Onancock Building Collapses; No One Injured

Four workers escaped unharmed from the roof of the former Coffman Fisher building on Market Street in Onancock Tuesday when the backside of the two-story structure gave way and the roof fell in, sending debris to the pavement.

“We had a structural collapse here,” said Chief Adam James of Onancock Volunteer Fire Department, who was in command of response. “All the occupants were evacuated and accounted for safely when we arrived.”

Fire and rescue workers from Onancock, Onley, Tasley, Melfa and Parksley sealed off the surrounding area.

“We evacuated the majority of the businesses from North Street down to about C.D. Marsh just for precautionary purposes,” James said. “Any time you get a structural collapse, you want to make sure the nearby units are all safe.”

John Mills, who bought the building about six months ago, was on the roof when the collapse occurred. He is renovating it for apartments and retail units. The town also lists Mike Connelly as an owner. Mills said European furniture is sold in the warehouse downstairs.

Fencing, orange cones and barrels were put up Tuesday night to keep pedestrians from getting too close.

“We won’t give up,” Mills declared, staring at the structure in dismay. “Just thankful nobody was hurt. It’s a setback. … You can see the building and the potential that it has. … It’s a fabulous building. It’s just been left empty so long.”

Mills said the back part of the building would probably have to be torn down and reconstructed.

The only assisted-living facility for mentally ill residents on the Eastern Shore of Virginia is in jeopardy of closing since the state does not intend to issue it a new license.

According to recently filed documents, G.F. Horne Assisted Living Community (GFH) of 12 Hartman Ave. in Onancock “is currently operating on a one-year license, which expired on April 26, 2015.”

The decision not to renew was made after four inspections “determined that the license is in violation of standards for licensed assisted living facilities … thereby placing the health, safety and welfare of adults at risk.”

The Virginia Department of Social Services (VDSS) issues licenses for such facilities. Until Tuesday, Trinette Emodi was the administrator for GFH. That job has now been taken over by her mother, who with her father owns the facility. Andrea Emodi said Tuesday that problems have been solved and repairs made to bring the facility up to standards. She is appealing the decision and will be granted a hearing on the matter later this month. But she still fears GFH will close and she doesn’t know where some residents will go.

Emodi, who said the residents consider GFH their home, blames VDSS’ lack of concern for the situation.

Emodi said the biggest issue was the sprinkler system. VDSS listed other concerns as well.

“An unannounced focused monitoring inspection was conducted on July 29, 2014 as a follow up to an Intensive Plan of Correction dated May 30, 2014; an unannounced complaint inspection was conducted on Jan. 26, 2015; a second unannounced complaint inspection was conducted March 2, 2015 and an unannounced renewal inspected was conducted over a two-day period on April 21 (and) 22, 2015,” the notice states.

“There were serious, high risk and pervasive violations found in ten of ten areas … and one area of the regulation for background checks,” the notice continues.

VDSS cited among the most serious violations found in July 2014 were incomplete criminal record check results on some employees. Additionally, VDSS found that “one staff person who routinely works alone overnight did not have certification in first-aid and medication administration records for 19 residents were lacking proper documentation.”

In January 2015, inspectors found “no hot water in one of three buildings, no heat in one of three buildings and the propane tank that supplies heat for that building had run out of propane. … The state fire marshal … determined that there were serious life and safety deficiencies including an inoperable sprinkler system in one of three buildings, fire detection systems had been disabled in two of three buildings and the fire suppression system in one of three buildings was disabled. It was determined through observation and documentation that residents were smoking inside and around the doorways of the buildings.” The inspectors also saw residents wrapped in coats and blankets with temperatures around 65 degrees in one building.

“It was also determined that important information pertaining to residents’ assessed needs was not reflected on their individual service plans … other violations identified related to serious physical plant hazards including corroded/painted sprinkler heads throughout all three buildings, dust-clogged air-conditioning vents, missing baseboard molding, gaps around exterior doors that allowed light from outside and cold air to come in the building, missing electrical outlet switch plates, and blistering/peeling/missing exterior siding.”

Last March, the inspection found that previously cited violations still not corrected included “inoperable rusty sprinkler heads (and) fire equipment that had been disabled.”

The VDSS also “determined that the facility does not schedule a sufficient number of direct care staff on duty to care for the mixed population.”

The April inspections found “rusty sprinkler heads in all three buildings; cracked, chipped and missing floor tiles; chipped and peeling paint on walls and ceilings; dirty smudges on walls; high traffic dirt and wax build-up on floors; and exit doors that stuck and would not close properly.”

According to the documentation, “failure to obtain a license … may result in a fine, imprisonment or both.”

Accomack School System Takes To Social Media in a Big Way

By Linda Cicoira

Supporters of Accomack schools have taken to social media to show their approval of the division, according to statistics disclosed Tuesday night at a School Board meeting.

