A 2014 state law could cause Amazon’s big solar project in northern Accomack to avoid paying as much as $800,000 in machinery and tool taxes on $200 million worth of property, according to calculations used for other businesses in the area.

Accomack Administrator Steve Miner wrote on behalf of the county Board of Supervisors in regard to the matter in a letter to Co-chairs Sen. Walter Stosch and Sen. Charles J. Colgan of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Del. R. Lee Ware of the House Finance Committee.

“The amendment causing the concern … ran through both finance committees,” Miner wrote. “Recently, the Accomack Board unanimously approved a conditional use permit application allowing … a very large solar farm … which, when completed, will deliver 80 megawatts of electricity to the electrical grid. For perspective, at full output, we are informed that is enough energy to power about 15,000 homes. When completed, the project includes approximately 1,000 acres of property comprised of multiple properties, of which approximately half will be developed.”

“As you can imagine, many are pleased at what appears to be a significant, high profile development coming to the commonwealth, as well as the county,” he continued. “Nonetheless, the project brings complexities … during the conditional-use permit process, we learned that state law now entirely exempts the value of solar equipment in projects providing 20 megawatts of power or less from local taxation.
Swimming, Sharks and Summer Memories

Story and Photos By Linda Cicoira

Eating home-grown fruits and vegetables, sitting on the porch, swimming, enjoying ice cream, having town pride, thinking about days gone by and even encountering sharks - that's what the season is about for those who live in Accomack and Northampton Counties.

As the result of an email survey that was conducted recently, the Eastern Shore Post received comments on those summer activities.

Bill Stilwagen of Onancock says his town is the “best place to live.” He learned to swim on the Bay as a kid. He also noted his favorite summer comfort food is ice cream and he has been enjoying tomatoes and peaches this season. Stilwagen said his favorite migrating birds are New York women.

He also had a shark story to tell. “In 1970, I flew as a door-gunner on Marine Corps CH-46 helicopters,” he wrote. One day after finishing their missions, they were flying north “along the coast of Vietnam’s South China Sea from Chu Lai toward Marble Mountain” when he spotted “something huge in the ocean.” Stilwagen said he hit the intercom to report, “I think we just passed a submarine.”

“The pilot swung the helicopter around and went back (and) there it was. It was huge and right on the surface. It was a whale shark and it was broad and mammoth,” he wrote. “The pilot said he'd make a gun run past it and to ready my weapon. We made the turn and as we were passing, I put about ten rounds into the beast. The shark spun and thrashed. It then turned belly up, dead. Many congrats came through my headset.”

Stilwagen said at first he was thrilled with his marksmanship. “But my elation was short-lived as I felt remorse wash over me ... It did nothing to deserve to die, other than having the misfortune to come under my .50 caliber machinegun sights. Some of these sharks can live for 70 years. And I just killed it for sport. We circled the carcass a few times and then turned toward our base,” he wrote.

“As we were leaving the area, I could see about a dozen fishing boats paddling like mad from the beach ... the shark would feed the village for a month and add great fortune to their people. I thought of native-Americans who were reverent and gave thanks, honoring the animals they killed, for the nutrition they would provide. In the end, this magnificent creature did not die without purpose.”

Pat Hart of Rose Hill in Wachapreague has done a lot of fishing in her lifetime. “I have caught some sharks. But I didn’t keep them or eat them,” she said. Hart said she carries a cane these days and is too busy loving her summer comfort food – watermelon and enjoying eating green beans and blueberries and watching Carolina Wrens.

Her hometown is her favorite place. “Always has been always will be,” she said. “My town was so pretty yesterday. The Marlin tournament was going on. There were lots of boats here and lots of activity. Golf carts were everywhere. I clicked on Amazon when I got in the house and ordered an American flag and a flagpole to hang from my porch. And when I get my store fixed I’m going to put one over there too.”

Hart learned to swim from a man in Wachapreague who “who taught all the kids who were my age. He had a daughter and he taught her how to swim and all of her friends. Van Davis put a rope around us. He let us in the deep water right off the dock and said, 'kick and paddle and I'll see that you don't sink.' And pretty soon we didn't need the rope,” she said.

