night at home to remain unbeaten in district play as Whitney Metz scored 20 points, Kesi Harmon scored 12 and Briana Williams added 11. Khadijha Robinson had 20 points for Nandua.
Broadwater Boys, Girls Hoopsters
Both Topple Hampton Christian

Broadwater got 23 points from Brendan Burrows and 21 from Michael Riopel to defeat Hampton Christian 82-62 Friday night on the road.

Broadwater opened a 10-point lead after the first quarter and led 44-26 at half. Burrows knocked down three 3-pointers in addition to going 4 of 5 from the foul line.

Wesley Shrieve added 11 points for the Vikings.

Burrows and Riopel both are in the top 10 scorers of the Metro Conference with 15 and 13.1 point averages, respectively.

Both the Viking boys and girls play four games in eight days starting tomorrow with home games on Monday against Portsmouth Christian and Friday against Atlantic Shores.

Lady Vikes Top Jackets

Broadwater's Kristen Lewis scored 35 points, including 17 of 25 from the line, to beat Northampton 61-51 Wednesday night in Westville.

Kathleen Kraft added 12 for the Vikings.

Whitney Metz scored 15 for the Jackets, who had beaten Broadwater earlier in the season.

Nandua Wins One, Drops Pair

Nandua used a huge second quarter to defeat Northampton 69-53 Thursday night at Onley as Darius Holden led the Warriors with 19 points.

Nandua had only a two-point lead entering the second quarter when they outscored the Jackets 27-11 to take a 40-22 halftime lead.

Nandua placed three other players in double figures in addition to Holden, with Trayvon Sneed scoring 19, Issac Taylor 13 and Tyreim Blake 11. Holden nine of 10 shots to tally his 19 points.

Jaberon Onley scored a game high 22 points for the Jackets with Raquan Anderson and Zeb Carter adding 12 and 11 points, respectively.

Taylor had 13 rebounds to lead Nandua while Onley also grabbed 13 rebounds for Northampton.

Coach Cooper said Holden “displayed great leadership on both ends of the court.”

Nandua fell 71-63 to Mathews Saturday at home despite a season high 22 points by Trayvon Sneed on 9 of 14 shooting.

Issac Taylor added 17 for the Warriors with Darius Holden chipping in 12 points. Taylor also had 13 rebounds.

Nandua trailed by only two points after three quarters, but a subpar 9 of 24 performance from the free throw line doomed the Warriors in the final quarter.

Atlantic Shores Christian edged Nandua 55-50 Monday night in a non-conference tilt.

A Melfa woman is 2013’s “Best Scavenger,” after competing in the Eastern Shore Post’s second annual quest. Accomack County rules! Yippee!

Three cheers for Gina Murray (pictured), who was inspired by three Coca-Cola bottles she found in the woods near her home. Murray was able to bring in about half the items on the search list.

Those of you who missed out on the contest details from two weeks ago need to hang your heads and wait until 2014 when perhaps the entry deadline days won’t include torrential rains.

Murray earned a delicious Smith Island cake from Becca’s in Tasley (or other food at equal value) AND she got the opportunity to embarrass her son, Carl Murray III, by posing with an old hot-water bottle. Check out the picture accompanying this article. She’s Vogue.

Murray said that for the past year, she has regretted not participating in the newspaper’s 2012 contest, especially after learning that no one else came forward with a Coke container bottled in Exmore. When the soda bottles were listed again with extra points, she decided to take the plunge and asked her family and friends for help.

“Team Gina and Friends” was the actual name on her submission. She asked me to thank her husband and son for their help and encouragement and her friends, Betsy Mapp of Belle Haven, Joyce James of Melfa, Nancy Garrett of Cheriton, and Curtis Badger of Melfa. Consider yourselves officially appreciated.