Roberta Baldwin, coordinator of public affairs and strategic partnerships, reported that the school system had 200 Twitter followers when she took her post this year. It now has about 1,090 followers and she has posted 1,800 tweets.

Facebook followers are up to 1,540; 80 percent are women between the ages of 18 and 55, Baldwin said. Posts have reached as many as 16,300. The majority of Facebook fans are from 39 Eastern Shore towns, Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Salisbury, Ocean City and Pocomoke, Md., Richmond, and New Jersey.

Baldwin said that in the last 28 days, the school’s Facebook page has been contacted by citizens of 20 Shore towns; Virginia Beach; Washington, D.C.; Baltimore, Pocomoke and Snow Hill, Md.; Suffolk, Va.; and Lancaster, Pa. There were also visits from relatives of students in England, Arabia, the Dominican Republic and India.

“People are moving into the area,” said Baldwin. “They won’t be calling the School Board office” for information. “Getting our stories out there is a good thing.”

In addition, the division will be “rolling out a new website design” next week, Baldwin said. The change will offer more options, easier access, a calendar of upcoming events and a scrolling marquee.

Parent Janet Turner of Accomac asked the School Board to consider redistricting because of overcrowding at Nandua Middle School.

“This issue has come up before,” she said. “I don’t think it’s been implemented. Turner said the school population has gone up by “easily 150 more students” in the last six or seven years, while Arcadia Middle School is down 100 or so students. This allows Arcadia to offer three more electives because fewer instructors are focused on teaching the basics, Turner said.

“I don’t know what the answers are,” she continued. “I don’t know who is tracking this. I realize there is a lot going on. This affects all of our children and warrants discussion.”

The School Board did not comment. Baldwin later reported that the Chincoteague High School Class of 2015 was offered a total of $515,900 in college scholarships, while Nandua High seniors were offered $1,377,696. Arcadia seniors earned 2.6 million in scholarships and Tangier seniors were offered $5,000.
CHICKEN FARMS & WASTE INCINERATORS

Are these your idea of the future for Northampton County?

The Northampton County Board of Supervisors is preparing to pass a new rezoning ordinance

a vote YES means:

☑️ High-density Commercial Chicken Farms adjacent to every town and zoning district in the county, with chicken houses as close as 500 feet to neighboring residential properties.

☑️ Chicken Waste and Biomass Incinerators with manure storage facilities, 4,000 sq ft structures PLUS the manure storage areas located in any county AG District, as close as 50 feet from property lines. Waste may be imported to these facilities from other counties & states.

☑️ Other waste related uses include collection, processing and treatment of unspecified and imported waste anywhere in AG Districts, as close as 25 feet to neighboring residential properties. Waste Incineration sites in any AG area of the county.

☑️ Planned Unit Developments (PUDs) with NO setbacks and NO restrictions which would allow for virtually ANY industrial or agricultural activity including chicken houses and commercial and poultry waste incinerators anywhere in the county---all with no limits.

During public meetings with county staff, representatives from Tyson and Perdue have stated their goal of opening 50 chicken houses in the county as soon as possible. They have also indicated their desire to import chicken litter and waste products from other areas into Northampton County for storage, treatment, incineration and disposal.

Is this the future you envision for our county? If not, if you are against unchecked development of commercial chicken farms and the introduction of waste storage and incineration facilities in the county, contact your Supervisor and ask him to vote NO on the rezoning proposal.

Officials Respond to Complaints About Animal Control Facility

By Linda Cicoira

The Eastern Shore Regional Animal Control facility on Beacon Road near Melfa has passed state inspections with flying colors for years, according to officials who hailed Sheriff Todd Godwin, the founder and administrator, as doing a great job there.

But those credentials aren’t cutting it with a local resident who petitioned the state to close the establishment because it fails “to provide a comfortable temperature and adequate ventilation for each animal.”

James B. Mason of Exmore complained on June 7 to the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services that “this issue is especially acute during the summer months.” Mason also complained that the animals don’t get “adequate exercise sufficient to maintain normal muscle mass.” He said both issues are requirements of the state code.

In January, “27 dogs were seized, causing the facility to be over-capacity and unable to serve … in caring for dogs that are lost or otherwise in need of temporary shelter,” Mason wrote. “Currently, 34 dogs are being held in 28 kennels … without air-conditioning, outdoor runs, or adequate socialization and stimulation.” Mason claims 10 of the dogs have been there since last August. And a litter of dogs was born there.

Mason complained in his filing that the facility “was not designed and does not operate as a long term … holding these dogs for this amount of time in substandard comfort … constitutes neglect; cruel and inhumane treatment.”

Mason wants the shelter to be shut down and the animals to be transferred to the nearby SPCA and the Virginia Beach Animal Control Facility. Both Accomack and Northampton counties use the local kennel for animals collected by control officers.

