Murder Charges Dropped

By Linda Cicaira

Murder and firearms charges will not be prosecuted "at this time" against two men accused earlier this year of killing Robert Franklin Baytops IV of Horntown on Feb. 4, according to action taken Monday in Accomack District Court.

Jahad Arell Triggs, 21, of Chincoteague Road in New Church and Tavone Tyrell Cropper, 25, of Cedar Street in Pocomoke City, Md., were released from Accomack Jail soon after Judge Gordon Vincent signed the order, the result of a motion filed by Deputy Commonwealth's Attorney Matthew Brenner. The prosecutor wrote last Friday that the "commonwealth's evidence is not sufficient to secure a conviction at this time."

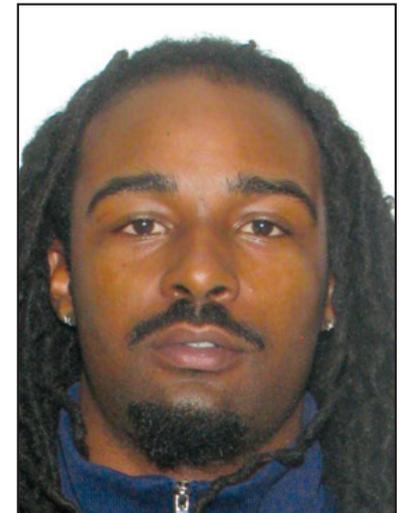

Both men had been held in jail since mid-February. Triggs was arrested Feb. 11. Cropper was arrested Feb. 12.

Triggs "was released last night," defense lawyer Eric Leckie of Norfolk said Tuesday. "Both myself and his family are extremely pleased that the system worked the way it should. The government has decided not to prosecute because it's not supported by the evidence. ... My client maintains his innocence and is looking forward to moving on with his life."

"I thought we had a good case," Sheriff Todd Godwin said. "They're out. It's not our decision whether or not they prosecute. We do the best we can. ... We're not looking for anybody else."

Disposition of Surplus School Funds Decided

The strategy of Accomack County Public Schools (ACPS) officials was to bombard supervisors with figures and a list of daily expenses, student numbers, dreams of independence, federal mandates, and endless projects and maintenance jobs.

The supervisors listened patiently to explanations and an inventory of school responsibilities Wednesday and an endless boasting of conservatism. In the end, after it was admitted there are millions of dollars stockpiled, Accomack supervisors informally agreed they are going to get back more than $1.5 million they needlessly borrowed for a capital project at Kegotank Elementary School.

Bonds for that project were taken with

Accomack School Board Moves To Stream Proceedings Online

By Linda Cicaira

Members of the Accomack School Board moved toward transparency Tuesday night when they unanimously voted to spend about $8,700 on equipment and service to stream the audio of their meetings over the Internet.

"We can be up and going in 60 days if you so desire, possibly sooner," Management and Operations Chief Mike Tolbert told the panel, which expects to start the live transmissions by June. Accomack supervisors, who have broadcast their meetings live for at least 10 years, have urged the School Board to follow their lead.

When the School Board meets in the supervisors' chambers, it can use the media equipment there. However, because it also meets at remote locations — county schools — every month, portable equipment like a digital recorder, microphones, a public address system, microphones and speakers — are needed. The equipment was estimated at a one-time cost of $6,400. The annual service fee is $2,300 for 25 meetings. The sessions also will be recorded and stored on the website.

The supervisors occasionally meet at Metompkin Elementary School and are able to broadcast from there.

School Board member Janet Turner asked if something would be done to remedy the overcrowding at Metompkin, where more than 670 students attend. Superintendent Chris Holland said a solution would be found. He also advised that a calendar for the next school year is being drafted.

During the public participation portion of the session, Danielle Wagner complained about problems at Arcadia High School, where her daughter has taken the geometry Standard of Learning test eight times and is still 1 point from passing. Wagner fears her daughter won't be able to graduate. She said her daughter has given up because she is not being helped or encouraged. That defeated feeling is causing her to possibly fail other classes as well, Wagner said.

"She does not care," Wagner said. "She cares about nothing anymore. She goes (to school) because I make her. ... Our children are not being taught in a way they can learn. They are being taught to memorize."

"There are issues of lack of communication between administrators, teachers, parents and students," Wagner told the board. "There is a lack of consistency between policies being upheld by everyone in the same school ... there are policies that are outdated and crime and punishment do not match. ... I go there, I call there. Concerns are always met with, 'We'll make things better.' They don't get better."

Noting that she has been told of other problems at Arcadia High, board member Camesha Handy said there is legitimate concern.

Sexual-Assault Nurse Examiner Now On-Call Around the Clock

Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital (RSMH), through an agreement with Chesapeake Forensic Specialists (CFS), now provides an on-call sexual assault nurse examiner (SANE) 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"We have always treated the patient's medical issues that arise from the assault," said John Peterman, administrator and vice president at RSMH. "What we have been able to add with this contract with CFS is the complex evidence collection and legal defense that the patient will need if he or she decides to pursue legal action once their assault-related medical problems are over. It is part of our Riverside Care Difference to safeguard the patient's future legal recourse, just as we would want done for a member of our own family."

CFS provides trained and certified nurses on demand to conduct sexual assault examinations.

Under the agreement, the county Sheriff's Department or State Police will be notified when RSMH patients claim that they have been sexually assaulted.

RSMH staff will provide treatment to patients alleging sexual assault. If the patient is medically unstable, appropriate medical intervention will supersede the forensic examination, according to the agreement.

"This is going to be a giant improvement," said Northampton Commonwealth's Attorney Bruce Jones. "It's a very technical field, and these examiners are not only trained in examinations, but trained in handling evidence. And they are good witnesses, excellent witnesses."

Deputy Northampton Commonwealth's Attorney Bev Leatherbury, who is the sexual assault response coordinator for the area, said having an available SANE nurse is better for patients who are able to stay at the hospital with family members rather than driving to Norfolk or Chesapeake for an examination.

"We're grateful to Riverside for doing this. I hope we don't have to use it too often, but it's good to know it's there when we need it," Jones said.

Accomack Throws Support Behind Hosting Drones at Wallops

By Linda Cicaira

Accomack supervisors pledged Tuesday to show solidarity with NASA to get the Navy to fly its drone, Triton, from Wallops Island — possibly as a tenant of Wallops Research Park (WRP).

