The Chincoteague Town Council voted unanimously Monday to spend $300,000 for 30 acres on the mainland so wells could be drilled there for drinking water.

The official approval readies the town for next week when a conditional use permit is scheduled to be considered by county supervisors and planning commissioners. The town already paid $11,000 for the option on the land, which will be applied to the total.

Last April, wells used for drinking water on Chincoteague were found to have high levels of PFAS (per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances) from firefighting foam used at the fire training area at Wallops Island. Testing at the new site showed no PFAS, no arsenic or other contaminants.

Chincoteague High students attended the session after spending the day with town officials. They recommended the leaders consider putting public restrooms on Maddox Boulevard, add some additional events to bring tourists to the island in the off-season, revitalize memorial park, put in roadside bins to encourage people to recycle, and refurbish buildings in the historic district.

The officials said they are already working on the restroom and park requests. “Curbside recycling was discussed three or four years ago,” Public Works Director Harvey Spurlock reported. “The council wasn’t interested… but if the sentiment has changed, I will look into it.”

Margaret Nichols of Seaside Properties asked the town to help alleviate water problems that she claims were caused by sidewalks installed downtown.

“My building is sinking and falling apart,” she said. “In 1980 my buildings were featured in National Geographic. … I need your help. I need water away from my buildings.” Nichols said she first made a request for gutters two and a half years ago. She said since then she’s been told to get her own. “My entire building is crumbling. I need help. You’re going to find me under it. … Sidewalks weren’t made for... (Continued on Page 6)

Northampton supervisors granted a special use permit to landscaping contractor Gary Wagner to expand his borrow pit, or open-pit sand mine, from 10 to 18 acres. The motion passed by a slim 3-2 vote after more than an hour of discussion and debate Tuesday evening.

It was the second time in little more than a year that supervisors granted Wagner an SUP to expand the borrow pit.

The first time was April 2017, when Wagner expected his facility to receive dredge spoils from boring the new section of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. That plan fell through when sample spoils of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel were not to receive dredge spoils, but to receive a disposal site without a protective liner. That plan fell through when sample spoils did not approve it.

Wagner reapplied for the SUP on March 6, not to receive dredge spoils, but to expand his existing business. One of Wagner’s objectives is stockpiling used concrete and asphalt for recycling and resale. Stockpiles can be recycled onsite, a more economical option than hauling loads to Pocomoke City, Md., to be recycled and paying to have the end product shipped back.

Last month, the county planning commission reviewed Wagner’s application but did not approve it. They were concerned the borrow pit may be impacted by wells, septic tanks, or drain fields on neighboring properties. Supervisors requested the planning commission provide empirical evidence supporting their concerns and tabled the matter until they received a response.

Director of Planning and Zoning Susan McGhee shared the planning commission’s recommendation with supervisors May 8, which allowed the SUP but limited facility operations to daylight hours, prohibited operations on Sunday, and required a 175-foot vegetative buffer.

Supervisors found the planning commission’s recommendations overly restrictive, and later modified them, but not before Supervisor John Coker recommended another restriction: No asphalt may be immersed in water.

Graduate research conducted at the University of Florida in 1998, shared with supervisors by a concerned citizen, suggested that asphalt is relatively inert when it’s dry, but when it’s submerged in water it leaches out lead, a poison. Chromium and barium were also found to have leached from the asphalt into the water in the study.

Coker’s request aligned with the Department of Mines, Minerals and Energy requirement that prohibits dumping asphalt in water. Wagner’s open-pit sand mine has been permitted by DMME since 2004.

Wagner agreed to move his concrete and asphalt toward the rear of the facility, away from his ponds.

Supervisors discussed how wide the vegetative buffer around the facility should be. It was originally 200 feet wide, but supervisors allowed Wagner to reduce it to 100 feet when they granted him the SUP for the first time last year. The planning commission wanted the buffer restored to 175 feet.

Wagner asserted a 100-foot buffer was adequate, considering its composition of mature trees, not a row of seedlings. He added the vegetative buffer at his facility was much bigger than that of his closest competitor, Branscombe Inc. Supervisor Robert Duer pointed out that the Branscombe facility was not near any residence. He favored Wagner extending the buffer an extra 50 feet, at least on the north side of the facility by the subdivision.

Supervisor David Fauber motioned to grant Wagner the SUP with several conditions: Stockpiling brick, concrete, and asphalt is permitted, but asphalt in water is not. A 100-foot vegetative buffer is required. The facility may operate from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, except on Sunday.