Art Fisher of Parksley said his favorite comfort food and summer vegetable is butternut squash. He also likes figs and all migrating birds “except buzzards.” He prefers spring to summer.

Fisher wrote that Parksley is his favorite town “because of the story of its founder, Harry Bennett, a blind man.” Despite his name, Fisher said he has never encountered a shark. But he knows how to swim, “Speedy Williams taught Bob Bloxom and me to swim in 1946 in Cape Charles,” he wrote.

Broadwater teacher Dr. Mark A. Mentzer received a patent recently for his invention of a sensor system to detect mild traumatic brain injury that is applicable to both military personnel and contact-sports athletes.

Entitled “Blast, Ballistic and Blunt Trauma Sensor,” Dr. Mentzer’s patent was issued July 14.

“I developed a sensor to accurately correlate biomechanical data to biomedical, and to identify thresholds for neuronal injuries,” the teacher said. “I developed the relationship of neuronal injuries to their insult thresholds and calibrated my sensor outputs to these injury modalities. This has made it possible to identify soldiers in the field who will require treatment and to predict from specific injuries received what would be the most appropriate therapies.”

The U.S. Army Medical Command and the National Institute of Health also encouraged him “to design a field-portable diagnostic for biomarkers, which I did as a lab-on-a-chip microfluidic assay that detects protein biomarkers. For ... injuries detected ... my assay chip allows further diagnosis.”

He presented the concepts to the National Science Foundation and then submitted invention disclosures for the designs. The highest rating was came from the Army Research Laboratory invention evaluation committee, which filed regular and provisional patent applications.

“My sensors have been demonstrated to function as intended and are in calibration testing at several independent laboratories,” Mentzer said.

“The impact is tremendous for brain injury research, as my sensor illuminates the relationship between injury thresholds and blast testing of neuronal tissue cultures,” he added. “This also makes it possible to relate injury thresholds to electrophysiological measurements of human function. I related computational cellular and molecular models to injury prediction based on my sensor metrics. This is the basis for more accurate injury prediction, and for relating my sensor data to models for tissue damage.”

Mentzer was a civilian employee of the Army, serving as a research scientist, until January 2014, when he decided to pursue a new career as a high school math and science teacher. He joined Broadwater Academy in July, where he will teach mathematics and science courses, develop underwater robots with his students and continue to pursue his research interests in mathematical systems biology and the neurosciences.

He also consults with the National Football League and equipment manufacturers on sensors and instrumentation related to brain injuries. Mentzer holds 17 US patents, including computer memory systems in development at IBM Corporation, and fuel systems for aircraft. He is the author of several technical books, and nearly 100 technical papers.

Coast Guard Rescues Pony Watcher

The Coast Guard responded to a boat aground with two children and six adults aboard Wednesday in Tom’s Cove.

At 6:15 a.m., Sector Hampton Roads watchstanders received a distress call from the pleasure craft, Chaser.

The crew at Coast Guard Station Chincoteague was already in the immediate area enforcing a safety zone during the annual Chincoteague Pony Swim. The crew assisted in rescuing a woman who suffered a laceration. She was brought to Curtis Merritt Harbor where EMS took her to Peninsula Regional Hospital in Salisbury, Md.

“Fortunately we were able to reach the injured woman, despite the shallow water,” said Petty Officer 3rd Class Spencer Merritt. “We were glad to be able to get her to Chincoteague EMS quickly. Often times, vessels grounded in shallow water are much more difficult to assist.”

The rest on the Chaser waited for a friend to arrive and assist them.

Some customers of ANEC reported a phone scam, the company said.

The customers were called and asked to dial (877) 432-9325 to make immediate payment on their electric bill and avoid being disconnected.

Although the caller ID may show this call as coming from ANEC, it did not, according to a company announcement. The scammer copied ANEC’s phone greeting and menu to make the scam appear more believable.