The drone project comes with 400 jobs. It was unclear how many of those would be available to people already living on the Eastern Shore. At least 100 would be Navy personnel.

Plans for Triton surveillance drones are expected in 2018, with full capability set for 2023. The NASA runway is expected to be available for drone testing in September.

Caroline Massey, assistant director for management operations at Wallops, said contracts and “supply chain” income for local companies would be a plus for the project. She said the drones would be flown out 12 miles over the Atlantic and then fly their missions to unspecified destinations away from the area.

“We have heard they have eliminated Key West” as a potential home for the project, said Massey, adding that that leaves Wallops and Mayport, Fla.

A study of the two areas would include a public hearing regarding the economic impact locally sometime in June.

The Navy is preparing an Environmental Assessment (EA) to help with the decision-making process. The public can comment on it during a 30-day review period, scheduled to begin in late June.

The supervisors’ session, held so WRP Leadership Council could present its annual report, got tense when Chairman Tom Young accused the supervisors of creating a “negative business environment relative to NASA/Wallops Flight Facility and rocket launches.” He said prospective businesses do Internet searches of the area and could find articles about the panel’s negative statements.

Therefore, he concluded, it would be hard to market the park. Young also wants the concept of selling some of the parcels eliminated so all would be leased.

It was reported that the park was not yet finished, that contractors had gone over-schedule by more than a year and $50,000 would be needed to finish. Fifty-foot high mounds of dirt are on two parcels that Director Julie Wheatley said could be used during construction. County Administrator Steve Miner said there is money left in the fund for the project and that some of the soil could be taken for Public Works projects.

Young specifically said the comments about rocket launches scaring school children was not “credible.”

“Many of you were teachers,” Young said. “I think if there’s a rocket launch, it would be used as a teaching opportunity. The teachers will know this in advance ... they’ll put together a program ... I can’t imagine a more incredible laboratory. ... the fact that we’re going to scare these kids ... I just don’t think teachers would allow that to happen.”

Young further explained that a supervisor reported that windows were broken at Captain’s Cove housing development during a launch. “There is no evidence that this is correct,” he said, adding that it is the board’s responsibility to challenge “statements that are incorrect.”

His comments referred to Supervisor Grayson Chesser, the only member of the board to vote against building WRP and the one who spoke out about the proximity of Kegotank Elementary School to the launch hazard area.

“I appreciate your honesty,” Chesser replied. “You learn a lot more from folks who are good critics ... than people who pat you on the back. ... I’m sure you’re familiar with shock waves.”

Chesser said the first one he felt was at his daughter’s house and his grandchildren got scared. “I was trying to get away from the window without conveying that I was afraid myself.”

The second time was in October 2014 when a rocket was exploded on the launch pad after it failed. Chesser said he was at a home across from Wallops on the mainland. At another nearby farm, children screamed and adults rushed to their vehicles, shouting for others to avoid breathing the fumes.

While Chesser said he agreed launches are educational, he fears the teachers need to be educated so they can tell students what to expect. “You’ve got kids in kindergarten to fifth grade, with the largest population of special-education kids. I want to see every teacher in that school understand. ... I don’t know anyone who has ever been frightened of a launch while at school. But, it certainly could happen,” Chesser added.

Young offered to go to Kegotank Elementary a week before and the day of the next launch to talk to the teachers. Massey said a NASA program already works with the schools and would step up to do what Chesser had suggested.

Supervisors Robert Crockett and Donald Hart were annoyed that the whole board was being blamed for the opinions of one member. Both said different opinions were heard at the sessions.

“We are pro business,” Hart told Young. “What are they (prospective businesses) going to think of this? What you went out to do to make things more positive, caused you to actually made this more negative. If you had come informally, you could have afforded that sentence. I question your purpose for this. I question what you are trying to convey. ... Maybe you need to rethink putting everyone in the box.”

“I could not figure out how to do this briefing,” said Young. “I was not going to stand up here and be dishonest ... it would have been OK with me not to give the briefing. ... I don’t know how to fix a problem until there is recognition of a problem.”

Supervisor Paul Muhly said there were positive things to come out of the failed launch. “When things go wrong ... a very strong safety system is built into their launches. Nobody got killed ... I give the crew up there a lot of credit. It was successfully contained. The explosion got a lot of negative response.” And now “people know all over the county that we launch rockets.”

After the session, Chesser said, “I want to thank the board members who came to my defense. I think it was very unfair to lump the other eight board members with me and I stand by all the statements I made before.”

During the session, he explained that windows at Captain’s Cove residences were jolted in their frames from a launch and a contractor had to be hired to fix them.

At Chairman Ron Wolff’s monthly meeting on Monday, school officials said they would look into Chesser’s concerns regarding launches.

Chesser said he favors selling WRP lots. The other supervisors did not comment and no decisions were made.

Authorities Attempt to ID Two People Killed in Fiery Crash

By Linda Cicoira

Authorities are working to identify two people who were killed Sunday in a car fire following a traffic crash on Lankford Highway near Parksley.

State Police Sgt. Michelle Anaya said officers were dispatched to a two-vehicle accident with injuries at 1:12 a.m. When they arrived, they found “a 2001 Kia fully engulfed” and shutting down all lanes of Lankford Highway. The other vehicle involved was a tractor-trailer truck.

“Upon extinguishing the fire,” two bodies were found inside the car, Anaya said. “Preliminary investigations reveal that the Kia sedan was traveling southbound in the northbound lanes ... when it struck the 1995 Peterbilt tractor-trailer head on.”

The two occupants “were burned beyond recognition and attempts are being made to not only identify the individuals but to locate family members for proper notification,” the sergeant said. “This is still an active investigation and updates will be provided once they become available.”

Senior Trooper Johnny Godwin investigated the crash and Senior Trooper Lenny Sturgis led the crash reconstruction. The Norfolk Medical Examiner’s Office and Department of Forensic Science lab are working on DNA comparisons to make identifications.

Mappsville Woman Tells County To Take Better Care of Dogs

By Linda Cicoira

A local couple has rescued around 100 surrendered and stray dogs in Accomack since moving to the Eastern Shore from Michigan 11 years ago.

Now they and several others are hoping the county Board of Supervisors will consider putting restrictions on tethering canines and crack down on those who don’t get their dogs licensed.

