Arson Cases Go to Grand Jury

By Linda Cicoira

Probable cause was found Monday in Accomack General District Court to certify charges of arson and conspiracy to a Grand Jury in the cases of Tonya Susan Bundick and Charles Robert Smith III, also known as Charlie Applegate.

Authorities believe the couple deliberately set more than 70 fires in Accomack between November 2012 and April of this year. No new charges were brought at the hearing, but an official said more are likely to come via indictments. The Grand Jury met earlier this month and will convene again in August.

“The strongest circumstantial evidence is that he got out of the mini-van for no reason in the middle of nowhere,” said Judge Gordon Vincent. “And her statement that she didn’t know what he was doing is not very credible.”

Each defendant faces one charge of arson in connection with a fire at an unoccupied house on Airport Drive in Melfa on April 1 and one charge of conspiracy to commit that blaze.

Defense lawyer Carl Bundick, who represents Smith, argued Monday that Commonwealth’s Attorney Gary Agar failed to show malice and failed to

Northampton Supervisors OK Budget for Fiscal Year Starting July 1

By Ron West

The Northampton County Board of Supervisors completed work on the county’s FY2014 budget Tuesday.

Supervisor Rick Hubbard proposed reducing the tax rate to eliminate the anticipated 1 percent increase ($143,997) in tax receipts resulting from the most recent property re-assessment. While most of the supervisors agreed with the concept, there was a brief discussion as to where to make the adjustment. None wanted to cut the proposed budget, so eventually they decided to use a portion of the funds saved from the payoff of the loan for the county’s two elementary schools.

The budget reduction changes the equalized real-estate tax rate from 68 cents per $100 of valuation to 67.28 cents per $100. The board voted unanimously to support the amended FY2014 budget of $42.9 million.

In other business, the board supported a request by Betty Bell Badger and John Marshall for subdivision of a farm within the Sheps End Agricultural and Forestal District (AFD). The property is west of Birdsnest and has been in the Badger family and under cultivation for over 70 years. Badger noted that the plan is to continue farming the land. The change was requested to equalize the holding between the two property owners by just redrawing the parcel lines slightly to even out the value of the two portions.

The board voted 4-0-1 to accept the bids for properties in the county that had gone to auction for outstanding taxes. Bennett abstained from the vote as he had bid on at least one of the parcels.

In a final action of the evening, the board re-appointed Martina Coker to the county’s Planning Commission. Following the session, several supervisors noted that it has been difficult to find county residents to offer to serve on various boards and commissions.

Since another Planning Commission member’s term ended June 30, the supervisors are seeking District 4 residents interested in the post.
Dear Senator Ralph S. Northam:

My previous correspondences (dozens of letters of which I have copies) have accomplished nothing. I have always voted for you, not because I know you, but because Northam has always been a very honorable family name.

I see you are running for Lieutenant Governor, so I will try again to right a wrong. My last letter to every member of the General Assembly cost me nearly two hundred dollars to mail, and for the first time (over the years I have written several such letters) I cannot remember receiving one reply.

Not only has a resident of Pennsylvania caused the assessment of my non-waterfront property to be increased by 400%, but although his waterfront property was purchased in 2007 for $2.2 million, its 2011 assessment was $830,900 and has actually been decreased to $799,400. If this is not enough, his entire 82 acre farm with over 1500 feet of high-banked waterfront on deep water is in an Agricultural and Forestal District, which greatly reduces his tax burden on this property. By default, this increases the tax burden of those of us who are Virginia residents. This kind of thing appears to be happening all over Virginia.

Since nothing had changed about my land in the 2007 assessment, I was shocked that the assessment was raised by nearly 400%. When I appealed that assessment to the Board of Equalization is when I learned the reason for the increase (the sale of the adjoining property). I then resubmitted my appeal to the Board of Equalization, who again denied my appeal. RECEIPT OF THIS DENIAL WAS THE FIRST TIME I REALIZED THAT THE VERY SAME PEOPLE ON THE BOARD OF THE FIRST APPEAL WERE ON THE BOARD OF THE SECOND APPEAL.

AT THE VERY LEAST, the following law changes should be made:

1. Limit ownership of Agricultural and Forestal Districts to residents of Virginia (if not to the county of residence).
2. Insure that property is assessed at least at the selling price.
3. Require that no members of a Board of Equalization rule more than once on an appeal.

I have all of the documents and photographs referred to in this matter, and can produce them if needed.

This same “package” is being sent to Delegate Lewis.

Sincerely,
John Davis Drewer
CDR, USCG-Ret.

DEAR CITIZENS: The above letter was sent by certified, return receipt requested mail to Senator Northam at his Norfolk address; it was returned to me “unclaimed”. I put it in another envelope and sent it (again certified) to his Painter address; it was again returned to me “unclaimed”. I am hoping he will read it here. My e-mail address is: pjdrewever@verizon.net and my phone number is 757-414-3869. If you are proud to be an American, I invite you to help correct this tax inequity.

Incidentally, Delegate Lewis did reply to the letter, saying only “yours is the only communication I have received about this”.

John Drewer

Supervisors OK Emergency Pay Increase for Themselves

By Linda Cicoira

Accomack supervisors will get some extra cash in the future if things go according to plan. They voted to give themselves a salary increase Wednesday.