The motion carried, 3-2, with supervisors Robert Duer and Oliver Bennett opposed.

Area Agencies Make Funding Requests to Northampton Supervisors

By Stefanie Jackson

July 1, the first day of fiscal year 2019 in Northampton County, is fast approaching, but Finance Director John Chandler had a balanced budget ready for supervisors April 30.

Chandler said the budget was initially “$2.5 million (dollars) out of balance” when he compared projected revenues and expenses for next year.

The 2019 budget committee examined all county department requests and scaled down new expenses to about $1.07 million.

Supervisor Robert Duer said Chandler used “better forecasting” to add nearly $590,000 more in expected revenue to the budget. That figure, plus about $480,000 in unspent revenue from the current fiscal year, balanced out the $1.07 million in additional expenses.

Outside agencies also presented supervisors with funding requests for the upcoming fiscal year.

Eastern Shore Public Library Executive Director Cara Burton remarked that after the Bookmobile went out of commission, “the community made a conscious decision to recognize that libraries have a different function nowadays than just handing out books and letting people borrow them,” including providing computer access and public meeting spaces.

The library asked for $138,000, not quite what it received from Northampton County, a $5,000 increase from last year, mainly for additional security equipment.

The Eastern Shore of Virginia Resource Conservation and Development Council, focusing on sustainable farming and water quality, requested level funding (the same as last year), about $7,300.

Star Transit requested a funding increase of about $20,000 in grant matching funds for the proposed new “green” route that would provide on-demand, curbside service primarily for elderly and disabled individuals who need transportation to medical services. Star Transit’s total request is less than $110,000.

The Eastern Shore of Virginia Tourism Commission, promoting the region through the welcome center in Cape Charles, a wide social media presence, and other efforts, was represented by Executive Director Kerry Allison. The commission is funded in part by a percentage of Northampton’s transient occupancy taxes and hopes to exceed the $144,000 it received from the county last year.

The Small Business Development Center, supporting existing and emerging small businesses through classes, seminars, and counseling, requested level funding of $2,000.

The Eastern Shore Soil and Water Conservation District, serving both Accomack and Northampton counties, requested level funding of nearly $11,000 for environmental education programs and part of its education director’s salary. The biggest program the district supports is Envirothon, a two-day event challenging high school students to tackle real-world environmental problems.

The ESVA 911 Commission requested additional funding for 911 call-processing software, computer hardware, a radio receiver, and other equipment and services. Supervisors approved about $258,000 for the 911 commission last year.

Northampton schools Chief Financial Officer Brook Thomas presented FY 2018 budget amendments for emergency repairs at the high school and Occohannock Elementary School as discussed with supervisors April 23.

The three expenditures will be funded by the school capital improvement budget. A rooftop HVAC unit, which is over the high school cafeteria and experienced total failure, will cost $28,000 to replace. Repairing the high school’s chilled water piping system, damaged after the early January blizzard, will cost $14,000.

Repairing the Occohannock HVAC system, which failed over spring break, flooded part of the facility, and left large rust stains across the floor for maintenance to remove, will cost $10,000.

The ceiling tiles in the Northampton High School cafeteria are also stained, and Supervisor John Coker said on April 23 that the sight makes him “want to vomit.”

Thomas assured Coker that in addition to the HVAC unit over the high school cafeteria, the ceiling tiles will be replaced and are “not a capital issue.”
the merchants downtown to get the water away.”

Tammy Mitchell, of Capt. Zack’s Seafood, complained about the town sign ordinance. “I kind of feel the issue is outdated. We live in a seaside beach town. It should be tourist oriented. As a business owner who is seasonal, I feel very limited. ... You sell a certain item but you can’t advertise it,” she said.

She passed around photos of other similar businesses that use the same type of sign she was prohibited from erecting. “I feel like if it’s good for one business, it’s good for another. I don’t feel like it’s always fair.”

Maria Paccioretti, of the Oyster Bay II, complained a house in her neighborhood is in “total disrepair. We have written to the owners and never gotten results.” Paccioretti noted broken beams, dead trees, grass more than a foot tall, and holes in the roof. “It is an eyesore in the community and needs to be addressed.”

She also mentioned nine duplexes planned for Hibiscus Drive, a private road that floods and is in constant need of pothole repair. She said the road also has no outlet.