Mapp provided the class photo taken before 1976. She was in Miss Gregory’s fourth-grade class in the 1958-59 Belle Haven School picture. Mapp also supplied a 1973 Belle Haven town license plate. I later realized from looking at the picture I’d taken of Murray and her stuff that the “e” at the end of Belle was missing from that piece of metal. Can anyone tell me why?

Murray asked Badger, for whom she does odd jobs, to autograph a book for her. He’s written a slew of them. The signed one submitted was “Bellevue Farm: Exploring Virginia’s Coastal Countryside.”

Photos of Oak Grove Church near Melfa were entered as a Shore church built before 1950. The church, built in 1871, touts the oldest continuous Sunday school in the USA.

Murray also submitted a jar of homemade pickles (with about three slices left), a sand dollar, two stone arrowheads, a calendar from the 1900s (from the back of an old check register) and a clothespin. And, of course, the water bottle.

Current Gun Laws DO Work

Dear Editor:

As difficult as it might seem now, the only thing matching the tragedy of the Sandy Hook shooting is its improbability — in a system of 55 million school children, only five per year will be the victim of gun violence (barring suicides). That statistic is even more surprising when we consider that the gun used at Sandy Hook was a Bushmaster semiautomatic rifle, of which there are millions of functionally equivalent firearms in this country.

By comparison, hundreds of children in this country will die this year from such things as swimming pools, household cleaners, and bicycles. And yet the bleeding hearts aren’t screaming for a ban on pools or bicycles, even though neither of these things is “necessary.” I guess those lives aren’t worth saving — the fact that the bleeding hearts actually might be inconvenienced by THOSE regulations also could be a factor.

The person who gets to decide what is necessary in our lives is each of us — a gun owner doesn’t need to justify owning a semiautomatic weapon any more than a gardener has to justify buying fertilizer, even though fertilizer was used in the Oklahoma City bomb. If I want to own a 30-round clip and don’t intend to shoot up a school, then the reason WHY I want it is moot. From what source do anti-gun advocates derive their mastery over my peaceful activities?

Despite the moaning of gun-control advocates, gun violence in this country is on the decline and has been for some time. Indeed, some of the worst years for gun violence in America occurred between 1994 and 2004 — during the Federal Assault Weapon Ban. Restricting the purchasing options of law-abiding gun owners did nothing to prevent the Columbine shooting — why would it work now? Gun violence is down, school violence is down, mass shootings are down, and yet there are more guns (and ways to make guns) in this country than ever before.

The deaths in Connecticut were undeniably tragic, and it’s only reasonable for people to want something to be done. “Something must be wrong, something must be fixed so this doesn’t happen again,” they say. But the reality of the situation is that we live in a world with risk. You can put an armed guard at a school, but what happens when the shooter gets on the bus? Likewise, you can ban assault rifles and the guy just builds a bomb. As hard as it might seem, the gun laws in this country DO work. Our kids ARE safe. Our schools ARE safe.

Twenty-six people is enough death — don’t add your civil liberties in among the body count.

Toy Drive Support Appreciated

Dear Editor:

My staff and I would like to thank everyone for donations to our 2012 Annual Toy Drive, which was a huge success because of that support. The true meaning of Christmas became evident upon receiving a generous toy donation from Kegotank Elementary School’s Beta Club. The students were thrilled to know that they could help brighten the spirits of less fortunate children.

Please accept our heartfelt thanks for your donations as we were able to make a positive impact on the children and needy families in Accomack County.

Akomack Sheriff Todd Godwin

Greetings from Colorado

Dear Editor:

I recently received a package which had been cushioned by pages from your publication and, being a newspaper fan, uncrinkled them to see what was happening on the Eastern Shore.

Carlene M. Shore’s letter regarding oyster regulations was both interesting and educational. Her 81-year-old father and his 75-year-old friend are still plying their trade so people like me can enjoy oysters. As a senior myself, it certainly sounds as if an ease in these regulations is little to ask if these oystermen are better able to ply their trade.

Kudos from Colorado to these oystermen for their hard work and longevity!