The Board of Supervisors voted 7-2 in favor of an emergency ordinance to allow each of them to start making $210 more per year, beginning in August. It is the first hike since 1990. Supervisors are paid $7,000 annually. The chairman makes $8,808 and vice chairman brings in $8,200.

County Attorney Mark Taylor said that without the emergency action, a vote would have been needed before the end of the month or the board would have had to wait until next year for more money. A public hearing on the issue will be held July 17. A vote is scheduled to follow.

Supervisors Wanda Thornton and Robert Crockett voted against the raises, and, respectively, brought Wolff and Sheriff Kay Lewis and Reneta Major to his side. Wolff motioned for the 3 percent increase, but that vote failed $350 each. He could accept. Wolff agreed and was ready with the figure of $350 each. He changed his motion to reflect the additional increase, but that vote failed 4-5, with Hart, Major, Chesser, Crockett and Thornton opposed.

“I see Mrs. Gordy’s point but I can’t go higher than the employees” who got a 3 percent raise, said Chesser. Major was opposed for the same reason.

Public Works Director Stewart Hall recommended the supervisors approve the low bid of approximately $2.2 million from T&K Construction, LLC of Alabama for closure of the landfill at Bobtown. The company comes highly recommended, Hall said. Crockett noted the bid was also $1 million lower than the next lowest proposal.

The board also:
•nixed a request for $10,849 that would enable the extension service to make a full-time position for a part-time worker;
•discussed a state plan to stop maintaining or erecting road signs warning drivers to slow down for children and voted unanimously to send a letter to the Virginia Department of Transportation with its concerns;
•voted to spend $34,640 in contingencies to meet the shortfall for a $530,000 addition to the Fire Training Center;
•approved a conditional-use permit allowing Emmett Taylor to develop a 19-acre borrow pit near the intersection of Atlantic and Taylor Farm roads less than a mile south of Atlantic. The Planning Commission recommended approval of the permit. No one from the public spoke at the public hearing held just before the vote.

What do local tourism and fractions have in common? Officials are splitting the Eastern Shore in half over whether Accomack or Northampton should pay a third.

The two counties have an old plan to fund the joint Tourism Commission. But in more recent times, Northampton officials say Accomack isn’t paying its fair share of two-thirds. The ratio is common for many dual projects based on population. Accomack has twice the people.

But in this case, Accomack leaders contend Northampton is trying to change the rules unfairly.

The debate came up at the Accomack Board of Supervisors meeting Wednesday. No one from the commission was in attendance. To add to the dilemma, the commission is looking for a new executive director. The current one, David Schulte, is leaving for a job in Portsmouth next week.

Accomack County Administrator Steve Miner suggested a “better stated and fresh resolution” for funding the commission instead of grappling to fix the old formula.

“I do want this straightened out,” said Accomack Supervisor Laura Belle Gordy, who is on a committee to solve the problem. “We’re being roasted, almost,” she added.

“It’s an exciting time for us, and in thanks for your support we have expanded our bar service. The Island House is proud to announce the unveiling of our deck bar! Enjoy food & drink specials, corn hole, a new outdoor audio system, a great late night menu from 9pm-1am all summer long & the best view The Shore has to offer.

picks up the burden on so many other issues. For example, he said, Accomack pays for the fire-training academy. Northampton benefits but does not help fund it. Crockett said Accomack pays for two-thirds of animal control, runs the facility and provides backup workers through the sheriff’s department,” Crockett noted.

“Northampton County increased funding (for tourism) and now wants us to go two-thirds/one-third based on their increase,” complained Supervisor Ron Wolf.

“I think that’s exactly what happened,” said Miner. “I see no obligation for Accomack based on action by Northampton.”

“I support the Tourism Commission,” said Supervisor Wanda Thornton. “But I’m not willing to give two-thirds of the money.”

Supervisor Reneta Major said it all started with the transient-occupancy tax, logo and hiring of the first director.

“They removed funding from regional economic development at that time,” Miner reported. Gordy noted there was a rift over how many representatives each county had based on the funding portions.

“I think our partnership is valuable,” Miner continued. “But partnerships aren’t always easy … we need an agreement on the rules.”

Chairman Donald Hart suggested he, the two county administrators and Northampton Chairman Willie Ran-

Schulte recently told Northampton officials that without the county’s additional money, the visitors’ center there would be forced to close and much of the commission’s advertising would be halted.

Schulte reported tourism annually brings $66.5 million to Northampton. Accomack reaps nearly $160 million a year, he added.

In other business, Accomack supervisors voiced concern about the Coast Guard’s plan to remove navigation aids along Virginia’s Inside Passage (see sidebar at left).

Supervisor Jack Gray said the biggest danger would occur when day markers are cut off poles, leaving boaters unable to see the underwater hazards. “They could rip the bottom off a boat,” said Gray. “Let them know not only do we oppose; it’s just crazy.”

Public Works Director Stewart Hall said the markers have already been cut behind Metompkin Island. “People wrapped a crab pot around” to warn others, he said.