“It’s a small kennel,” said Godwin. “Most dogs, they like to get their exercise. This Jim Mason really made it worse for the dogs.” Now the facility is prohibited from exercising the canines in an unloading area and plans to build an exercise area could take several weeks or longer.

“We’re in the process of getting a concrete-floor kennel outside on the south side of the building that would have two runs,” Godwin said.

“How come since 2011 we’ve had near perfect inspections and now… after this petition, they find issues that were there before?” asked Godwin, who added that none of the violations were major. “Like unpainted wood” that was that way for years and during previous inspections.

“The dogs are not suffering,” said Godwin. “We have fans and adequate air flow. Sure, I’d love to have air conditioning. Mr. Mason, if you want to pay for this air conditioning we’d love to have it for the animals.”

Unfortunately, it’s an extraordinary situation for these seized dogs,” which were taken from another local resident. Godwin said a court order calls for the owner to post bond for the dogs by June 4, but the attorney general has suggested waiting an extra month before finding new homes for the canines. That will get the population at the kennel down.

“It would cost $4 or $5 million for a bigger facility,” Godwin added. Meanwhile, local animal lover Andrea Derby has helped raise funds and the sheriff’s office will put up some money for the $6,500 exercise area.

The subject came up during a session of the Accomack Board of Supervisors Wednesday. County Administrator Steve Miner said the shelter gets “excellent reports every year … helps keep sick dogs out of the general population” and protects local residents. He said the department has been working with the local SPCA, which is keeping some animals for the county.

Miner said the facility has been a relief to him as he worked in other regions where there were big problems. “I’m proud of our sheriff,” said the county administrator. “I think he’s been doing a great job.”

Supervisor Laura Belle Gordy was alarmed when she got an email about the complaint. “The sheriff has assured me that everything is fine,” she said.

Former Sheriff and now Supervisor Robert Crockett said, “We’ve been getting a lot of emails from people as far away as Canada. They don’t like putting animals down. That’s a fact of life. You have to put animals down.” Crockett believes the state is yielding to pressure. “What business does the state inspector have to tell SPCA they cannot donate or should not donate the air conditioner?” he rhetorically asked.

“Sheriff Godwin put the operation of our shelter together” when Crockett was sheriff, Crockett said. “He knows that operation better than anyone. The state has more rigid guidelines than the SPCA. The shelter is in very good hands. This is an effort by a lot of people who don’t even live on the Shore. Sheriff Godwin will take care of it.”

A man described as a ranking member of the Bloods was denied bond.

Tyrone (Teddy) Lyncurtis Smith, 22, of Diamond Spring Boulevard near Parksley was taken back to Accomack Jail where he is being held on charges of assault and battery by a mob and willfully participating in a criminal act committed with a street gang. The alleged crimes occurred at the jail.

Smith’s lawyer argued the defendant served his initial terms on May 2 and should be allowed to get bond as a presumption of innocence. His co-defendant is free on $10,000 bond.

Deputy Commonwealth’s Attorney Matthew Brenner argued that Smith gives out hand-written literature about the “theology of the gang.”

“Gangs don’t cease to exist just because they are locked up,” said Brenner. Smith tries “to bully others ... and that’s what happened here. ... Whenever he’s out, the community isn’t safe. ... In fact, other prisoners are not safe when he is locked up.”

“There is nothing to indicate that he would violate any terms of his bond,” said defense lawyer Eric Korslund of Norfolk. “He can be on house arrest. He has one felony before the court and that’s what happened here. ... Whenever he’s out, the community isn’t safe. ... In fact, other prisoners are not safe when he is locked up.”

“I forgive him because I can’t make it to heaven with hatred in my heart.”

Lewis denied Church’s motion to set aside the plea he made last September. Church admitted to him that he committed the sex crimes.

“It was also disclosed that the victim’s brother would have testified that the lawyer both denied the allegations. Dunham said everything was explained thoroughly to Church.

It was also disclosed that the victim’s brother would have testified that Church admitted to him that he committed the sex crimes.

“I sarcastically stated that I had raped her because I was shocked that this case could come up again,” Church said. “I said I may have fondled her in Georgia. I never said I had sex with her.”

Mary Mitchell of Northampton’s
Department of Social Services said she investigated an allegation when the victim’s mother filed a complaint. “I thought it was molestation… it was a long time ago,” said Mitchell. The case was concluded as “unfounded,” she testified. Files were later purged.

“A lot of times children will recant. I don’t recall that she actually did. … I don’t think I made a report to the sheriff’s office or commonwealth’s attorney,” Mitchell said.

The prosecution said Church was once involved with Mitchell’s sister and went to school with Mitchell.

Two men who were caught on the Eastern Shore last October with 52 pounds of marijuana pleaded guilty Monday in Northampton Circuit Court to intending to distribute the drug.

Tony Barnum, 41, of Tucson, Ariz., and Mateo Peixinho, 50, of Chimayo, N.M., were indicted on counts of possessing more than five pounds of marijuana with the intent to distribute it and transporting those drugs into Virginia.