Mayor Arthur Leonard told her to speak to Zoning Administrator Kenny Lewis about the dilapidated structures. No one addressed the duplexes.

The council unanimously voted to rename the Island Activity Center after Dr. Donald J. Amrien, a longtime physician on the island. They also were unanimous in a decision to charge a sticker fee for each kayak thereby disallowing the current practice of buying one sticker for a commercial fleet.

Leonard broke a tie regarding water meter repairs. Council members Ben Ellis, Eddie Lewis, and Ellen Richardson favored property owners paying for materials only when repairs are needed as did Leonard. Councilmen Gene Wayne Taylor and Jim Frese and Vice Mayor Denise Bowden were opposed.

Speaking during a public participation portion of the meeting, Councilman-elect Matthew Reed said he wanted a better understanding of proposed changes in categories in the zoning amendment. He feared the infringement of land rights. “I oppose these types of things. Our zoning is pretty strict as it is,” he said.

Planning Commissioner Chairman Ray Rosenberger explained the proposed changes were aimed at taking “redundancy” out of the ordinance. He said most of the businesses could go under the catchall title of “retail.”

The majority of the members, Frese, Taylor, Richardson, and Lewis, voted against making the ordinance changes, which were recommended by the planning commission.

According to a May report, the Chincoteague Police Department received 365 calls for service resulting in 44 criminal investigations including three marijuana possessions, a threat to kill, an assault on an officer, a grand larceny, two petty larcenies, a fugitive from justice, a violation of probation, eight DUIs, three Breathalyzer refusals, three drunk in public, a credit card theft, a credit card forgery, a burglary, a child neglect, three counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, a stolen license plate possession, seven arrests for underage possession of alcohol, and four counts of allowing a dog to run at large.

The investigations led to 33 arrests with 44 charges. The department also responded to three accidents, nine alarms, 13 suspicious activities, 11 civil problems, four assisting other agencies, five welfare checks, six animal complaints, and six noise complaints. In addition, 50 security checks, eight public service calls, nine fingerprintings, and 19 traffic controls were conducted. The department issued 85 summonses for traffic offenses and 40 warnings. The officers also answered 24 calls for the Fish and Wildlife Service at Assateague in Virginia and 93 calls for the National Park Service in Maryland.

The Virginia Port Authority staff has recommended approval of a $94,000 grant to construct a finger pier at Curtis Merritt Harbor. The authority board will vote on May 22. The project would add 16 slips to the harbor.

Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries approved no-wake zones near Memorial Park, the Harbor, and Lewis Creek. It rejected a proposed buoy in the Memorial Park/Assateague Channel area. The approved buoys are expected to be installed by the end of May.
Two Tried To Claim $3,000 Hitman’s Fee in Murder-for-Hire Scheme

By Linda Cicoira

Two young men, accused in the murder-for-hire scheme near Painter last October, were identified by Johnson as the shooter in an attempt on his life, and Aaron Jamarcus Bowens, also known as Easy and BOBO, 22, of Big Pine Road in Painter, has been charged along with several others for attempted murder and related crimes.

Records state Cynthia Harmon, 52, of Dennis Drive in Parksley, disclosed in a telephone conversation with Evron Terrell Strand, 43, who was in Accomack Jail at that time, that both Rodgers and Bowens “came to her claiming to have shot N. Johnson and to claim the money for the hit.”

He argued that Roquan Rogers had never been in trouble before, has a one-year-old child and another on the way, and needs to work to support his family.

While on the witness stand, Roquan Rogers said he didn’t know the outcome of his brother’s trial, although he had talked to him since the conviction. He said he only knew Johnson because Johnson went to school with his brother, and he did not know the woman who was shot during the Johnson shooting incident. Roquan Rogers said he works as a waterman.

Tucker Terry (a local seafood dealer and Strand of asking Bowens to make the hit. During a search of his home gang-related notes were confiscated.

Debrandon Harmon, 30, who now lives on Dogwood Drive in Melfa and is the son of Cynthia Harmon, was suspected of being solicited to kill Johnson.

Debrandon Harmon was also charged with possession with intent to sell cocaine, possession of cocaine while possessing a firearm, conspiring to commit murder, conspiring to intimidate a witness, and receiving stolen property.

Indictments also accuse Cynthia Harmon and Strand of asking Bowens to make the hit. During a search of his home gang-related notes were confiscated.