The county could net between $10,000 and $200,000 in the process, Shawn Coyte of Mappsville told the board Wednesday. She came to that conclusion by considering the $10 license fee and the approximately 1,000 dogs that are not licensed. Coyte said if each offender is fined $100 for not obtaining the license, another $100,000 could be gained. An additional $100,000 could be collected the same way for those who don’t get rabies shots for the animals, a likely reason the dog was not licensed.

“Make the animals part of the family like they should be,” Coyte urged the supervisors. “We want to see that there’s proper shelter for the dogs. I don’t think that’s too much to ask.”

Coyte later referred to ordinances in other areas in Virginia where dogs can be chained only three hours a day. “What we want to do is make it illegal for people to leave their dog on a chain 24/7,” she said. And “if it’s snowing out, if it’s raining out, if their bowl of water is frozen.”

“Registering our animals is not being enforced,” she continued. The dogs that are chained are not getting adequate exercise and they suffer from neglect and anxiety.”

She quoted the Center for Disease Control that “dogs are 2.8 times more likely to attack an adult” if they are chained and “five times more likely to bite a child.” In addition, according to the National Canine Research Council, “all fatal dog attacks involve chained or penned dogs,” she added. Coyte said the ASPCA (Association for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) reports 81 percent of attacks involve dogs that are isolated.

Coyte said a good start would be to prohibit people from leaving their dogs out from dusk to dawn or in unfavorable weather conditions. She noted the group, which recently formed and does not have a name, likes to work with local authorities to adopt and enforce a new ordinance.

“We’re failing terribly,” she said later. “God gave us what he did to take care of it. And we are failing miserably. ... These creatures can’t help themselves ... we’re the voice for these animals. I hear all the time about dogs being neglected. We need people who are willing to stand up with us ... animals surely deserve to live their lives free from suffering and exploitation.”

Accomack Looks To Set Guidelines for Solar Systems

By Linda Cicaira

His family has been connected to the farming business on the Eastern Shore for between six and seven decades, first raising vegetables and in late 2000 leasing out their land to other growers.

Now John Van Kesteren of Onancock, who owns 600 acres with his siblings, is hoping to plant solar panels on the family's acres with his son-in-law.

"Tractors are plowing," Van Kesteren told the Accomack Board of Supervisors Wednesday. Then the land will be disced so archeologists can come in next week and study the property northwest of Tasley. "It will be a $100 million project if it goes."

"We lost out when Community Energy decided to proceed with Withams" Road site in Oak Hall for their huge solar panel project, Van Kesteren reported. "But things turned around again."

He said the family farmland is less than 1,000 yards from the Tasley substation and ideal for the enterprise. "My son-in-law spent his legal career negotiating for projects like this."

Van Kesteren's project eventually will be presented to the county's Planning Commission but before that happens, the group will review "large scale solar project impacts on agricultural lands and ... state law relative to taxation of large scale solar projects."

Supervisor Grayson Chesser wanted more leverage in the process. "As you all know ... the legislature has decided to subsidize the solar systems," he said. "We need the Planning Commission to look at this (to) give us a little more leverage. Last time we really didn't have much. I feel like we didn't get much out of the other one."

He motioned for the commission "to make sure we have the tools to give us a little more control so we're in a little better bargaining position." The supervisors voted unanimously (with Supervisor Laura Belle Gordy absent due to illness) to send the issue to the Planning Commission.

The supervisors also voted to set public hearings for May regarding changing two polling places. The Onley and Onancock polls are proposed to be combined at Nandua High School in District 7. The voting booths at Arcadia High School in Oak Hall are proposed to move to New Church Volunteer Fire & Rescue Company in District 3.

President Linda Glover of Eastern Shore Community College is hoping to have a ground-breaking ceremony in September or October for a replacement $18 million academic and administration building. Bonds for the project, a two-story structure that will be erected behind the existing facility, have not yet gotten final approval from the state.

Compared to the previous seven years, enrollment at the school was down in 2015, when there were 489 full-time and 1,131 part-time students. In 2014, 511 students were registered as full-time and 1,142 were part-time. The highest recent enrollment was in 2011 when there were 679 full-time and 1,461 part-time pupils.

"The good news is that happens when the economy improves and they can get jobs," Glover said.

Sixty percent of the students are 22 years old or younger. Seventeen percent are first-time college students and 50 percent are minority. Glover said if the last figure goes to 51 percent, more grants will become available. For the last two years, the top majors have been science, general studies, liberal arts, practical nursing and medical assisting.

In the near future, ESCC will offer Saturday classes, with students being able to obtain up to 13 credits.

The supervisors voted unanimously to renew Charter Cable's television franchise, which expired in 2003. The deal is good for 10 years with a five-year automatic renewal. The company has 761 customers in the unincorporated areas of Accomack and an unspecified number in several local towns.

"This was one of the things on the desk when I got here," explained new County Attorney Cela Berge.

Accomack Circuit Court

An Onancock area woman pleaded guilty last week in Accomack Circuit Court to four counts of welfare fraud.

In a letter to the court, Holden apologized "for not reporting my Walmart income. I was just trying to feed my children. as being a single parent with garnishments coming out of my paycheck I had to get a second job just to make ends meet. I don't have anyone to help me and I have two boys but I will definitely be willing to try to pay back whatever I have to in order to keep my jobs and raise my children."

In another case, Jillian Blair Floyd, 31, of Birdsnest Drive in Birdsnest pleaded guilty to a third or subsequent offense of petty larceny, which is a felony, and two counts of trespassing. She admitted in court documents to stealing a book from Walmart on July 19, 2015. She was remanded to jail pending update of a presentence report.

Anthony Tunnell, 35, of Turkey Run Road in Mappsville pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine, possession of marijuana and felony eluding that oc-

County Discusses Sharing Fire Companies' Billing Revenue

By Linda Cicaira

Accomack officials will eye service-bill data sent out by local volunteer fire and rescue companies with the notion of getting a portion of the proceeds.

It started because the real-estate tax rate was recently increased by 3 cents to fund nine new fire/medics. County Administrator Steve Miner told the Board of Supervisors Wednesday that he inquired and learned that 2015 figures (excluding Chincoteague and Tangier) show Accomack Department of Public Safety (DPS) "participated in 5,299 of 5,412 calls for service,"

"This is 97.9 percent of 2015 calls," ranging "from patient transport, non-transport (and) fire or vehicle crashes," Miner continued. "At the same time, all billing for these services is performed by the volunteers and at this time, none is shared back to the county. I respectfully request permission to do a more detailed review of the situation and bring that information back to the board."