In a plea agreement, Commonwealth’s Attorney Bruce Jones said he wouldn’t prosecute the transport charge in exchange for guilty pleas on the other charge. Barnum pleaded straight guilty and Peixinho pleaded no contest, maintaining his innocence but conceding overwhelming evidence.

Jones also agreed that bond for Peixinho should be extended until sentencing. The prosecutor promised not to ask for supervised probation for Barnum.

Jones told Judge W. Revel Lewis III that a tip was received “from a well-established confidential informant” regarding a pick-up truck with “a large load of high-grade marijuana on Route 13 near Cape Charles.”

Members of Eastern Shore Drug Task Force stopped the vehicle and confiscated three large boxes from the back of the covered bed. Seven pounds of the plant material were analyzed by a forensics unit that confirmed it was marijuana.

Jones said text messages showed that the men stopped near Melfa to sell the marijuana but were unsuccessful. When they left Philadelphia, they had 150 pounds that sold in two grades. A legal pad found in the cab of the truck indicated the two grades sold for $2,400 and $2,000 a pound.

The two defendants were in the truck when it was stopped, Jones said. Lewis convicted them of the charge.

The maximum sentence for the crime is 30 years in prison and a fine up to $10,000 plus court costs. The prosecutor justified the plea bargain saying, “Each man is exposed to enough time for justice to be done. Peixinho has posted a large bond. I don’t expect him to flee.”

Doughty is seeking a second four-year term.

Northampton County Sheriff David L. Doughty will be on the ballot unopposed in the November General Election, according to Registrar Terrence Flynn.

Mark G. Somers of Cape Charles, who worked in the jail for about 12 years and made a last-minute attempt to qualify as a candidate for sheriff, was unsuccessful.

Somers needed 125 petition signatures to qualify when he filed just before the deadline last week. However, once his documents were checked, only 66 verified voters were listed, Flynn reported.

Doughty, who lives near Kiptopeke, is seeking a second four-year term.

Student Investors Capture State Win

Accawmacke Elementary School fourth and fifth graders participated in the online investing simulator, The Stock Market Game. Students work together to build and manage an investment portfolio of $100,000 in a real-world, dynamic marketplace.

Out of 45 regional teams, a team from Accawmacke topped the rankings for the most return on investments. Also, it was the top elementary school team in Virginia of 570 teams.

Team members Odin Bolster and Madison Johnson, both fifth graders in Rebecca Johnson’s Talented and Gifted Class, attributed their investing success to extensive research of the companies that they chose. Over 15 weeks, the two invested in Apple (AAPL), Walmart (WMT) and Samuel Adams Beer Company (SAM). In the timeframe allotted, they earned over $10,000.

The two received cash to further their investing endeavors, prizes and a certificate of accomplishment.

Elizabeth Reid, a Northampton Middle School student, won the Virginia American Legion middle-school essay contest.

Each year, American Legion Post 56 in Cheriton invites Northampton middle-school students to write a one-page essay that begins, “I like living in America because…”

Elizabeth’s essay declared that she liked living in America “because of our many freedoms, the diversity and our military. ... I am very fortunate to live in this country.”

Elizabeth earned first place in the Eastern Shore preliminary competition. As best in the commonwealth, she was presented another certificate and $250.

Last year, Alex Marshall, then a Northampton Middle School student, also won both the local and state American Legion essay contest top prizes.

Arcadia High Excels in Envirothon

The two-day Dominion Envirothon, sponsored by Eastern Shore Soil and Water Conservation District (ESSWCD), tests teams on soils, forestry, aquatics, wildlife and a special topic chosen each year that asks students to solve real-world environmental problems.

Arcadia High School placed first, Broadwater Academy second, and Nandua High School third. Arcadia and Broadwater moved on to compete at the Regional Competition at Chippokes Plantation State Park, where Arcadia placed second overall and Broadwater placed fifth. Arcadia was invited to compete at the state level at Longwood University.

Each year, ESSWCD holds an Envirothon T-shirt design contest that rotates among the local high schools. The winning design is featured on the Envirothon T-shirt. This year’s contest was held at Broadwater, where sophomore Julie Xiong designed the winning T-shirt and received $50 and a T-shirt.

spending money for that purpose.”

Miner further said it is not necessary to get the attorney general’s opinion as suggested by Thomas since a bond counsel would have to give its approval before the money could be borrowed.

“That’s part of what you pay the bond counsel to do,” he said. “They have to stand good for their answers. It’s a very serious matter for bond counsel. It’s not only legal, there is a lawyer involved when you get to that point.”

“If you say it’s legal, that satisfies me,” said Gordy. “We haven’t appropriated anything.”

Supervisor Wanda Thornton noted. “He misunderstood what we did. We haven’t given anything.” She added “If you say it’s legal, that satisfies me.”