Keenan Jibrel Berry, 26, of Jermaine Lane in Parksley, and Deshawn Markiese Drummond, no age or address available, were also charged and are also believed to have been asked to participate.

Strand is serving nine years for three counts of distribution of cocaine. Akeem Rogers is awaiting sentencing for cocaine distribution charge and is awaiting trial on another charge.

Northan Acquitted Of Malicious Wounding

It took an Accomack Circuit Court jury about 20 minutes Wednesday to acquit a Parksley man of malicious wounding.

The panel also determined that Brian Marquis Northan, 30, of Leslie Trent Road, was not guilty of the lesser felony offense of unlawful wounding and misdemeanor assault and battery. Judge Glen Tyler thanked and dismissed the jury and then told Northan, who had been in jail since October 2016, he was free to go.

But before he could leave, deputies put the handcuffs and leg irons back on Northan and escorted him across the street to Accomack Jail so he could be processed before being released a short time later.

Northan was accused of beating John Anthony Foster Jr., of Wattsville, with a wrench, breaking his arm, and gashing him in the head. He was not prosecuted for a count of stealing Foster’s car.

At a previous hearing, the co-defendant, Lamonty Demetris Johnson, 25, of Pearl Drive in New Church, pleaded guilty to unlawful wounding and unauthorized use of Foster’s vehicle. He was given five years for each charge with all but 10 months suspended. The plea and terms were part of a bargaining agreement with Commonwealth’s Attorney Spencer Morgan that included Johnson’s cooperation in testifying against Northan.

All three men are felons.

Johnson said after a night of drinking, Foster was belligerent to Johnson’s girlfriend and another woman. They arrived at Johnson’s house with Northan driving after Foster was pulled over by police in Maryland for driving on the wrong side of the road. He was not ticketed.

Foster got back behind the wheel and was backing away when he bumped Johnson’s girlfriend, who was behind the vehicle. She wasn’t hurt, but it angered Johnson and he started punching Foster. While the two tussled, Northan hit Foster with a wrench, Johnson said.

Foster also said Northan was the one who hit him with a wrench Foster kept in the back of his car. Foster said he managed to get away from the two men and run into nearby woods to hide. He lay low for a while and then came out. “Once I got up, I was just hobbling along beating on peoples’ doors” asking for help, he said. A woman finally called 911 and he was eventually taken to the hospital.

His car was gone and he had to wear a cast on his arm for more than three months, he said.

“He ran off into the woods,” Johnson said. “I yelled for his name.” He considered the fight over: “I was going to tell him to get in his car and get out of my yard.”

Northan said Johnson gave him a ride home. He denied getting involved in the fight. The defendant said the two men were already drunk when they got to his house that night and wanted to go to Maryland to meet women, so he went along. They got sidetracked when Johnson’s girlfriend called and needed a ride.

Foster’s former girlfriend, Caroline Abbott, testified that Foster was supposed to be taking Johnson home. When they were gone too long, she began to worry and called Foster. But Johnson kept answering Foster’s cell phone saying Johnson couldn’t talk. Johnson called her the next morning and told her where Foster’s car was, Abbot said.

Northan was linked to a murder case in 2010 after his tooth was found at the scene. He was first accused of capital murder of Anthony Wayne Wilson, 46, of Felton, Del. Wilson’s body was found at a traffic accident near Greensbush. Wilson didn’t die from the crash. A medical examiner ruled his life ended from a gunshot wound to the head and neck.

After spending three years in jail awaiting trial, Northan pleaded no contest to voluntary manslaughter in a plea bargain and was sentenced to 10 years with all but two years suspended. He got another two years for possession of a firearm by a felon to run consecutively with the first term. In addition, he was given two years for shooting at an occupied dwelling in connection with an incident that occurred a month after Wilson died. The latter sentence was set to run concurrently for a total of four years to serve.

In the murder case, a witness changed his mind three times about what he saw. The doctor who would have spoken about the tooth moved to Canada, and the murder weapon, which was found in the Pocomoke River, was bought and sold several times among felons, allowing Northan to say it wasn’t his, according to testimony.

Life Plus 7 Years for Child Molester

Lenny Rock Kenner, of Cape Charles, who molested a six-year-old girl and showed her sex films in 2015 while she was in his care, was sentenced Monday in Northampton Circuit Court to life plus seven years in prison.

“I never sexually hurt any person or child in my life,” Kenner, 39, told Judge W. Revell Lewis III. “I feel like I was convicted due to ineffective counsel. Please have mercy on me. I’m not the bad person.”