When customers call back, they press “2” for the billing department and are connected to someone who demands payment with a prepaid card and threatens to immediately turn off their power.

While ANEC may contact you by phone for various reasons, they will never call you to demand payment by a certain method or threaten an immediate disconnection if payment is not received, the announcement stated.

An ANEC employee will not call or visit you when the office is closed to request payment or disconnect your service. If you have any doubt about a person’s validity, you should call ANEC immediately at (757) 787-9750 or (800) 431-2632 and an official ANEC representative will be glad to assist you.

NASA Wallops is Best

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Wallops Flight Facility’s aircraft office was recognized recently as having the best small aviation program in the federal government.

The Wallops aircraft team provides NASA and commercial platforms with worldwide airborne scientific research, technology development, cargo airlift, launch range surveillance and recovery, and remotely piloted aircraft systems and required chase operations.

“It is an honor for our aircraft office to be recognized for their efforts as the best small aircraft office program among the 18 Federal agencies with aviation programs,” said Bill Wrobel, director of the Wallops Flight Facility.

“From its beginnings in 1969 to the record breaking year in 2014 supporting airborne science operations, this office has truly shown the ability to provide safe, reliable and cost effective operations,” Wrobel added.

The General Services Administration and the Interagency Committee for Aviation Policy made the designation.

The award is provided to agencies that have demonstrated flight program support for the success of the agency missions. An independent panel of aviation experts made the judgment based on aircraft administration, operations, maintenance, training and safety.

In 2014, Wallops participated in 30 NASA airborne science missions, flying more than 2,000 flight hours. Both were records surpassing in all previous marks during the office’s 45 years.

In addition, Wallops completed the expansion of its airborne science fleet growing the number of aircraft from two to seven and doubling the mission flight hours and personnel.

The program has 50 workers, including 20 part-time professionals from outside of NASA.

“I am extremely proud for our office,” said Shane Dover, chief of the Wallops’ aircraft division and a NASA research pilot.

“The team has made tremendous strides over the past several years and has been consistently recognized by the scientists we support for our capabilities and ‘can do’ spirit.”

The 2014 program met 100 percent of success criteria on all missions, with zero mishaps and excellent customer feedback, according to the announcement. From 2005 – 2014, Wallops flew more than 6,000 mishap-free flight hours with science flights conducted worldwide using a variety of different aircraft.

The aircraft office’s roots date back to 1969 with the acquisition of a Beech Queen Air and two Douglas C-54’s to provide airfield and range support. In the 80s, the office expanded its mission to NASA airborne science flights and aeronautics research projects, including test projects on clear air turbulence, aircraft, noise, stall spin, wake turbulence and advanced approach systems.

“The aircraft office has seen many changes over the years,” Rich Rogers, NASA research pilot and Wallops aircraft office assistant chief, noted this week. “In the early 1990s we operated six scientific research aircraft with three flyable spares. During the lowest point in 2005 and 2006, the office operated only two aircraft with 12 personnel. We have since seen steady growth, and now operate eight different aircraft including a P-3 Orion, two C-130 Hercules, a C-23 Sherpa, a B200 King Air, a UH-1H helicopter, a T-34C chase aircraft and a Rigel remotely piloted aircraft system.”

“I am extremely proud of our people for being recognized as the government’s best small aviation program for 2015,” he said.

These aircraft support NASA missions across the United States from the east to west coasts, as well as Alaska, Canada, Greenland, Norway, Africa and Antarctica.

In addition, Wallops recently opened and conducted missions from a new Global Hawk Operations Center (GHOC-East) control center. The GHOC allows NASA to conduct Global Hawk operations worldwide, including missions to study Atlantic tropical storms.

Earl’s Grill Owner Dies

Mrs. Kathryn Justice Strautz, a lifelong resident of Horsey, passed away peacefully on July 25, 2015, at Peninsula Regional Medical Center in Salisbury, Md., surrounded by her family and loving caregivers.