“It’s a crime,” said Supervisor Ron Wolff. While the Coast Guard promotes boating safety, “This goes against the face. It makes absolutely no sense.”

The waterways have been closed for years due to shoaling conditions, limited surveys and a lack of funds to dredge the passage.

The Coast Guard is soliciting comments on the proposal to disestablish the navigational aids along approximately 100 miles of the Virginia Inside Passage from Chincoteague to the northwest side of Fisherman Island during the next two months.

A public notice was placed in local newspapers and posted on the Virginia’s Inside Passage Facebook page. The notice requests comments be received by Aug. 5. Northampton Circuit Court

A former fourth-grade Occhannock Elementary School teacher was sentenced to 20 years in prison Monday in Northampton Circuit Court for aggravated sexual battery of a 5-year-old family friend last year.

Aaron Daniel Siegrist, 37, of Wilkins Drive in Cape Charles took the witness stand to apologize for molesting the little girl and betraying her parents by committing the act.

Siegrist said if he could tell the child anything, “I’d try to explain to her it’s not her fault what happened. She did the right thing” by telling. “I hope she’ll forget about everything. I read that she prayed for me even though what I’ve done is worse than horrible. … I realize it affected their whole family. … I do hope that they can forgive me somehow, some way.” The jail trustee asked the court to show him “as much mercy as you can.”

Judge W. Revell Lewis III, who set the sentence, suspended a decade of it. The suspension could be revoked for misbehavior any time. He was put on indefinite probation.

“This was something that was planned,” said Lewis. “There is nothing I can do today to make this as if it never happened.” Still, the judge said, “We can learn from children.” He read from a statement that told of the victim’s Thanksgiving prayer. “God bless Mr. Siegrist and his sick brain,” she was quoted as saying. “I hope he feels better and comes home to his family.”

Dr. Jeffrey Ward, a clinical psychologist certified to treat sex offenders, said Siegrist’s attraction to prepubescent girls can be managed but not cured. Since treatment will have a positive effect,” Ward said. “Siegrist and his sick brain,” she was quoted as saying. “I think anybody who knows him was completely

Jones contended that Siegrist changed his career to teaching to be in contact with young girls and is delusional about his actions. “He didn’t think his victim would know what he was doing,” Jones said. “The temptation is not going to go away.”

“Graphic” photos of another girl about the same age as the victim were confiscated from the defendant’s home. Jennifer Siegrist, a photographer and the defendant’s wife, testified that she took the pictures. But an investigator said Mrs. Siegrist originally told him if she had taken the photos, she would have corrected red eye and would have cleared a cluttered counter shown in the pictures. The photos were on a computer that wasn’t working and was stored in the attic, according to testimony.

“I think anybody who knows him was complete-ley shocked” by the incident, said Mrs. Siegrist, adding that she had her children evaluated at Children’s Hospital of the King’s Daughters because she promised the victim’s mother she would do so. Mrs. Siegrist said she trusts her husband around her children and wants him home.

The crime occurred on Sept. 1, 2012, at the Siegrists’ home. The defendant’s wife and two daughters, ages 3 and 5, also were there. The three girls were sleeping on the living-room floor when, the victim told investigators, “Mr. Aaron” approached her, pulled down her underpants and touched her inappropriately.

“It hurt but she did not yell out because Mrs. Siegrist did not like yelling in the house,” Jones previously said the child told interviewers who specialize in questioning abused children. The prosecutor said sperm was found on the girl’s underwear. “Any explanation is horrifying,” Jones added.

Siegrist also will be prohibited from being closer than 100 feet of a school or daycare facility. And he must register periodically as a sex offender.

Thomas Northam of Accomack served as defense attorney.

Accomack Circuit Court
A Parksley man was convicted last week in Accomack Circuit Court on charges involving the maiming of his cousin, James Tull on Jan. 28, 2012.

Shontel Devon Johnson, 29, of Lankford Highway pleaded not guilty to attempted robbery, malicious maiming and two counts of using a firearm in those felonies. A presentence report was ordered and Johnson was remanded to jail.

Northampton District Court
A felony charge was reduced to a misdemeanor in the case of Brenda Washington, 49, of Debra Lane in New Church, initially accused of passing a forged check on Aug. 31, 2012.

Washington instead was convicted in Accomack General District Court of the misdemeanor, making a false statement to obtain property. She was sentenced to 64 days in jail, with all but four days suspended, and was fined $150.

Accomack Grand Jury
Quiet indictments involving charges against two county residents and brought by an Accomack Grand Jury were made public Tuesday.

Christopher Monfiston, 21, of Big Pine Road in Belle Haven was indicted on counts of maliciously shooting Clarence Wilson, use of a firearm in the alleged shooting and participating in a criminal act while actively being a member of a street gang. Monfiston is being held in Accomack Jail without bond. He was indicted June 3 and arrested June 7. Investigator C.A. McPherson of Accomack County Sheriff’s Office (ACSO) provided information to the jury.

The incident allegedly occurred on March 17 at Pine Ridge Trailer Park near Melfa. According to Sheriff Todd Godwin, an investigation determined “an altercation had occurred between several individuals, resulting in multiple gunshots being fired.”