A consensus was taken and eight supervisors agreed they want to see the information. Supervisor Laura Belle Gordy was absent due to illness.

DPS Director C. Ray Pruitt said the issue was brought up at the last Fire Commission meeting. "There was no decision made. It's going to be a hot topic. I've said this a thousand times ... we're all in this together ... it should be discussed there."

"I'm not against it," said Supervisor Harris Phillips. "But I definitely want to bring the fire companies in from the get-go. I'm not against them (the staff) looking into it at the same time." He suggested that when data are gathered, adding a charge to bills should be considered rather than taking a percentage from the companies.

"I'm for information to start off with," said Supervisor Paul Muhly. "Definitely want all the fire companies included. ... We cannot operate the whole system without our volunteers. We have to find a way to benefit both parties."

"Every time we add a position doing it like we do it now, we have to have a tax increase," Supervisor Robert Crockett noted. He added that 25 percent — nearly 16 cents per $100 valuation — of the real-estate tax goes for EMS and fire.

"This is a very complex issue," said Miner. "If they get revenue they are going to have obligations. You certainly need to have ... a transition plan ... I don't see it as something you can just do to our volunteers. They're so important to us." The companies historically don't force collections from those without health insurance, Miner added.

"Right now I'm against" the county getting a percentage, said Hart. "It's going to add more expense to our EMS. We're going to have to have people maintaining it. He said the companies provide the firehouses, electricity, other utilities, bunks, equipment, insurance and gas. "They provide everything. We provide personnel." Hart was irritated because "as soon as Pungoteague District" fire medics were funded "you're talking about taking money from the fire companies. That's what we find ironic," he said of himself and Supervisor Reneta Major. "We've had companies putting out tens of thousands of dollars to put it together. Give those companies a little waiver. They're trying to get it started."

"I want everybody to get paid for their building, their ambulance ... all their expenses and hopefully have something left over," said Supervisor Grayson Chesser. But, he added, the taxpayer is paying the medic and then paying a bill to the companies. "They're putting it twice. The cost is going up and up and up. I just don't think it's fair. We should get something. If volunteers are running (the call), they should get all of it."

Miner balanced out the subject. "You might look at this (information) and say, 'We really like what we've got.'"

Accomac Veteran Dies

Mr. Edward Raymond Gardner, 89, husband of the late Alice Werner Gardner and a resident Folly Creek Club Lane, Accomac, died Thursday, April 14, 2016, at Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital in Nassawadox.

A native of Meriden, Conn., he was the son of the late George Arthur Gardner and Helen Cecelia Cavanaugh Gardner. At the start of World War II, he wanted to follow his brother, Billy, into war and become a pilot. He first volunteered for the U.S. Army (his Mom had to sign for him), but soon was discharged and re-enlisted directly in the Marine Corps, where he found there were no opportunities to become a pilot, which led him to join the Air Force. It was here that he finally attained his dream of becoming a pilot, flying some of the first jet aircraft, and fighting for our country. His military career was cut short after a mid-air collision while in flight training for deployment to Korea. Another pilot missed seeing him at the end of the squadron's landing formation and Mr. Gardner was badly hurt. He spent two years recovering in a California military hospital, where he met his future wife, Alice. He always joked that if he had known he would meet Alice at the hospital, he would have crashed sooner! After recovery and four years in college on the G.I. Bill, Mr. Gardner joined the National Security Agency, where he was security management officer and assistant to the deputy director of the NSA. Due to his previous injuries, he was forced to retire early from the job he loved, ending his honorable service to the United States.

He is survived by his sister, Flora G. Sundberg of Wallingford, Conn.; niece, Bonnie Anderson of Northford, Conn.; and nephew, Barry Cavanna of Wooster, Ohio.

A private interment will be held in Wachapreague Cemetery.

Arrington Johnson Selected for Tuscany Art Program

Nandua High School junior Arrington Johnson hopes to attend VCU's School of the Arts once she graduates. An active artist, Johnson has placed in several local art competitions, including the Eastern Shore Birding and Wildlife contest two consecutive years.

Recently, the Maryland Institute College of Art (MICA) chose Johnson as one of a handful of students worldwide to collaborate with expert faculty, visit working professionals, earn college credit, learn how to put together an application portfolio that stands out, and dramatically expand their creative skills — all in Tuscany, Italy.

The Pre-College Studio Residency Program in Tuscany offers a college-level experience from June 25 to July 18. This two-credit experience focuses on drawing and painting the Tuscan landscape in the Monte Amiata region of Italy. Students will learn about art in the birthplace of the Renaissance and take field trips to Florence and other cultural venues to explore classical and contemporary art.

Student lodging is in Le Puscine, a former poderina (small farm) near Montelaterone. Pre-college students and staff are the sole guests of Le Puscine during the program, which begins with a pre-trip orientation on MICA's campus.

At the end of the program, a formal exhibition will be held in Castel del Pivano's city hall. All students participate in the final exhibition.

Said Johnson, "It's a wonderful opportunity that my mother, like so many of my other dreams, has helped me make come true. Because she's been so good to me, I want to be able to cover some of the cost on my own."

Consequently, there is a GoFundMe account set up to help offset Johnson's costs, which are over $7,000. The address is <https://www.gofundme.com/2fysdh5g>

We'll Be 'Off To See the Wizard ...'

Kevin Schwenk, music director at Northampton High School, is busy getting students ready for their performances in the musical, "The Wizard of Oz."

The production features Northampton High School and Kiptopeke Elementary School students in the familiar roles, ranging from Dorothy and her companions, the Wicked Witch of the West, flying monkeys, to the Munchkins.

The Northampton County Education Foundation provided a grant to cover a significant part of the cost for the production, with additional funding from businesses, organizations and individuals.

Noting that he is excited about the potential benefits of this project, Schwenk said, "This is an wonderful opportunity for our students to become engaged in an educational project that is culturally enriching and entertaining. Involvement in this program also promotes students' poise, self-confidence, public speaking and literacy skills."

Performances of "The Wizard of Oz" are scheduled for the evenings of June 3 and 4 and the afternoon of June 5 at Northampton High School.

Positive Parenting Program Expands

The expanded program will include classes on raising toddlers, the dangers of drugs and alcohol during pregnancy, positive relationships, and practical fatherhood.