The daughter of Sunie Marie Trader Justice and Ross- er James Justice, she was born on Aug. 5, 1930, in her home in Horsey. After marrying the love of her life, Earl Don- ald Strautz Sr., and briefly living in Horntown, the couple returned to settle in her childhood home.

They owned and operated Earl’s Grill and Sporting Goods, first at its T’s Corner location in Oak Hall and then for 35 years in Temperanceville. Although named for him, she was the true “boss” of Earl’s Grill, and she was known for running a tight ship. Many local young ladies waited on tables under “Miss Kathryn” and grew to love and respect her.

Mrs. Strautz was a loving mother to her sons and despite working all day, she never missed their many sporting events throughout their school years, often coming home late at night to wash the uniform of one son, so the other son could wear it the next day.

In recent years, she enjoyed watching her two greatly loved grandchildren grow into young adults, and never missing the opportunity to ask them if they were hungry. Having grown up during the Great Depression, providing food, be it to a stranger passing through on Rt. 13, or to her growing grandchildren, was very important to her.

Mrs. Strautz is survived by her sons, Richard J. Strautz (and wife, Debra) and Earl Donald Strautz Jr. (and wife, J. Dannehl Strautz); her grandchildren, Courtney Jean Strautz and Da- vid Rosser Strautz; and the many caregivers who loved and cared for her during the past few years: Robin Joynes, Janice Sutton, Rosie Brittingham, Alicia Townsend, Vergie Lewis and Regi- na Custis.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 4, 2015 at Williams-Parksley Funeral Home’s chapel. Interment will follow in the Downing’s Cemetery in Oak Hall. There will be visitation at the funeral home an hour prior to service.

Memorial donations may be made to Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Jen- kins Bridge at P.O. Box 186, Oak Hall, VA 23416. Memory tributes may be shared with the family at: www.williamsfuneralhomes.com

Board Reviews Zoning Proposals

By Ron West

The Northampton Board of Supervisors met this week to continue reviewing changes to the proposed Zoning Ordinance. Over the past few months, residents have expressed concerns over the possibility of poultry houses and poultry waste being introduced to the county. While the current ordinance, as well as the proposed changes to it, do allow for the placement of poultry houses, the supervisors made it clear that with current and proposed setbacks, it would be highly unlikely for any to be placed.

County Planner Peter Stith said there were only nine parcels within the county that could hold at least one poultry house. For an operation to be economically feasible, more houses would be required, thus making it unlikely. The size and shape of a parcel would be a major factor in the number of houses that might be allowed on any one property. The ordinance calls for a minimum of 1,500-foot setback from town edge districts.

With regards to the importing of poultry waste, the board agreed to a change to the ordinance that states, “The collection, source separation, storage, transportation, transfer, processing, treatment and disposal of waste or recycling except that no more than 15 percent of any waste stream may originate from outside of Northampton County. This change effectively eliminates the siting of any large scale waste facilities in Northampton County.”

Residents are also concerned about placement of Planned Unit Developments (PUD) within Northampton. A PUD may consist of residential, commercial, agricultural or industrial units.

While a PUD is allowed by the ordinance, the board emphasized that by design, a PUD is intended to “provide flexibility in design … to encourage comprehensive planning of developments and to insure compatibility of developments with surrounding areas. The review of any PUD application will bring together leadership, staff and outside consultants specific to the nature of any proposal—whether it be housing, some mix of uses or a business park, for example,” according to the ordinance.

The Board agreed to eliminate intense agricultural uses from an allowed use in a PUD. County Development Director Charles McSwain pointed out that while the Virginia Code allows for PUDs, it does not automatically approve them. That task is left to the discretion of the local governing board.

The board reviewed a portion of the proposed ordinance for solar energy facilities. It calls for the solar arrays to comply with stormwater runoff regulations. The lowest part of the solar panels shall be a minimum of four feet above the ground and the areas below the panels shall be covered with vegetation. No one has requested a special use permits for such endeavors.

The tentative schedule for the Board is to hold a public hearing on the proposed changes to the Zoning Ordinance by early fall. No vote on the ordinance may be taken prior to a public hearing. A date has not been for a final vote.