Thomas was not in attendance when the comments were made. In his initial speech, he said, “I am not against some renovation of the library, only if the county has to borrow the allocated money. That’s what the referendum was about … a referendum is equal to a governor’s veto. Your vote has been trumped, by definition of the state legislature’s ruling on referendums, making your library appropriation out of order.”

“This issue needs to be revisited, corrected and the previous vote nullified,” Thomas said. “Your constituents have spoken … majority rules in this county, not the board of supervisors. … Those supervisors who voted against the appropriation, I commend you for sticking up for the rights of the majority of Accomack County citizens.”

The vote to give the library the money was 5-4 with Supervisors Kay Lewis, Robert Crockett, Jack Gray, Grayson Chesser and Thornton in favor. Chairwoman Reneta Major, Vice Chairman Ron Wolff and Supervisors Donald Hart and Gordy were opposed. The tally was more complicated than the vote appears. Some wanted more funds to go toward the venture. Library directors were hoping the county would borrow about $5 million to put toward renovations and additions, including the purchase of three parcels around the existing library in Accomac. Library directors planned to raise $1 million for the endeavor.

Officials said the bonds could be obtained without a tax increase.

Last November, voters were asked if they favor spending $3.5 million in local money to construct a new library in Onley. It failed with nearly 53 percent (5,044) of voters casting their ballots in opposition. More than 47 percent (4,498) of voters supported the proposal. There were 23,578 registered voters in Accomack as of Nov. 1, 2014.

County officials have been trying to find office space for county workers and the public school system. The board voted unanimously Wednesday to let Supervisor Jack Gray and a committee meet with an engineering firm that has been studying options. Gray recently learned that grants might be available to fund renovation of the former Accomac Primary School. Gray, a former educator, wants to save the structure, which has been vacant for years and is filled with dust and unwanted items.

Injured Athletes Can Still Have an Impact

LAST WEEK THE SPORTS PAGES IN THIS NEWSPAPER WERE FILLED WITH PHOTOS AND INFORMATION ON LOCAL ATHLETES WHO MADE ALL-DISTRICT AND ALL-REGION TEAMS IN BASEBALL, SOFTBALL AND GIRLS’ AND BOYS’ SOCCER.

Those athletes worked hard and deserved the recognition, but today I want to salute several athletes who earned recognition last year but missed out this season due to injuries.

There was no polling for this selection among coaches. The choices are mine alone, and I may have missed someone, but sometimes when you spend as much time on the sidelines as I do, you notice what takes place on the bench.

I have previously mentioned that the Chincoteague baseball team put together its 20-1 season without juniors Miles Libertino and Trevor Reed, both injured early in the season. Libertino was second team All-Region last season; Reed was named honorable mention. Both were among the team’s leading hitters this season when they went down with injuries.

Although they were hobbled, both were on the bench during the stellar Pony season and appeared in the team photo when Chincoteague clinched the championship. Obviously, they would have rather been on the field, but they do have their senior year remaining when they can be back in the Pony lineup.

There are two girl athletes I want to feature today.

Tyra Bjorlo was a first-team All-District selection for Nandua last season as a freshman outfielder, leading the team with five home runs.

She started the season recovering from surgery on her ankle. She helped Nandua softball coach Lynn Williams at practice, catching for him and shagging balls in the outfield.

Williams was cautious about working Tyra back into the lineup because he didn’t want her to re-injure the ankle. “She wanted in for sure,” said Williams. “She even sent me a video of herself running full speed several times to insure me I could let her play.”

Tyra started playing a few innings a game and then got a few starts. “It took her some time to get her swing back, and just when she did, she tried to stretch a double into a triple and dislocated her right shoulder sliding into third and was lost for the season,” said Williams.

Some players would have waited until next season at that point, but Williams said Bjorlo continued to attend every practice.

“I was crushed for her,” he said, “but she showed up at every practice and game after that, supporting her teammates and coaching first base.”

What I noticed as a sports reporter was how she greeted her teammates coming off the field between innings with an upbeat attitude and a smile.

All of this despite missing the game that might have meant more to her than to any of her Nandua teammates.

When the Warriors held a breast cancer awareness fund-raising game, one of the honorees was Tyra’s mother, who is now undergoing treatments for breast cancer. Susan Bjorlo had been one of the team’s most faithful supporters prior to her diagnosis.

“It is truly exceptional to see an athlete go through all that and show up at practice to help out. She is an amazing kid. She even scheduled her doctor appointments around our practices and games,” said Williams.

Bjorlo had to miss the final game of the season to have shoulder surgery to repair a torn labrum. But she textured during the game to keep up with the score. And just last week, she went to her coach, removed the brace and showed him how high she could lift her arm, vowing to rehab to be ready for next year.

Showing her old school colors, Bjorlo wears number 7 for the New York Yankees’ Mickey Mantle, my boyhood idol, but she really wants number 2 for Derek Jeter, already taken by an upperclassman.