The Positive Parenting Program is also an incentive program where participants can earn credit to purchase things like new cribs, car seats, strollers and other items in the exclusive Baby Boutique.

The classes are in a private, one-on-one setting.

Money Raised for Ronald McDonald House in Name of Local Toddler

On Sept. 15, 2004, Milan Davis was born to QuaNasia Smith and Devonte Davis of Melfa.

Milan was born with a congenital heart defect called tricuspid atresia.

In tricuspid atresia, the tricuspid heart valve is missing or abnormally developed. The defect blocks blood flow from the right atrium to the right ventricle.

Milan spent the first two weeks of life in Children's Hospital of the King's Daughters (CHKD) in Norfolk, Va. At 2 months old, he had his first open-heart surgery. Milan will have to undergo additional surgeries as he gets older, but for now, Milan is a happy, healthy 17-month-old.

Milan's parents said that when he was born, they were "excited about bringing our new baby home. To find out that he was born with a heart defect and was going to have to stay at CHKD was scary enough, but having to figure out a way to be near him was even scarier, knowing that we could not afford to pay for daily trips across the bridge, let alone pay for a hotel. Once Milan was admitted, a case worker told us about the Ronald McDonald House. We called them and they welcomed us from Day One. It was truly home away from home. They provided us with free meals and ensured that we had transportation to and from the hospital. We were told that they ask for a $25-a-night donation, but did not turn anyone away because they could not afford to pay. At the time, we really couldn't afford to pay $25 a night, but we made a small donation."

This year, a fundraiser for the Ronald McDonald House in honor of Milan was organized by Nicole Shrieves, family, friends and Vietnam Veterans Unit 61 of Onley. It raised $1,200.

other loaned money the county needed for a total of $4.5 million. It costs $75,000 in fees to have the bonds issued. Another $20,000 worth of interest already has accrued.

While several figures have been passed back and forth for the last couple of months, it was finally determined that ACPS has about $3,153,000 left of the more than $8 million in surplus that once was recorded. That would leave the School Board with $1.7 million after it moves the funds needed for the Kegotank project into the FY2016-17 operating budget. The money for that has yet to be appropriated by the supervisors.

A public hearing was set for next month to make the school surplus appropriations. A public hearing already was held for the county's budget, but no departments have been given the funds since the supervisors wanted to wait until school finances were determined. It is thought that they will turn over all the funds at the same time.

State officials have advised the county to appropriate all school carryover funds by June 30 so the division doesn't lose the money.

County Finance Director Mike Mason said the supervisors could have cut the school's upcoming budget by $2.5 million and still been within the matching percentage required.

School Finance Director Beth Onley said there was no lack of "transparency" with what she called the accumulated "contingency funds. If we do (ask for) everything every year, then I think there will be no more confusion."

Instead of doing that, the school system had been requesting carryover funds be appropriated at the end of each year. When money was left from previous years, they did not always ask for it again.

"Calm down, Mr. (Ron) Wolff," she told the chairman of the board of supervisors when he interrupted her presentation to ask a question. "I'm the one who should be nervous."

Wolff waited and let other members speak, but finally inquired if it really took months to get to this point. An answer was given by Superintendent Chris Holland, who said he had asked for and received the bottom-line figure within minutes of taking the top post in January.

"When I met with you all, I told you about it," Holland said. "I had to make decisions that should have been made by other superintendents and they know it."

Monday night Holland and his cabinet gave a presentation at Wolff's monthly district meeting in Atlantic. Holland said he would be a good steward of the county's money. "First thing I do when I look at my checkbook is I look at the balance ... I'm very tight with money... it drives my wife up a wall. I'm going to be conservative with this money."

He also said cuts to personnel were made and would be announced later. Regarding the $200 that teachers get so they don't have to use their own funds to buy school supplies, Holland said, "That's a lot of money."

Onancock resident Margaret Hampton, a parent and school activist, seemed amazed. "Two hundred dollars?" she asked. That's it? Why can't you buy them paper? I spend that much every day at the grocery store."

Showing Kindness and Remembering Kenny Collins

Eastern Shore News. Kenny was diagnosed with a cancer that led to his death at the age of 50.

The essence of Kenny Collins was captured by stories in last week's edition of this newspaper. And then on Thursday, several friends spoke eloquently and fondly about Kenny at his funeral, bringing some laughter amid the tears that were shed for someone who had touched more lives than most of us can possibly reach. Many of the current and former athletes he coached were in attendance, as well as hundreds of friends.

I write today not to further eulogize Kenny, because I can hear him saying, "Enough is enough," but hopefully to draw a lesson from something he did once that can be of value to those who knew him and even those who didn't.

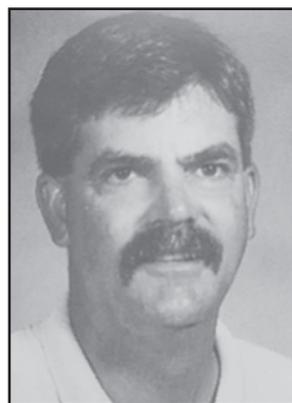

I first knew Kenny from playing baseball at Shore Little League as a young boy. Years later, we would twice share a duck blind and enjoy fine hunts. Just recently, he coached my son in baseball.

But I do not profess to have been a close friend of Kenny's. Ours was not the type of relationship where we tried to stay in touch. It was the sort that we stopped and talked if our paths crossed.

That's why I found all the more remarkable a favor he did for me many years ago.

My daughter, now 23, desperately wanted a Cabbage Patch doll for Christmas. She must have been about 6 or so and was convinced Santa Claus would be placing a Cabbage Patch doll under the tree.

At the time, this particular doll was all the rage — high in demand but short in supply. There were stories of parents waiting outside stores three to four hours and then rushing the aisles in hopes of grabbing the last of a limited supply of Cabbage Patch dolls.

Kenny Collins

I might get a doll.

It was about a week before Christmas, and despite my stance about not succumbing to the craziness associated with the zeal to acquire a Cabbage Patch Doll, I was beginning to panic. Each day as Christmas approached, I could see just how much my daughter wanted this doll. I was also beginning to realize no other doll would do.

And then out of the blue, Kenny called. He was then the manager of the Best Products store in Virginia Beach. This was before he realized he could never be truly happy unless he was coaching and working with kids. Thus, he left a successful career in business, took a pay cut and became a teacher and a coach.