An Independently Owned and Operated Member of Coldwell Banker Residential Affiliates, Inc.
... the applicant learned of this exemption and thereafter maintained that it was actually four 20-megawatt plants," wrote Miner. "Though unresolved prior to action, the project was viewed favorably and was approved."

Since then, the administrator said, the owner returned and ask for the exemption. "They have confirmed that it is not clear that the state will allow the project to be considered as four separate but interconnected 20-megawatt projects."

The supervisor will conduct a special meeting on Wednesday, Aug. 5 to consider the request, "as full taxation appears to be a deal breaker for this project."

"In our only comparison," Miner wrote, "We have a petroleum fired 'peaker' plant of 315 megawatts located in New Church ... this year, after 15 years of service, the plant and equipment ... will be taxed on values of nearly $150 million," he wrote.

"We write ... to apprise you of our real world situation and to suggest that the Finance Committees ... consider giving localities complete latitude over all exemptions ... rather than forcing a blanket exemption upon us," he wrote.

Miner also asked for "some dedicated assistance in analyzing the requests that localities are now receiving for exemptions on projects beyond 20 megawatts."

"We believe localities would take such applications quite seriously and act in the best interests of applicants and local citizens alike without having their abilities taken completely away," the administrator said. "This is an emerging and important industry. There will be many more across the commonwealth."

Supervisor Grayson Chesser, who represents District 3, where the project is planned, is against the tax break. "I've heard all kinds of figures including as high as $800,000 the first year for equipment," he said this week. "The real figure may be much much less but really the figure is not as important as the fact that they want an ordinance to exempt them ... they need to pay their fair share ... they've shown no inclination to from what I've seen."

"How am I going to look a neighbor of mine in the eye who has a small business and a little bit of equipment and tell him that he has to pay taxes but the solar company doesn't?" Chesser added. "I have friends who have rented to this solar company and I hope it works out for them. If this goes through I'll be happy for them. But I can't go there."

"I don't mind giving a break to a company that is going to bring jobs to our people," Chesser continued. "But, I see no need to give incentives to a company that doesn't." He said the only permanent jobs for the project would be for grass cutting, and those would be seasonal.

"We have a long list of tax exempt organizations that come to us every year for tax relief and we don't give it," he added. "These are people who do a great deal of good in our community. We have hundreds of small businesses that have equipment that they have to pay tax on ... really how is any board member going to vote to exempt this folks and look their constituents in the eye? How can they do it? Whether the figure is $800,000 ... or $25 whatever their fair share is, that's what they should pay," Chesser said.

"They took it out of the local options," complained Supervisor Donald Hart. "To me it's unfair that a company wouldn't pay anything ... while Perdue, Tyson's, the peaker plant and all the other companies have to pay."

Hart said the equipment will be depreciated every year and they won't have to pay as much. "I think it's unfair for the other businesses ... I don't know what they're going to pay according to state law."

"That $800K number has been floating around," said Director of Planning and Community Development Rich Morrison. "A simple application of our machinery and tools tax minus depreciation yields something like that. However, the application of personal property taxes to solar projects, actually all electrical generating machinery and equipment, is really complicated and the SCC actually establishes the value, as I understand it."

Reunion Recalls Good Times, Adds to Them

By Bill Sterling

I am often reminded of the time I broke out the ceiling light in the dorm room practicing my golf swing. Leery of striking the light, I gauged my backswing several times to be sure it did not reach the light, only to knock it out on my follow-through.

I prefer to recall the day I scored three goals in a soccer game against our rival fraternity. But even on this day, I was remembered for something else.

It was shortly before Thanksgiving, and given the times, I had not gotten a haircut since arriving at school in early September. I didn’t want to go home with my hair longer than my parents had ever seen it, so I took my chance on a Richmond barber for once.