Ray Ellis Townsend, 55, of Townsend Lane in Atlantic was indicted on a count of distributing cocaine on Dec. 4, 2012. Townsend is being held without bond. Lee also gave information in this case.

Eastern Shore Drug Task Force
The ESDTF is continuing to search for six others that were indicted earlier this month. They are:

• Harry Earl Pinkard, also known as Peaches, 45, of New Church, on a count of possession of cocaine;
• James Smith, 28, of Horntown, on two counts distribution of cocaine and one count of distribution of heroin;
• Keon Lamar Townsend, 31, and Royston (Poogie) Antonio Townsend, 40, both of Horntown, on three counts each of distributing heroin;
• William Nelson, 38, of Painter, on a count of distribution of cocaine;
• Upshur Ayres, also known as Bink, 25, of Onancock, on two counts of distributing cocaine.

Anyone with information about the whereabouts of these men is asked to call the ESDTF at 414-0746 or ACSO at 787-1131.

U.S. Court of Appeals
Hendrick Townsend, the Accomack man who says racial slurs were made to him by county officials trying to keep him from gaining building permits, has filed an appeal regarding the recent dismissal of his $911 billion lawsuit.

Now he is seeking to get $5.4 million in damages, expenses and attorney fees, as well as ownership of the property for which he was seeking the permits.

Townsend alleged the incidents occurred from June to September 2008 and involved a house on Saxis Road in Temperanceville he was leasing to own. He claimed he also was treated unfairly in regards to property in Horntown and was subjected to police brutality.

The officials and other Accomack workers have denied the charges.

The self-described physically and mentally disabled black man offered a new proposal to the former mortgage holder’s attorney with a June 24 deadline for acceptance. He wants the property owner to pay him $400,000 and give him the property.

Townsend has appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Smith Again Challenges Lewis for State Office

Special Town Elections Also Slated for November

By Linda Cicoira

John W. Smith Jr. is planning to unseat Del. Lynwood W. Lewis Jr. and this time he says he will stay in the race until the end.

Smith qualified with the State Board of Elections to be on the ballot for the 100th Legislative District, as has Lewis. Using the platform of “Equal Rights for Everyone,” the 64-year-old Hallwood man is running as an Independent.

In 2009, Smith sought the two-year term but bowed out of the race to support the Republican candidate, Melody Scalley. “Last time the best chance to defeat Lynwood was to have (only) one person run against him,” Smith said Tuesday.

“As a state delegate, I will be available to listen to your concerns and will do all in my power to resolve your concerns,” Smith continued. “I will legislate for equal rights and privileges for everyone. As a state delegate, I will do all in my power to prevent continuous selective malicious prosecutions by small towns of select individuals like myself, who was prosecuted 12 times by Hallwood.”

“I am not a member of the ‘Good Old Boys’ that I have heard about for decades,” Smith added. “I simply believe in equal rights for everyone. If one individual is permitted a certain right, then all others have that same right. It is as simple as that; equal rights for everyone.”

In 2009, with voter turnout about 40 percent, Lewis retained his seat. He garnered about 64 percent of the ballots, 8,400 votes. Scalley got 4,578. Smith, who didn’t withdraw until it was too late to have his name removed from the ballot, got 140 votes, 1.06 percent.

Also in the November General Election, Interim Mayor Jack Pierson will seek election as mayor of Onley. Susan Rillo is seeking an empty council seat in the town. Pierson took the position after former Mayor Billye D. Custis resigned.

Acting Wachapreague Mayor Fred M. Janci Jr. qualified for election to that town’s top post. Interim Councilman Stuart P. Bell of Wachapreague also will be on the ballot to retain his seat on a permanent basis. Both positions became available after differences of opinion caused several town officials to step down in the Little City by the Sea.
New Church Volunteer Fire and Rescue Company will host its annual Independence Day Celebration Sunday, June 30, from 4 to 9:30 p.m. The event will feature rides, games and food, including oyster fritters, hamburgers, pizza, hot dogs, and french fries.

There will be a kids’ tractor pull during the first half of the celebration and an auction during the second half. Fireworks will end the event at approximately 9 p.m.

Locations Announced for Coupon Application

The Virginia Department for the Aging will be providing coupons to seniors whose income is below 150 percent of the poverty level. The coupons can be exchanged for fresh fruits and vegetables at authorized roadside stands. Participants must be 60 or over and will be able to receive $40 per individual.

One form of identification and household income will be requested at the time of application. Coupons will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis.

Applications will be taken:
• June 25 from 9 to 11 a.m. at Antioch Baptist Church in Treherneville;
• June 26 from 9 to 11:30 a.m. at Accomack Head Start;

Habitat Event Next Weekend Offers Tour of Gardens in Several Local Communities

All the properties on the Summer 2013 Habitat for Humanity Garden Tour set for Saturday, June 29, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., have something in common: The homeowners like to grow and prepare good food, from artfully-arranged vegetable gardens to fruit and nut trees, berry patches and hens for eggs.

The gardens are centrally located in Accomack County near Melfa, Onancock, Tasley, Accomac and Greenbush. There are four home gardens and a community vegetable garden adjacent to the Tasley Foodbank. The Eastern Shore Resource Conservation and Development Council, along with Crop specialists from the Eastern Shore Agricultural Research and Extension Center, are working with the Foodbank to teach the economic value of growing your own produce and of a healthy lifestyle. This project is supported by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Specialty Crop block grant program.