As he said in his farewell message printed in the paper Wednesday, "The life of a kid was always the life for me." I'm sure he never had any regrets about leaving the business world for a job where he could still wear a baseball uniform and play games.

He told me he had read my column and was sending by overnight courier a Cabbage Patch doll, just in time for Christmas. This was before our duck-hunting trips, and I had lost touch with him since our baseball-playing days. I don't even think I knew where he was living then.

I still wonder what prompted him

I wrote a column about how I would just have to be the Mr. Scrooge of my household this Christmas, because I couldn't see waiting outside a store and joining a mad frenzy in the hopes I to take time from a busy schedule and help out someone he only vaguely knew at the time.

I thanked him profusely, but the real gratitude was seeing the look on my daughter's face on Christmas morning when she got her Cabbage Patch doll.

So, if you want to honor the life of Kenny Collins, do what the bumper sticker says and "commit a random act of kindness."

We all stretch ourselves for our friends and loved ones, but how often do we go out of our way for someone we hardly know?

I know firsthand when you are the beneficiary of such an act, you never forget it or the person who performed it.

I was given the boot last week by the lone person you want to tell you "Adios," "Sayonara," "Adieu" or "Aloha."

Now, I do have to check in every now and then with my oncologist, Dr. Drury Stith, but he said my recent PET scan was as good as we could hope. He explained that a mass that was causing all kinds of issues and identified as B-cell lymphoma in 2014 was now reduced to scar tissue and not showing any abnormal behavior after a half-dozen chemotherapy sessions.

Dr. Stith, who in my opinion is a treasure for the Eastern Shore, said, "I stopped telling patients 25 years ago that they were cured of cancer, but this is an excellent report."

He had told me at the outset that my diagnosis was a death sentence when he was in medical school, adding that was some years ago. But, today, with the advances in medicine, Dr. Stith explained, what I had was treatable with a high degree of success.

So, there is an extra bounce in my step and a new perspective for a future that I can share with my loved ones, including six grandchildren I have gained in the past three years.

But sometimes I think, "What if it hadn't turned out so well for me? Did I live my life in such a way people will remember me as a positive force in the community? Did I do the small favors and show kindness when it counted? Did I think of others and not just myself?"

I have had friends who were not so lucky. They had their life cut short and missed out on seeing major events in the lives of their loved ones.

In tribute to all those friends and others who are remembered sometimes by the small things they did, I am offering a column today I wrote in 2002 on Kenny Collins while at the

Northampton Tops Nandua in Clash of Shore Soccer Powers

By Bill Sterling

Northampton scored two goals in five minutes in the first half and tacked on one with 1:46 remaining in the game to earn a 3-1 win over Nandua Monday night in Onley. Both teams were unbeaten in Shore District play coming into the game.

Arturo Guildo scored at about the 20-minute mark to give the Jackets a 1-0 lead, and Jesus Maldonado scored five minutes later.

Victor Esteban scored for Nandua on an assist from Jonathan Esteban about 14 minutes later to pull the Warriors to within one goal, but Northampton's Jordan Jacobs netted a goal with just under two minutes left to seal the win.

Gabe Webb played an outstanding game in goal, making numerous tough stops and pinning the Warriors in their end with deep kicks.

Nandua coach Paul Nolz said, "Northampton played an excellent game. We had some early chances before they settled in. Jesus Maldonado is a very dangerous player for them. My congratulations go to a quality team. They were the better team tonight. If we want to keep up, we have some work to do."

Northampton Coach John Gorman, who substituted frequently without any drop-off in play, said he loves "the attitude and chemistry with this team."

"I have 17 starters, but only 11 are allowed on the field at one time," added Gorman.

On Wednesday, Nandua beat Chincoteague 5-1.

Jackets Defeat W&L

Northampton defeated 2015 state champion finalist Washington & Lee 5-0 at home Friday night, stamping the Jackets as one of the heavyweights in 1A soccer this season.

Arturo "Junior" Gildo scored two goals and Noah Leffell, Billy Martinez and Elion Morales scored one each.

Jacket Girls Top Essex

Erica Head scored three goals to lead Northampton to a 4-0 win over Essex Friday night. Ashley Carpenter assisted on the first-half goal.

"The defense had a great game, communicating well. Elizabeth Lilliston had a great game in the goal," said Jacket coach Tabi Webb.

Jacket Girls Fall to MW

Northampton fell to 1A soccer powerhouse Maggie Walker Tuesday 5-1. Ashlyn Arnold tied the game 1-1 off a cross by Taylor Webb early in the first half, and the game remained tied until the last six minutes of the game, when Maggie Walker scored two goals.

"I was happy with how we played the first half," said Northampton coach Tabi Webb. "I think the defense got tired in the last minutes. They haven't seen that much offense from another team all season. I was proud of the girls for not giving up."

Nandua Girls Win Pair

The Nandua girls' soccer team defeated Arcadia 5-1 Monday, with Ryan Wright scoring three goals for the Warriors and Yalexia Ruiz and Vanessa Esteban adding one each.

On Wednesday, the Warriors edged Laurel 3-2, with Wright scoring all three goals.

Jackets Top Arcadia

Northampton blanked Arcadia 3-0 Wednesday night as Elian Morales scored two goals and Noah Leffel getting a goal by heading in a free kick.

Jacket Netters Dominate

The Northampton girls' tennis team remained unbeaten with convincing wins over Essex 8-1 and West Point 7-2.

Webb Lowers ERA

Tyler Webb lowered his earned run average to 1.69 with two scoreless outings in the past week and also earned his first win of the season for the Scranton-Wilkes Barre minor league team.

Webb, a 2009 Northampton graduate, tossed three innings of 1-hit ball and allowed no runs against Syracuse April 14.

Then on Sunday, the 6', 6" southpaw retired the final batter of the eighth inning and earned the win when his team scored in the ninth inning.

Shore Little League opened its 60th season Saturday, April 9, at Randy Custis Memorial Park in Nassawadox. More than 250 athletes comprising 22 T-ball, softball and baseball teams and their coaches gathered on the field. Michelle Ferebee, president of Shore Little League, announced each team and thanked all the sponsors, including Exmore Rotary, which has sponsored a team for all 60 years of the league's history. All the volunteers were thanked, including Thomas James, who recently completed two new dugouts on the softball field and is planning more dugouts. Ferebee also presented Phil Custis, president of Randy Custis Memorial Park, and Roger Eitelman, executive director, with a $2,000 donation from Donnie Kellam to help the park improve its facilities.