I realized when I sat in the chair he didn’t speak much English, or at least I couldn’t understand his question. I tried to tell him I only wanted a trim. Whatever was said by either of us, communication wasn’t so good, and before I attempted more explanation, he sheared my long sideburns and cut my hair to a length that would be reasonable today but was extremely short for that era.

I got some looks and plenty of teasing when I showed up for the soccer game about an hour later. I was still livid over the haircut but could only console myself with the fact that it would grow out again.

Although soccer was not offered among the high-school sports on the Eastern Shore then, I had played after football practice quite often because my coach, Thomas Parks, had played soccer in college and knew the game. He sometimes let us play soccer in lieu of running wind sprints. We also played during physical education classes.

Thus, while I was definitely no Pele, in my fraternity I was more valuable in soccer than say, basketball, which I did play in high school. Like I said, we had some really good athletes in our fraternity, and I couldn’t make the first team in basketball.

I also said I scored three goals in this game, but I didn’t tell you all three were headers set up by good passes from my teammates on corner kicks.

The guys gave all the credit to the barber, and one joker said my head with the new haircut should be mounted as a trophy back at the fraternity house. I am not sure how that was supposed to happen, but it didn’t sound like a good thing.

Never again did I have such a game, and my fraternity teammates kept suggesting I go back to that barber for another shearing. But not even the guarantee of a hat trick could make me visit that barber again. I always got my infrequent haircuts back home after that experience.

This weekend we will be telling stories about our days at Richmond. It’s hard to believe it’s been more than 40 years since we were in college. But the passing of time was marked when we were both saddened and reminded of our mortality upon learning of the death of one brother, Chip Booth, since the last reunion. Chip was here two years ago, bringing his wife and small dog, enjoying the beach as much as anyone that day. Last year my wife and I joined Chip and his wife for dinner when they were on the Shore. With an ample belly and a white beard, he played the role of Santa Claus at Christmas and had a business cared that stated as much.

There will probably be a toast to Chip and the hope that all of us can stay hearty and healthy until the time we meet again.
Roy Custis Wins Both Navigational, Poker in Ruritan Club Bayside Event

The Pungoteague Ruritan Club’s 2015 Bayside Poker Run held on Saturday July 25 was a great success. The club had 31 entries in the event with 22 small boats cruising the Chesapeake Bay in this ninth annual navigational competition.

A crowd estimated at more than 125 people attended the awards celebration at Monadox Point on Nandua Creek at the end of the day. The awards ceremony attended by captains, crew, and club members was a bayside cook-out where fun, food, music, and great fellowship abounded.

This year’s small boat competition once again included the Chesapeake Challenge in the navigational component of the event. This challenge required the crew of each boat to compete in a physical activity at each checkpoint. This year’s activities at checkpoints included a water balloon tossing competition, horseshoes, Ruritan Spikeball and a croquet competition that was held on the lawn at the Eastern Shore Yacht and Country Club.

Elimination flag football tournament. This tournament will be held Aug. 3-8, will cost $150 per team, and is for participants 18 and over. For more information, please call the Eastern Shore Family YMCA at (757)787-5601.

Thunder to Hold Tryouts Aug. 9

Webb Rehabbing Injury

Tyler Webb, a 2009 Northampton High School graduate pitching for the Scranton/Wilkes Barre Railriders, the Triple A team of the New York Yankees, is recovering from a hand injury that has kept him out of action more than a month.

Webb, who had seven straight scoreless appearances when the injury occurred while warming up in the bullpen, has been at the Yankee facility in Tampa, Fla., rehabbing. The organization hopes he can return to action next week.

Webb felt pain in the top part of his index pitching, a common occurrence for pitchers who put a lot of pressure on their index finger throwing certain pitches. He has received a cortisone shot in his knuckle to relieve the pain.

Webb had a 2.84 ERA in 38 innings thus far this season.

A cold front rolled through this week, bringing some welcome relief from the heat. With a decent forecast for the weekend, plenty of anglers will hit the water.