In Accomac, Perennial Roots farm is dedicated to growing plants without chemicals or artificial fertilizers. Steward Lundy and Natalie McGill raise heritage animals on pasture, feeding them as little grain as possible. They grow fruits, vegetables and flowers and have more than a dozen breeds of poultry, also raising the endangered Silver Fox rabbit. They cultivate a wide range of gourmet and medicinal mushrooms and have 12 beehives.

Sycamore Farm in Greenbush, owned by Nancy and Albert Duncan, includes the owners’ collection of outbuildings, including a chickenhouse and a bamboo palapa built by Albert. There are many nut and fruit trees, including chestnut trees from modern varieties and some transplanted from other parts of the Shore. They grow small fruits, berries, vegetables, and flowers, and have planted hundreds of native trees.

Janet and Haydon Rochester’s vegetable garden is on King Street in Onancock. The owners like having vegetables and varieties not generally available here. Wire fencing is used both to support some plants and to keep out hungry rabbits.

The southernmost garden belongs to Laura and Rhudy Naylor. Theirs is the first house north of Pungoteague school, a yellow farmhouse on Bobtown Road. They have flowers, herbs and vegetables in raised beds for intensive plot gardening for better weed control. They raise chickens, guineas, ducks and turkeys.

Tickets for the Garden Tour are $15. They are available at the Book Bin, BB&T Bank, Shore Bank, Habitat Restore, and each of the gardens.

RSMH Earns Top Safety Rating

Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital received an “A” rating for safety in The Leapfrog Group's annual Hospital Safety Score report.

The survey is designed to educate healthcare consumers about safety when choosing a hospital and to encourage hospitals to make safety a priority. The Leapfrog Group is a nonprofit organization that strives to improve hospital safety, quality and affordability by promoting transparency.

“We’re excited to receive an A, and we are focused every day on maintaining quality and ensuring patient safety at our hospital,” said Dr. Susan McDrews, administrator at Riverside Shore Memorial. “This report shows patients that Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital makes safety a priority. Patients can rest assured knowing that our hospital provides the highest level of care based on national quality standards.”

About 31 percent of the 2,514 hospitals included in the report earned an A.

Hospitals are graded based on 26 measures using data reported to The Leapfrog Group or to the annual American Hospital Association survey. This year’s safety grade is based on AHA’s 2011 survey.

Scores are based on incidence of preventable medical errors, injuries, accidents and infections.

Woman Claims Stranger Allowed To Sign Child Out of Pungoteague Elementary

By Linda Cicoira

Accomack Schools is investigating a June 14 incident in which a third-grade student was driven home from Pungoteague Elementary School by an unauthorized person.

Assistant Superintendent Dr. Rhonda Hall said Tuesday night that the incident has become a personnel matter and therefore she cannot comment.

The Keller woman telling this story is the girl’s grandmother, but said she has custody of the 9-year-old, whom she is raising as her daughter. Upon advice of her attorney, the woman asked that her own identity not be disclosed.

The woman said she was waiting for her child to get off the bus last Friday afternoon when the bus passed the house without stopping. She said she thought there must be a sick child on the bus “who had to get off first” and the bus would circle back around. But that didn’t happen.

Instead, “five minutes after the bus went by” at about 3:45 p.m., “I’m standing there on the porch” and “a white car pulls up” with a “stranger” at the wheel and her daughter gets out. “I didn’t know the woman (driving) from Adam,” the woman said. “I did not meet her until she pulled up in my yard with my child in her car.”

The driver explained that she has a child in the same class as the Keller girl who asked for a ride. The driver said she was allowed to sign both students out and was never questioned by a school worker about it.

The school had been given the names of three relatives who are permitted to pick up the child. The driver “could have been a pervert or a child molester,” she said.

“I want something done about this,” the woman added. “You don’t let a stranger take a child out of the school. Your children are supposed to be safe when they go to school,” she continued. “It was very careless on their part. … They are investigating it. They have no explanation. None.”

“I have had nightmares every night since this happened,” the woman said. “I wake up screaming. This has really put me through a stress test.”

In the meantime, she “reprimanded” her child was “quite highly” for getting in the vehicle.

“The school has a criteria to meet,” the woman said. “When she gets on the school bus (in the morning,) I expect her to be on the school bus to come home.”

She said the principal apologized for the incident and said it wouldn’t happen again. “I can guarantee you it will never happen again,” the woman said. “I’m not going to go away. I’m not going to let it be ignored.”

The Department of Defense’s Office of Economic Adjustment (OEA) recently partnered with Accomack County to begin development of a Joint Land Use Study (JLUS).

The JLUS program promotes cooperative planning among local military installations and their surrounding communities.

The goal of the Accomack County/Wallops Island JLUS is to develop a strategic plan that identifies specific actions that promote compatible land-use development patterns mutually beneficial to the installation and its mission, the county and towns, and all concerned citizens.

The JLUS effort is anticipated to take approximately one year, with an estimated completion date of mid-March 2014. Throughout the JLUS process, a project team will identify individuals and organizations with whom to discuss planning and land use in Accomack County.