Flounder, Tautogs Highlight Fishing Action

David Shields of Wachapreague was leading Captain Zed's 26th annual Spring Flounder Tournament as of Wednesday with a 6-2.5 pound, 25-inch flounder, with Ron Greaser, another local angler, holding second place and leading the Wachapreague Marina Flounder Tournament with a 6-0 pounder measuring 24.5 inches. Turk Ridenour held second place in Captain's Zed tournament and third place in the Marina tournament with a 5-13 pound flattie.

Here's other fishing news from Dr. Julie Ball.

A lot could happen on the spring fishing scene ... if the weather would just cooperate. Gusty winds, crazy fronts, and unseasonal drops in temperatures are making it a challenge for the spring season to come together.

Tautog are a good bet, especially within bay waters. Inshore anglers are scoring with tog using fiddler crabs and clams on most lower bay structures and wrecks. When boats can get out, the rocks and tubes of all four artificial islands and the pilings near the High Rise section of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel are providing the best results, but the Concrete Ships can be more accessible in windy conditions.

Most folks who are toughing out the weather are catching limits of fish ranging up to about 5 pounds, but some 8 and 9 pounders are also around. Deeper ocean wrecks are also holding nice tog, along with some nice seabass, which are still illegal to keep until mid-May. If tautog is on your list, you had better hurry since the season closes on May 1.

Anglers are thrilled that the flounder are here and biting, but gusty weather is making flounder fishing conditions less than favorable, and keeping the water fairly dirty. Although flatfish anglers are finding some decent fish in protected areas, folks are working hard for their catches. Some flatties ranging from 17 inches and up have come from both the Eastern Shore seaside inlets and the southside inlets lately.

Drum enthusiasts are still anticipating the first catches of big red and black drum near the Eastern Shore, but for now anglers are mostly watching for weather openings.

Ron Greaser was leading the Wachapreague Marina Tournament and second in Captain's Zed Flounder Tournament as of Wednesday with a 6-pound flattie. The tournaments end Sunday.

By Linda Cicaira

I worked for a large daily newspaper when I first started in this business many years ago. During that time, I covered one of the most gruesome stories I've ever encountered, the most appalling aspect of which was not reported because it was decided (not by me) that part of the incident was not "breakfast material."

Those editors! They were right that it wasn't material for hot tea and muffins. But I wanted to tell people how bad it really was. Still, to be fair, I've never read or heard anything like it reported before or since. And it was more than 30 years ago. Perhaps things that devious have been incorporated into horror movies or novels of the same genre, but the term that was used during a trial to describe this monstrous act remains too much for us mere mortals.

So what's my point? I don't know. I was just thinking about it again. It is one of those things that doesn't go away. And I always seem to ponder this when I hear people complain about news being all the bad stuff that happens.

Sorry folks. That's what news is. Where do you think the saying "no news is good news" really came from? The rest of it is what I like to refer to as "fluff" or sometimes as "photo opportunities worthy of a caption."

"Juicy" stories are not made of cotton candy. Don't get me wrong. I love that pink or blue sugar. But, the front page is for murder, death, taxes, money, disputes and change. But that's just my opinion and I am a peon, who occasionally gets to talk to the powers.

My younger brother always teases me about what I like to read for pleasure. He calls my preference "murder, death, kill." Well yeah. I'm too cynical for the rest. The only thing we really have is our life, so it is pretty darn precious along with the lives of our loved ones. I also like to read southern novels, which are usually filled with tragedy. Go figure.

And I love to watch comedy. Oh yippee! Nothing like a good laugh. And you might be surprised to hear that I do not like the kind of comedy that embarrasses anyone in the company. Long ago in another time, when I was a toddler and Soupy Sales got hit by cream pies on his weekly show, I would run from the room. Hmmm. Maybe because of the embarrassment or maybe because of the wasted food.

Yes, food fights are incomprehensible to me. Except that time I threw a tomato in the direction of the now ex-husband. I could have hit him if I had wanted. I was darn sorry I had done it because I had to wipe off the wall. But I still managed to salvage the rest of the tomato, so all was not lost. So I guess what I'm trying to say is that the saves are also worthy of the news — those heroic acts that make us all feel thankful and the wisdom of the old that needs to be passed along.

In 2009, 100-year-old Annie Custis Borden, a native of Accomack, told me that when she wasn't eating birthday cake, she preferred Hayman potatoes and collard greens and drinking coffee.

Back in 2012, Lucy Mears of Belle Haven was 106. She knew that breakfast was the most important meal of the day so I figure I should report that it could be the secret to a long life. She feasted on two pieces of scrapple, two scrambled eggs with cheese, a slice of raisin toast, a cut-up banana, glasses of juice and milk, and a cup of coffee every morning.

Pit Bulls and Animal Control Facility Get Bad Wrap

Dear Editor:

I am a volunteer at several SPCAs, including the Outer Banks and Virginia Beach SPCAs, and have also done some work at the Norfolk SPCA.

I recently became involved with the Eastern Shore Animal Control Facility. Unfortunately, there seems to be, in some cases, a negative perception about this facility. I believe many people feel that if a dog ends up in this facility, it is a death sentence.

There is also some very bad press about a breed of dog, the pit bull or pit bull mix.

When I first started my shelter volunteering, in Virginia Beach, I became exposed to this breed and found that some of them were a product of their environment. I found dogs that were raised under proper conditions to be some of the most wonderful dogs I have ever spent time with. I have also worked with some that were very much abused and yet have turned out to be some of the most loving dogs I have ever had the privilege of becoming involved with. I have become, very much, a fan of this breed and absolutely love working with them.

There is a connection with this breed and the Eastern Shore Animal Control Facility. Both share a misconception! Back a couple of months ago, I visited the Eastern Shore Animal Control Facility. The main reason for the visit was because I was informed by the Eastern Shore Animal Hospital about two German shepherds that were surrendered and desperately needed to be placed. I visited the facility, met staff and also met the two dogs. I had some experience with a German shepherd rescue, so I was going to try and help place these dogs. As it turns out, Eastern Shore Animal Control was able to place these two dogs in a rescue.

This brings us back to the misconception about this facility. They do the best possible job they can to place dogs, as well as cats, in new homes or rescues. Euthanizing is only a last resort when all else fails, after an extended stay and lack of space or in case of sickness or severe aggression. Contrary to common belief, these animals are not automatically euthanized at the end of their quarantine.