The flounder action in the Bay is still productive if you put in the time, with some respectable flatfish to show. But the best action is still coming from the nearshore and inshore wrecks, where anglers are cleaning up with limits of nice fish averaging from 22 to 24-inches lately. Jigging with Gulp baits, metal jigs, or fresh stripped bait are good methods for wreck fishing for flounder. Some keeper seabass will also take these offerings on the same wrecks. For the Bay flounder hotspots, jigging and live bait are most effective right now, with both techniques working around all four islands of the Bay Bridge Tunnel, with the average flattie averaging around 20 to 22-inches. Anglers drifting with strip baits and minnows are also lucking into good numbers of fish near the 4th island, the Hampton Bar, the Thimble Shoal Channel. Both Lynnhaven and Rudee Inlets are also giving up a few keepers lately.

Cobia continue to provide very good action, with more of the larger fish making a showing this week. Chummers are still scoring with keeper sized fish using chunks of bunker, live eels, and live croaker fished on the bottom. The best locations for chumming lately are the seaside areas of Fisher’s Island, the Nine Foot Shoal, and the Quonset shoal, but the trash fish and sharks continue to harass chummers. Sight-casters are finding some incredible catches, with brutes pushing to over 70-pounds landed this week. Pods of cobia are starting to form near the mouth of the Bay, and more fish are starting to favor buoys, making easy targets. Red drum are also schooling around the mouth of the Bay, with reports of schools also showing off the Virginia Beach ocean front.

Spanish mackerel are still the word on the trolling scene along the ocean front, but these flashy fish are also hitting within Bay waters. The bigger Spanish are coming from shallower water on small spoons trolled at a fast clip, with most ranging from 16 to 21-inches.

Sheepshead are still biting well along the CBBT structure, with more fish beginning to move to the tubes of the artificial islands. Triggerfish are still biting in many of these same areas, with some fish pushing to over 3-pounds, especially on some of the near shore wrecks. Spadefish are still available at the Chesapeake Light Tower, the Tower Reef, the CBBT, and several inshore wrecks. The 4th island of the CBBT was particularly productive this week.

Bottom bouncers are flocking to Oyster to get in on the popular croaker run, as the size of the hardheads increase. Within lower Bay waters, croaker are still everywhere. The area off Kiptopeke State Park is still a favorite location, while some nicer croaker are also coming from the Inlets lately. Sea mullet are also lurking off Kiptopeke.

Tarpon are active on the Eastern Shore, with several hook-ups and a few suspected landings keeping tarpon hunters happy in the back waters of Oyster. Amberjack are still an easy target at many offshore wrecks and the Southern Towers, while anglers may also luck into a few jacks at the Chesaapeake Light Tower. Deep dropping is going well, with good hauls of the usual blueline tilefish, black belled rosefish, and an occasional grouper with a side catch of nice seabass.

Offshore, the billfish bite is improving daily, with good numbers of white marlin and a several blue marlin crashing spreads this week. Boats using live bait are catching the most billfish. Further south, crews are also finding a few sailfish. Some nice yellowfin tuna and big eye tuna are scattered around, and wahoo are becoming more common. Some big dolphin are showing here and there, along with many surprise shark encounters.

Summer

Maury Enright of the Atlantic/Wattsville area picked ice cream for his favorite comfort food. His also prefers corn on the cob and blueberries. His home area is his favorite place. “Because I have lived in both almost my entire life. Add in Chincoteague food is a fresh cheeseburger cooked on the grill. “No frozen patties.” LoFaso also favors corn on the cob and watermelon and watching humming birds.

He said he is prepared enough for summer. He doesn’t carry a bathing suit every where he goes but “ready to skinny dip anytime,” he said. However, he later added that he never really did learn to swim.

“I like Onancock a lot. But, I LOVE because I taught there for 42 years.” Enright said he does not know how to swim.

Steve Stokes of Daugherty also chose ice cream for comfort and corn on the cob for his favorite vegetable. Stokes said wild raspberries are another choice and he watches humming birds. Stokes learned to swim while in the Boy Scouts and picked Accomac as the best town “because it’s so quiet and picturesque.”