These potential stakeholders include county officials; military and other Wallops Island installation officials; town officials; local, regional, and state agency personnel; public landowners; community business owners; and private land owners.

Anyone with an interest in the development of the study is encouraged to participate. To facilitate participation, three public meetings will be conducted. These open house meetings will be casual in nature and provide opportunities for community input and involvement. Public comments and questions will be encouraged.

Additionally, a website has been established to provide the community with the latest information, meeting announcements, and an additional opportunity to submit comments or seek answers at any time throughout the study process.

The first public open house will be held Thursday, June 27, from 4 to 7 p.m. at the NASA Visitor Center on Wallops Island.

Informational brochures containing contact information and additional details about the Accomack County JLUS project can be found at many public offices throughout the county.

For more information, visit website www.AccomackCoJLUS.com or e-mail JLUS@co.accomack.va.us or call 757-655-1256.
Emeralds, Padparadscha Sapphires, Blue & Pink Sapphires, Tanzanite, show that the alleged crimes occurred in Accomack County. He further said none of the witnesses could positively identify Smith as the man who ran over to the house and set it ablaze.

Two officers testified that they were in a tent about 40 to 50 yards away from the house when a mini-van drove up and a passenger got out and ran behind the house. Trooper Troy Johnson said that with night-vision glasses, he “observed him stuffing some material into the door. (He) proceeded to light it. It took him three or four times. As soon as it flamed up good … he was in a dead run back to Airport Drive. The mini-van pulled up again. It was almost as soon as his foot hit the road (that) the van stopped and he was in the door.”

Agar said the officer watched the van go down the road until a police cruiser caught up to it. The prosecutor disregarded the statement Tonya Bundick made to authorities that she was unaware of what her fiancé was up to until after she was detained. “You have to live somewhere on the planet Pluto not to know what was going on at this point” with all the arsons that had been set, Agar said. Smith “confessed to all of it. Tonya Bundick was just caught in the act … arson is just plain a malicious crime. Conspiracy,” he added, “is how well they constructed their act together.”

Tonya Bundick’s lawyer, Shannon Dunham, argued that Smith’s statements should not be used to incriminate her client. The judge agreed, but admitted their act together.”

Smith has confessed to setting 52 of the fires, according to court records. He told police that Bundick set 15 blazes. In the transcript, Smith said he used a rag with no accelerant to set the fires. He said rumors about floorboards being rigged to hurt firefighters weren’t true.

During the hearing, the two defendants sat on the far side of each other with their attorneys between them. She sported a new hairdo, a cap of cornrow braids with what appeared to be a ponytail pulled up at the back of her head. Both were wearing white jail-issued jump suits and were chained at the ankles and wrists. Smith’s hair was still short, but longer than the crew cut he had at his bond hearing weeks ago.

The defendants were quickly taken back to jail before reporters could get outside to photograph them. Restrictions on the number of cameras in the courtroom were announced in an order posted inside the courthouse. Vincent didn’t limit the number of cameras at previous hearings.

Both defendants are being held in Accomack Jail without bond. Sheriff Todd Godwin said Bundick and Smith have had no interaction since they were arrested April 1.

When police converged on the mini-van that night, Smith jumped out of the vehicle, sparking concern that he would run, so officers approached with guns drawn, they said. Smith put his hands up and both he and Bundick were detained without incident, according to testimony.

Smith was considered an inactive member of Tasley Volunteer Fire Company for several years.

Tyler Webb Gets Save in First Game as a Pro

On Monday night in the Big Apple, Tyler Webb struck out the final batter he faced to earn his first save as a Yankee.

No, we are not talking about those Yankees, but it was the start of a pro career that had to be a thrill for someone who dreamed of playing in the big leagues since he was a child growing up in Nassawadox.

This was the Staten Island Yankees, who played their season opener Monday night at Richmond County Bank Park in New York City in front of 6,711 fans. And when it came to the ninth inning with the homestand holding a one-run lead, the manager called on the 6-foot, 6-inch Webb to close out the game for a 2-1 win for the Yankees.

As he did regularly in his stellar four-year college season at the University of South Carolina, Webb got the job done with a walk, no hits and that final strikeout to end the game.

The manager presented Webb with the scorecard from the game. “That was pretty neat,” said Webb Tuesday morning on his second day as a pro, facing a stretch where his Yankees will play 29 games in 29 days.

Although Webb had played in three College World Series without allowing an earned run and recorded 17 saves this season at USC, getting a save in your first game as a pro is about as good as it gets.

Not that you could get Webb to say much about it on Tuesday when I talked to him shortly before 10 a.m. just before he was to start preparations for a game that night across town at the Brooklyn Cyclones, another team in the Penn League, a Short Season Class A League.

Webb is as understated and humble as any athlete I have ever interviewed.

“Twas probably a little more nervous because it was the first time in a new situation, but baseball is baseball. I try to keep the same mind-set I had all season pitching in college,” said Webb, who uses a change-up, slider and curve in addition to his fastball, which has been clocked in the low 90s.

It has been a whirlwind for Webb, who signed with the Yankees last Friday after concluding his collegiate career in the Super Regional the previous weekend.