Williams just wants her back in his lineup.

Caroline Hiler was a first team All-State soccer player for Northampton her freshman year in 2012 and All-Region in 2013 in addition to being an All-District selection the past two years.

But midway through last season, Hiler suffered an ACL knee injury that cost her the rest of her junior season. Also one of the school’s top cross country runners, she was not expected to compete this past fall, but gamely ran the 3.1-mile courses, though she was clearly not in top form.

Hiler was looking forward to her senior season in soccer, taking part in winter conditioning last November. Unfortunately, she re-injured her knee in an off-the-field incident and was limited in mobility when the soccer season started. Her knee gave out several times in practice, once just planting her foot to kick.

Coach Tabi Webb, who has coached her since Hiler was 9, said, “This was all very frustrating for her because she diligently did every exercise prescribed by her physical therapist. She works harder toward a goal than anyone else I know. It was hard to watch her sitting on the bench. It was probably one of the hardest things she’s had to overcome.”

But that didn’t stop Hiler from taking on her captain duties, according to Coach Webb. “She attended nearly every practice, doing what she could and helping with goalie training and warm-up at games. She also cheered the team on from the bench. She came to every game but one,” said Webb.

I know I noticed that team spirit from Hiler when walking by the Northampton bench during games, thinking most seniors who were done for the season would spend their time elsewhere, particularly when they were once among the best players on the team.

“Caroline is the best player I’ve coached,” said Coach Webb. “She has always been highly skilled, but that’s not what makes her a great player. It’s her pure love of the game and her determination, both on and off the field. She earned many awards her freshman and sophomore years, and I know if it hadn’t been for her injury she would have been all region last year, and she would have contributed greatly to our team this year. It’s hard not to think about what could have been. As a coach, I quickly put that behind me. This situation has shown the girls what it means to be part of a team, and it has enabled them to step up and never give up through the season.”

Hiler did finish her senior year with at least one honor. She was the valedictorian of her graduating class. She will be attending Liberty University and wants to be a nurse.

Suzanna Long Second in Age Group at Baseball Skills Competition in D.C.

Suzanna Long, the 10-year-old daughter of Sam and Terri Long of Cheriton, finished second in her age group at the Washington Nationals baseball park in the Pitch, Hit and Run competition on June 7. Long, a fifth grader at Broadwater, was only 10 points out of 600 behind the winner after topping the hitting and running competition in her age group, but being edged by the winner when the throwing skills were calculated.

Long won her Pitch, Hit and Run competition at the Norfolk Tides park and was among the top three of other sectional qualifiers to advance to Sunday’s events in Washington, D.C. She plays for the Huskies at Shore Little League in Nassawadox.

“We all had a great experience,” said her father. “Suzanna and I think experience is one of the best teachers, so we are planning to do our best to go back,” he added.

Suzanna placed second in Virginia the last two years in the Elks’ National Hoop Shoot contest for her age group.

Suzanna is the youngest of eight children, with five sisters and two brothers. She was awarded the honor for having the highest grade point average in her class at graduation ceremonies. Her father, who is one of 10 children, says a Long has been enrolled in Broadwater Academy since the school opened 48 years ago.
Northampton Falls to Galax in State Soccer Semi-Final

By Bill Sterling

Northampton soccer coach John Gorman was proud of how his team competed with Galax in the VHSL 1A state semi-finals, but disappointed his Jackets didn’t come out on top in “a very winnable game.”

Galax, 17-1 and the defending state champions with all but two players back from last year’s team, found itself in a 0-0 tie at halftime before Bryan Santos-Estrada scored two goals. The first came at six minutes into the second half, and the other was scored four minutes later, for a 2-0 win at Salem High School last Friday.

“It was an evenly matched game between two good teams,” said Gorman. “It was like a chess match, back and forth, but they capitalized on their opportunities and we didn’t.”

Galax had rolled through its opponents this season, avenging its lone defeat to a 3A school with a 4-1 win later in the season. The team often scored eight or more goals in a game, a feat it repeated in the state championship game the following day when Galax won its second straight title with an 8-2 win over Washington & Lee. The Jackets narrowly lost the East Region title with a 3-2 decision to W&L the previous week. Galax advanced to the state semi-finals with a 5-0 win over Radford, which lost to Washington & Lee in the other semi-final.

Gorman praised goalkeeper Vincent Cusimano, who was making his first start of the season in goal after regular goalie José Ibarra was held out as the result of to a concussion he suffered in the regional final. “Vincent made some great saves,” Gorman said. “He is a really good athlete, tall and rangy, but he had no chance on their two goals.”

Northampton also had some scoring opportunities, most initiated by forward Bayron Ortiz, but Galax sweeper Felix Medina was able to stop the challenges.

Northampton, which finished the season 14-7, loses 10 seniors from its 22 players, but Gorman said the program should be strong again next season. “We started three sophomores and three freshmen. We’ve got some talent coming back. We just need to work hard and be ready when the tournament starts again next season.”