Ashley Wilson of Painter said clams are her comfort food. She’s never encountered a shark; prefers cantaloupe, turnip greens and air-conditioning; and the town of Onley “where all the good stores are.” Wilson is a swimmer. “I was taught by my godfather who was a lifeguard for years,” she wrote.

Anthony LoFaso of Onancock had two shark encounters. “Caught two baby sand sharks (and) released them,” he wrote.

His favorite summer comfort Chincoteague,” wrote LoFaso. “I worked on the island my last 9 years with Verizon and I fell in love with it. It’s a beach town.”

Carrie Jacobson chose Wachapreague as her favorite. “It’s my hometown, it’s quiet and beautiful and I love it,” she said.

Her favorite summer comfort food is potato salad but she enjoys tomatoes and grapes too. Jacobson said she is 100 percent prepared for summer and packs a bathing suit at all times. She knows how to swim. She “lived near Long Island Sound, spent all day, every day, all summer at the beach” when she was a kid.

Jacobson knows about sharks too. “I was a teenager, living in Connecticut, and I had a Sailfish, which is like a surfboard with a big sail on it. It was August and I had three people on the boat with me, (which is) way overloaded. There were huge swells on Long Island Sound and a strong, strong outgoing current. We got way out and couldn’t get back in, so we started to swim the boat in. We looked around, and there was a shark fin about 20 yards away. We all got on the boat, started screaming and panicking, and eventually, the Coast Guard came and got us. They were not happy. We were the fifth boat of idiot teenagers they’d had to tow in that day, and yes, they knew there were sharks around.”

Jacobson is a hummingbird lover too.
So much time is spent preparing for Pony Penning. And then sadly it seems to be all be over so very quickly. Chincoteague was shining this week. Yippee!!

Some of the famous ponies were being auctioned to the highest bidders at press time. The rest will swim back to Assateague today. The tourists were plentiful and the spending mode was powerful! Double Yippee!!

The saltwater cowboys were also quite stunning and chivalrous. Did you know the word chivalry comes from cheval, which is the French word for horse? Yeah!

Horses have 16 muscles in each ear, which allows them to rotate their hearing devices 180 degrees. I think it makes ‘em look dapper too.

Recently, I read that ponies live longer than horses. According to Arabian folklore chestnut horses are the fastest and bravest of all colors. I think there were some of those to see this year.

Leonardo da Vinci liked to draw them. He was a smart guy. The ponies have so many good qualities to share. They are survivors. They are friendly. They are definitely beautiful. Don’t they just make you smile?

“Oh and don’t laugh at the animals. The same website says, ‘If you have, that’s too bad—that horse may well remember your insult for the rest of its life. A 2010 study revealed some very surprising results about horse intelligence, especially memory. Not only does our equine friend understand our words far better than we have previously anticipated, its memory is at least as good as that of an elephant. If a horse is treated kindly, it will remember the person as a friend for as long as it lives. The horse will instantly resume friendship when it sees them again, regardless of how long they have been apart. They also remember places very well—most horses become nervous when they’re taken to a place where they’ve had a startling experience. The good memory and relatively powerful intellect of horses is not always a good thing, though. If they get bored, they can accidentally figure out how to untie themselves from posts and open latches and grain bins. Once they learn these methods of mischief, they’ll never, ever forget.’”

I tend to use the words “horse” and “pony” interchangeably. But actually there is a difference. At www.wonderopolis.org, I read: “When most of us hear the word ‘pony,’ we think of a small horse. In fact, it’s not unusual for people to believe that a pony is simply a young horse that has not grown to maturity yet. The truth, though, is that ponies and horses are not two stages of development of a single animal. They’re actually different, although related and quite similar, creatures. Ponies remain small when they’re fully grown.”

A horse is at least 14.2 hands or about four feet ten inches tall. A pony is below that size. To get an official measurement of a horse’s height, they must be measured without shoes.

Much the way I like being weighed at the doctor’s office.

Oh and by the way, if a horse has a red ribbon on his or her tail, he or she kicks. Look out.