A 10th-round draft pick by the Yankees, Webb knew he did not have the leverage in negotiations enjoyed by drafted high-school players or college underclassmen who always could return to school As a college senior, it was either sign or get a real job.

“The pay is not all that great at the minor league level, but you are getting paid to play baseball. And there’s nothing wrong with that,” said Webb, who had no favorite team growing up, although he often watched the Atlanta Braves.

“I wouldn’t trade my college experience for anything,” said Webb, who was drafted as a sophomore in college by Cincinnati but opted to stay in college, where he was a vital member of two national college championship teams and a runner-up squad.

He plans to return to Columbia, S.C. — after the 75-game season ends in early September — to complete a final semester to get his degree in retail management. Plans could change if he gets called up to a higher league or advances through the ranks.

That usually takes time, however. There is not much idle time now. Webb had to report on Tuesday at 10 a.m. for weightlifting, then report to the park at noon for game planning with the pitching coaches before loosening up and completing other preparations prior to a 7 p.m. game start. It can be late at night before he finally can retire to bed, then it’s up at 9 a.m. and the same routine starts again.

Most of the travel is in the northeast, with the closest venue to the Eastern Shore being Aberdeen, Md., at Ripken Stadium.

Webb’s parents, who missed only four or five home series in Columbia during Webb’s career and spent almost two weeks in Omaha, Neb., each summer at the College World Series, will probably not visit as much now their son is a pro.

“The one thing I can never express enough is how much my parents have done for me,” said Webb, who had Tommy John surgery in high school. “They have been there for me every step of the way, and I will never be able to thank them enough,” added Webb, the oldest of Kirk and Kristen Webb’s four children.

“Things have worked out pretty well for me since my arm injury, but I owe a lot to all the support I received from my parents, grandparents and all the friends I have on the Shore,” said Webb, who has drawn raves from his coaches as being “a special kid” for his temperament, not just his ability to play baseball.

And now he does it for a living — almost every kid’s dream.
Nandua’s Austin Heenan
First-Team Baseball All-State

Austin Heenan of Nandua has been named to the first team Group A All-State baseball team selected by Virginia coaches. Heenan was tabbed as a pitcher.

Heenan, a senior who will pitch at VMI next season, had a 0.51 ERA with 90 strikeouts in 40 innings, not allowing any runs during the regular season. Also named to the All-District team as a first baseman, Heenan hit .463 this season with three home runs.

“Austin had a great year on the mound for us,” said Nandua coach Luke Brankley. “He is the guy you want to give the ball to in big games. I know he will have a big impact on the VMI baseball program, and VMI is lucky to get him.”

Curtis Taylor and Noah Zember made second team All-State while Ryan Haynie received honorable mention. All played for Nandua.

Taylor, a junior who has committed to the University of South Carolina as a catcher, hit .552, with a district-high eight home runs and 40 RBIs this season.

Zember, a senior outfielder, hit .462 with seven doubles, two triples and 19 RBIs. Haynie was named as a shortstop and hit .500. The junior also pitched well in spot duty for the Warriors.

Flounder Improving on Seaside, Cobia Heating Up on Bayside

Don’s Tackle Shop in Wachapreague reports seaside flounder fishermen scored well all week, weather permitting, around inlet areas of local waters. The incoming tides brought cooler and cleaner waters inside. This was the best week of the year for the local anglers and charter-boat fleet, according to Don Varney. Tourists in rental boats scored on flatfish across the channel from the old Coast Guard Station. Sand mullet are arriving on the seaside, with a few scattered croaker also being reported.

Offshore boats that headed south of the Norfolk Canyon found a few Yellowfin Tuna and Dolphin. Capt. Gary Rise of “Backwater Adventures” found some nice sea bass on the inshore wrecks, and had two good days flounder fishing inside this week.

Bayside anglers are still enjoying the bounty of this year’s speckled trout. Spring rockfish season has closed. Sand mullet in big numbers are on the sand bars and channels. Redfish are moving north on our side of the shore, with fish showing as far north as Nassawadox Creek.

Chris’ Bait and Tackle in Capeville says cobia fishing is heating up. Some boats reported catches of three fish recently.

The red-drum bite has been good at Fisherman’s Island at night. Spade fish are starting to show at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel pilings. Spadefish should start to appear around Plantation Light soon.

Sea mullets have been awesome. Anglers are catching them by the cooler full around Fisherman’s Island, Lattimer Shoals and the mouth of Cape Charles Harbor.

Croaker and sea mullets also have started to show out of Oyster. Flounder limits are starting to be reported as water clarity improves. There have been some nice catches out of Cape Charles, The Ditch and Oyster.
American Legion Post Takes Group Fishing on Local Waters

On June 9, American Legion Post 56 in Cheriton hosted a fishing trip for 25 members of the Freedom Hunters and their family members and volunteers. The group, accompanied by five members of Post 56, had a fun day aboard the Miss Jennifer, whose Captain Ray Cardone and crew provided service to the group.

All organizations from the Post, including the auxiliary and Sons of the American Legion, contributed by hosting a breakfast and dinner at the Post, along with a box lunch and drinks aboard the vessel. Special thanks to Herb Konrad and an anonymous donor who helped make the day possible.