This bring us to why I made my second visit to this facility, and that was to check on the pit bull situation. These are the dogs that end up in trouble on the Eastern Shore. Some dog shelters will not accept this breed and most rescues that do handle them are full. If, in fact, one of these dogs has been there for an extended stay and cannot be placed in a rescue, it may have to be euthanized.

As a volunteer at the Outer Banks SPCA, we accept these dogs and have had great success placing them. With that in mind, a joint effort was worked out between the Outer Banks SPCA and the Eastern Shore Animal Control facility to start, on a case-by-case basis, moving these dogs to the Outer Banks.

The first one, which I named Lillie, was at the Eastern Shore Animal Control Facility for a couple of months and was moved to the Outer Banks SPCA on a Wednesday and two days later was adopted. The second one, again at the Shore facility for a couple of months, was adopted after nine days. This dog, I named Jessie, and she was adopted by a vacationing couple and moved back to Pennsylvania.

'Marketplace' Health Insurance Leaves a Lot To Be Desired

Dear Editor:

Those who have dealt with the greatest political "see what I have done" for the people of the United States, "The Great Marketplace" (Obamacare), are lucky if they don't have any complications applying and are panic-free from letters telling them, "Thank you for using The Marketplace, but we need further financial information."

Never mind that they have already sent their first

From the OutPost

By Candy Farlow

There's this young lady who, along with her mother, shares a home with me.

She's my niece and she probably won't like being mentioned in this column, but this time I'll ask for forgiveness rather than permission.

After all, she owes me a favor or two. That's because I've been spending hours on the computer researching scholarship opportunities for which she might qualify. You see, she is — at last — leaving for college this fall, and we're trying to cobble together her financial package. I said "at last" because her leaving the nest was delayed a couple of years by that awful "C" word. Yep, she was only 17 when she was diagnosed with high-grade mucopidermoid carcinoma and, just for an added bonus, Graves Disease.

I'll spare you all the details of her surgeries and treatments only to tell you I never heard her utter one complaint, even when it became evident she wouldn't be leaving for college as planned. "God's got this," was — and is — her mantra.

The blessing in all this is that we had her home with us two extra years while she recovered — and got her freshman and sophomore studies completed at ESCC.

But now, with the blessings of her doctors, she is officially headed to Liberty University in August and she has the tuition payment plan to prove it! Thus, my scholarship research activities — which have been enlightening to say the least.

For example, did you know one could receive $4,000 from the Asparagus Club or an endowment for parapsychological research? (I already had a premonition she wouldn't get either of these). I also found out if she were Catholic and had a last name of Zolp, she would have it made. (We don't have time for a conversion or a name change). Then there is the scholarship at UNC-Greensboro for females who live on campus, have never been married and don't own a car. (There has to be a story behind that one.)

My research also led me to learn it's too bad she isn't a redhead, left-handed or skilled at duck calling. She also should have held on to her Pokeman trading cards. Who knew?

She doesn't know it yet, but she will be applying for the Useless Trivia Knowledge Scholarship and the one from the American Fire Sprinkler Association — and I think she will be a shoo-in for the $2,000 for the best plan for survival during a zombie apocalypse. (And here I thought she was wasting time watching "The Walking Dead.")

She already has applied for a number of scholarships, including the Famous Person Who Shares My Birthday. That one required her to write an essay on Carol Burnett. Still, she has yet to complete her essay on Moose Tracks Ice Cream which could net her a cool thousand bucks (that's cash, not a herd of hypothermal male moose).

The last one for which I expect her to complete an application is the — no kidding — Scholarship for Aggressive Scholarship Applicants, which only requires sending copies of all your other applications. This is offered by Debt.com, which specializes in just what we are trying to avoid — student loans.

Which reminds me, I've got to get back to my research.

I want to see if there is a scholarship for living with a weird aunt.

Now that one would be a sure bet!

premium payment and haven't even used the insurance or received their insurance card. Plus the cost of their doctor's visit increases from $15 to $40.

Then they have to talk to the great Express Script folks every time they have a prescription filled and this is after they have already told Express Script representatives they prefer to keep their own pharmacy. And then they're told, "But you'll save money by getting a 90-day supply instead of going every month to your pharmacy." And when asked, "Don't you think you are taking business from these pharmacies?" they tell you, "Oh, no. You will still be purchasing your creams, ointments and antibiotics from them."

Well, what I want to know is how many creams, ointments and antibiotics are being bought to keep these smaller, more personal pharmacies open? And when asked about what if a person cannot make payment on their medication — do they have a payment plan, the answer is "Oh, yes," but no further information is given. And each year, they have to let Express Script know that they still want to remain at their pharmacy. But they continue to receive correspondence or phone calls alerting them that their out-of-pocket cost could increase.

And all during these conversations, you are still trying to understand "The Marketplace," but they are getting your money.

Please Move High-School Graduation Outdoors

Dear Editor:

We would like to petition Accomack County Schools (Arcadia High School) to change the venue for the 2016 Arcadia High School Graduation Ceremony from the gymnasium to the football field.

I am the head of a family of six who would love to attend my daughter's graduation. I understand that the gym would ensure weather is not a factor, but due to the limited space, not all can participate in our children's achievement. I am sure I am not the first nor the last parent to express this wish to allow for the entire community to be involved in our children's milestone.

Mayor Tarr's Accomplishments Should Not Be Diminished

Dear Editor:

Politics can be a divisive business. We have only to turn on the television to see that. Fortunately, Chincoteague has managed to avoid this, in part due to Jack Tarr's 17 years as mayor. Mayor Tarr's politics of inclusion and careful decision-making has helped our community grow and prosper.

This has happened even while very difficult issues such as the future of Assateague beach and the protection of Chincoteague have worried us. Addressing these threats as well as possible has been at the core of Mayor Tarr's work, and that of the excellent town staff.

This year, the possibility for something different and a new mayor has opened up. We have suddenly seen concerted efforts to poke holes in the mayor's record and claim that something different could and should be done. We hear, "I can do better." Perhaps this is true, but why do some have to try to discredit the popular existing mayor?

This is not a constructive way forward. Promises are promises and can often not be fulfilled although, as in the country at large, they can fulfill a political purpose. We need to be careful in our decisions. And our promises.

David Johnson, Chincoteague