Northampton did bring home one trophy. At the conclusion of the tournament, the Jackets were awarded the Sportsmanship Award.

“It was a very clean game. I don’t recall one foul, and both teams played hard without any rough play. I thought Galax showed a lot of class,” said Gorman.

Apparently, so did the Jackets, to be voted the trophy for outstanding sportsmanship.
Fishing in seaside inlets has been very good, according to Ron Greaser of Don’s Bait and Tackle near Wachapreague. Pink has been the color preference; fish a floating rig to stay out of the cabbage grass if fishing in shallower water. The inlet area around the old Coast Guard Station has had the most interest.

A few flounder are showing up on the Paramore Reef, wrecks and bottom. Sea bass also can be taken around these areas, but the best are in deeper water. Cobia are starting to show around structures in ocean areas. Fishing has been hot for dolphin, yellowfins and bigeye tuna in Norfolk Canyon.

Greaser said on bayside some bull red drum can be found around the Middle Grounds north of the bridge-tunnel, which is covered up with cobia, and sight casting to them is the best method. On the Middle Grounds and all the way north to Onancock Creek, cobia can be found on breaklines and around markers and buoys. Some of the best fishing has been outside Onancock; anchor up on the 10' breakline there, and fish with crab and bunker. Sharks also will take your bunker, but they don’t mess with crab. Capt. B.W. James of James Gang Charters had two outstanding evenings there, boating six nice cobia. Capt. Richard Buscher has been hooking them up out of Morley’s Wharf on Occohannock Creek.

Excellent fishing for spadefish is available at the buoy markers and towers; chum with shredded clams and use bits of sea clams on a #1 or #2 heavy-duty hook. Fish them at multiple depths until you find their level in the water column. Use a float, split shot and worm weights or egg sinkers, advised Greaser.

On Chincoteague, the usual spots inside — Queen’s Sound, Assateague and Chincoteague channels, off the dock in the bay — but outside BlackFish Banks and the Subway Cars are producing large flounder in 65 feet of water.

Matt Abell at Sea Hawk Sports Center in Pocomoke said a few speckled trout along with a good number of rock and red drum are being caught in Tangier Sound. The Sea Hawk Flounder Tourney will be held July 3 and 4, with all proceeds donated to an Eastern Shore family battling cancer.

The Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries (DGIF) invites public input on the Draft Virginia Deer Management Plan (VDMP), available for review through July 10 on the agency’s website, www.dgif.virginia.gov.

The first VDMP, completed in 1999, has been revised twice through the involvement of public stakeholders and managers of deer.

The revised VDMP will guide deer management across the commonwealth through 2024. This plan describes the history of white-tailed deer management, current status (supply and demand) of the deer resource and management programs, and their future in Virginia. The plan identifies a framework of what needs to be done and how and when it should be done.

The VDMP considers deer populations, deer-related recreation and damage, and deer habitat. By clarifying goals and directions of deer management, this plan will help the DGIF and the public address deer issues.

For the Fathers, Dads and Pops

Shouting out all Fathers in this month of June

I’m a speak of a King of Fathers, alive, without a tomb

Thomas Sr. is his name, when I speak of a King

Whether castle or a court, he is better than any King James

Even through drama, he is respected by all Mamas

With a work history longer than the heard of Obama

To be honest, my Grandfathers struggled and overcame

To me, Clyde Sr. and Leon Sr., were like Martin and Malcolm

But this is dedicated to Fathers that got kids, still school them

I am a Daddy also to some of these women and children

~Thomas L. Davis Jr.

I call this the “Color Your Cat Column” because that’s what happened when I accidentally dropped an open container of chalk paint on the floor while my boy Frank Sinatra was walking along nearby. Two big globs somehow managed to bounce up and hit him in the belly and the underside of his front legs and all over his front paws.

Ever tried to get paint off a cat?

It all started when I bought an old vanity for a great price at a yard sale on Lankford Highway near Temperanceville last weekend. I was coming back from Pocomoke with a friend and we made a quick u-turn to see if we could use any of the treasures. Of course we could. Thank you, Mrs. Miller!

Anyway, after the great paint spill, I immediately grabbed my 17-pound tom without slipping in the mess on my new wood floor and ran to the bathroom sink to rinse him off.

The journey down the 10-foot hallway and to the little half-bath occurred without incident. HOWEVER, when Frank heard the sound of the spigot being turned on, all heck broke loose. Saying he squirmed is putting it ever so mildly. The wall in the bathroom was totally spattered and he got away leaving a trail through the house.

I glanced at my wood floor and decided I loved my cat more. I didn’t want him to start licking the paint off his chest. So, I managed to catch him again. This time, I had a towel and wrapped it around him so he couldn’t use his claws. A smudge was removed before he freaked again, squirmed and took off to parts unknown. Uh oh, he’s a hider.