Freedom Hunters is a 501(c)3 Military Outreach program under Licking River Outfitters. They are dedicated to honoring those who protect our freedoms. Their program takes active duty, wounded, Gold Star and families of the deployed on hunting and fishing trips to relax and recoup. Their vision is to recognize, thank and extend appreciation to all members of the military and their families.

Youth Croaker Fishing Tourney Set

Don’s Tackle Shop in Wachapreague has announced that a Youth Croaker Fishing Tournament will be held from Friday, July 26, to Friday, Aug. 9.

The Awards Ceremony and Picnic will be held Saturday, Aug. 10, from 2 to 3 p.m. at Don’s Tackle Shop. Winners must be present to win. The deadline to register is Thursday, July 2, at 5 p.m.

All proceeds will be donated to the Boys and Girls Club of the Eastern Shore.
The Great Bay Run in Cape Charles took place Saturday. Both a 5K and a 1.25-mile fun run/walk were contested in ideal weather. Runners enjoyed post-race refreshments, courtesy of Cape Charles Yacht Club and Hook-U-Up Gourmet. A total of 128 runners competed.

The overall 5K winner on the men’s side was Van Lewin, a Broadwater alumus, in 18:15. Lewin is currently competing for Christopher Newport University in both cross country and track. The women’s race was won by Samantha Sawyer of Indian Trail, N.C., in 23:14.

The 1.25 mile division was won by Jackson Rose and Michaux Tankard, both middle-school students at Broadwater Academy.

For photos, go to the race’s Facebook album at www.facebook.com/media/set/?set=a.133082623556799.1073741832.104910053040723&type=1

The race was co-directed by Eric Hack, a teacher and cross country/track and field coach at Broadwater Academy; and Eva Noonan, an agent at Blue Heron Realty Co. and the assistant coach at Broadwater Academy.

Proceeds will benefit both the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society and the Broadwater Academy cross country and track and field teams.

I'd suggest you give up hunting altogether and spend within those boundaries, then do not bother trying. A lousy shot that you cannot bring down your prey is a mile or more down the road. Their dogs to stay off any property they do not own. Passers Will Be Shot” — so I’d advise hunters and come to light. When I grew up, the signs read “Treslove the wide-open sky and being able to see an entire field of soybeans in a single glance. Those are among the top reasons I always want to live on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. The area is FLAT! The sunsets (and sunrises, which a night owl like me doesn’t witness very often) are fabulous and when there is a breeze, they are even better.

The moon and stars are distant but friendly. And sometimes in a straightaway, one can see an oncoming vehicle that is a mile or more down the road. You have just read the rantings of a claustrophobic woman. I hate confined spaces. When I lived in the Northern Shenandoah Valley, I appreciated the beauty of the mountains, but they seemed kind of close. They were starting to get in my personal space. You know, that imaginary box we all have surrounding our aura.

Now picture me having an MRI (Magnetic Resonance Imaging) in preparation for partial knee replacement. SCARY. The little space (or lack thereof) is the reason a character in “Dark Shadows” asked to be put in a glass coffin with a little doorbell-looking button near her fingers. She wanted a one-way ticket OUT. For those of you who dwell in caves (shudder), “Dark Shadows” was a famous gothic television series with vampires, werewolves, witches, warlocks, time travel and a parallel universe.

I am not going spelunking any time soon. Don’t ask me to crawl under the house. This is one of the reasons I have urged the Accomack Board of Supervisors to move its meetings back to Metomkin Elementary School. One can stretch there. The place has windows. You can’t reach over and touch all four walls.

Anyway, I seem to be headed out to left field with this conversation. (Ah! that is many yards away.) What I’m trying to say is I don’t want to go back in the MRI tube. It’s the hole in the very worst motion picture prison movie ever made.

The first time I needed the imaging was about 15 years ago and my loving husband held on to my foot so I could survive it. The next time, they sent me home and I returned a week later with a stronger relaxation medicine. It was still DIFFICULT.

Now, after getting my knee surgery scheduled and thinking I had the worse part behind me, I learn that the company that makes the artificial knee part didn’t like the image that was taken of my ankle, knee and hip and wants another.

So while you are leisurely reading your newspaper and drinking your favorite beverage, I am strapped onto a cot, sweating and getting ready to be wheeled into a tomb. Will anybody volunteer to take my place? I’d rather be scrubbing toilets or conjugating verbs.

Of course, moaning in this column allows me to alert everyone so they can stock up on get-well cards to mail to me soon. I like the electronic ones, too. I can’t tell you exactly when my surgery will be because I think this setback will delay things.

OK, I know what some of you are thinking. “Why didn’t she go to an open MRI?” Well, I did. That’s why I have to go again. I was told the smaller one is better for this study.

Did I mention that the recent MRI came with a CD of Beatles tunes, including the song “HELP” which was played four times while I took deep breaths and freaked out? Did I sing along? You betcha.

Many claustrophobics remove clothing during attacks, believing it will relieve the symptoms. So if you hear screaming from the north, just shut your windows and turn up the AC. And if you are so inclined, say a little prayer for me. Thanks.