Again I looked at my paint puddle and the lavender-blue footprints that were everywhere. This paint was the fast-drying kind. I decided I would let Frank calm down before I tried to pick him up again. So as fast as I could, I started using the spilled paint to cover the vanity while calling a friend who also has used this kind of paint. The writing on the can was so small I needed someone else to read the label.

We discussed its toxicity and while my friend called her sister for another opinion, I called my vet.

Dr. Hiler is great! He immediately returned my call, gave me ideas of what to try and offered some assurances. Yippee! Basically, it was either wash Frank with dishwashing liquid or comb out the paint when it dries. That second plan was the one!

Frank was getting calmer while I frantically painted and cleaned my floor. I have no clue as to how the next thing occurred. I leaned on the vanity with attached mirror and the wheels moved and the whole thing started to fall backwards.

“Not another broken mirror,” I yelled as I grabbed my reflection and saved the day! Whew. More paint on the floor and a few bruises later, I finished painting.

Then, armed with a flea comb, I searched for Frank. Oh there he is lying on the couch. Aghhhh. Yep. Paint on the sofa. But Frank was a kinder, gentler feline. He let me comb most of the paint out. We were both exhausted.

Frank is fine. Linda is semi-OK. And I think the other two cats got a good laugh. Maybe my luck is not so bad after all. Yippee!

What Drives Supervisors?

Dear Editor:

The June 9 meeting of the Northampton Board of Supervisors (BOS) was rather lively. As this would be the last time residents could address the BOS before staff sends the rezoning scheme out for public comment, many speakers took to the podium to relay opposition to the widespread plan to industrialize our farmland, among other changes.

Those commenting included three former planning commissioners, a marine scientist, two heads of local civic organizations, and other landowners who feared their investments in this county were being jeopardized. Nearly all the speakers questioned the board’s motives for changing the land-use rules which currently protect property rights and our limited natural resources (the aquifer and clean coastal waters), all without our consent.

I addressed the board with what I thought might be, in part, driving the changes, and I appreciate this opportunity to flesh out my presentation.

Shortly after buying our building next to the Post Office in Exmore in 2008, during a meeting of a local citizen group, we became aware of a project called the Exmore Energy Project. The plan was announced at that meeting by a representative of Bay Coast Railroad. The proposal was called a “bio-diesel plant” and would manufacture a diesel additive by refining waste oil from Norfolk Oil Transport Company. The waste product would be railed to the site (next to our shop and in the middle of town) and mixed with methanol and other additives, heated, filtered and stored. As I had experience with these oil refineries while working for county government in upstate New York, I quickly concluded that the project was not a good fit for the middle of a business district. Working with other citizens and Virginia Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ), we encouraged Bay Coast and the Norfolk concern to abandon their plans.

It was with great surprise that we finally read the BOS new zoning plans last year to find that “biomass conversion to alternative fuel” was to be allowed in every zoning district “by right.” Again, working with citizens and DEQ, we encouraged the board to jettison that hare-brained scheme. But we were just as surprised to see the plan emerge under the new heading, “waste related,” in agricultural and commercial areas. When we explained to the BOS that the new language would allow hazardous, municipal, chicken litter, and medical waste incinerators, as well as biodiesel plants, thanks to Supervisor Larry Trala that term was taken out. But the BOS inserted a new shell in the game, called “waste management,” which includes in its definition “resource recovery,” which would allow all of the uses under the two previous terms. So we now find ourselves back to square one, with apparently no rhyme or reason.

Is it just coincidence that the use that would allow bio-diesel refineries, enabling Bay Coast railroad to transport waste oil into our county, keeps coming up in Frankenstein fashion? And is it just happenstance that last week, staff told a former planning commissioner that they will not take out new rules that will allow the import of waste into the county?

You would have to be rather removed from reality if you did not deduce that there is at least the appearance of a conflict of interest when the president of Bay Coast railroad was the chairman of the BOS during the drafting and orchestration of the proposed zoning manifesto. The Virginia Conflict of Interest Act speaks to the issue of even creating the appearance of using your public office for private interest or gain. My position is that Mr. Larry LeMond should have recused himself from any vote on the new zoning proposal, including refraining from the vote to call the BOS the “applicant” in this rezoning charade. I am certainly not saying that sacks of money have exchanged hands in the dark and smoky rooms of the administrative halls. I am saying that elected officials need to instill confidence in their constituents that their legislative actions are driven solely by the public interest.

Most of us who have spent time reading the many iterations of the new zoning proposal keep scratching our heads as to the motives behind the county’s unilateral attempt to industrialize, commercialize, exploit and overbuild Northampton County. Perhaps it’s time that we peel back the covers and more fully understand the fuel that keeps driving this process forward. At the very least, we need to ensure that our elected leaders who even appear to have “skin in the game” recuse themselves from voting on this issue.