Kenner also claimed the girl’s mother fabricated the stories to get revenge. “I was raised to always man up to my mistakes, not take blame for things I didn’t do.”

The defendant plans to appeal the conviction and wants someone else to handle it for him. Garrett Dunham of Eastville was his lawyer for the trial and sentencing. Dunham also asked for another attorney to be appointed. “He’s not satisfied with me as counsel,” Dunham said.

The life term was mandatory for object sexual penetration of a child under the age of 13. A jury also recommended he get five years for aggravated sexual battery and two years for custodial sexual abuse. Lewis agreed and made the terms run consecutively. The jury also suggested giving him a $200 fine but nothing was mentioned about that Monday.

Through tape recording and closed-circuit TV, the girl testified against Kenner during a two-day trial last year. “He told me that when I grow up I’m going to be his girlfriend,” the young victim said. “He touches me every day. He stops when other people come around. He said, ‘Keep it a secret.’”

“The incident will last a lifetime” for the girl, Commonwealth’s Attorney Beverly Leatherbury said. “It is most appropriate that his punishment will also last a lifetime.”

The effects on the girl are “unimaginable,” Leatherbury continued. Post traumatic stress disorder, other mental health illness, and poor physical health can result from the events, she said. “It went on for months, she was shown pornography.”

“Everything about what she said she saw in that room, was in that room,” Lewis is recalled. “It’s questionable if she will ever be able to trust a man. She was a defenseless child and you used her and you have caused her life to be something that it should not have to be.”

A victim impact statement was sent to the court by the girl’s mother. “She had a part of her soul taken. She takes four baths plus a day with changing (of) all of her clothes. She also refuses to be in any room alone,” the mother wrote. “She receives … services five days a week even at school and will continue to receive any help she needs. Before this happened … she loved to laugh and smile and almost nothing made her mad. Now she thinks everything is her fault and feels like no one likes her.”

Charges of assault and battery of a juvenile, indecent liberties with a child, and 38 counts of possessing child pornography were brought but not prosecuted against Kenner.

At trial, Dunham wanted the jury to be polled for the verdicts but he didn’t ask until after Lewis had instructed the panel about the mandatory life term, so Lewis is denied the motion. “Some were shaking their heads, looking down, and it didn’t occur to me right away to poll the jury,” Dunham said.

“When you have a case like this, it’s not appropriate to wait” until the jury is given instructions, Lewis said. The jury had been asked as a group if that was their
A warrant has been issued for the arrest ofStyles J. Coakley, 18, who is accused of shooting his mother in the head.

The shooting occurred on the night of April 26, during a party at the home of一个是ounder at the University of Virginia. Coakley was last seen fleeing into the woods, according to police.

A $5,000 reward has been offered for information leading to Coakley's capture.

Rape Charge Certified

Probable cause was found to certify a charge of rape to a grand jury against one man while he was dismissed against another man in Accomack General District Court.

The case against Nakia Keetwon Reid, 26, of Linhaven Circle near Painter, was dismissed by Judge Gordon Vincent. The rape charge for Lance Barrett Rew, 27, of Boston Road in Craddockville, was certified.

The preliminary hearings were closed to the public as requested by the commonwealth’s attorney so details were not available. “All persons except officers of the court and persons whose presence would be supportive of the complaining witness” were barred from the courtroom.

According to court records, the 21-year-old victim went with Rew to his house for a party on March 18. “She had been drinking and went to a bedroom in the house to lie down.” She said the two men came into the dark room and assaulted her. She told authorities she “kept saying, ‘no’ but they would not stop.” According to a warrant, police seized bedding, bullet casings, a partial box of ammo, a shotgun shell, and a 9 mm rifle.

The victim told authorities the two men were taking her back to her home when Rew talked about shooting her in the head, the court documents also stated.

Both men were listed Tuesday as being inmates at Accomack Jail.

In another case, Akease Da’hon Downing, 22, of Pratt Lane in Onancock, was charged with felony eluding on May 5. Deputy B. K. Misener of the Accomack County Sheriff’s Office investigated.

Christina Huffman, 21, of Stone House Avenue in Onley, was charged with uttering a note or bill on Sept. 18, 2017, knowing it to be false. Unsecured bond was set at $2,500. Officer K. S. White of the Onancock Police Department investigated.

Michael Christopher Radich Jr., 18, of Nelsonia Road in Bloxom, was charged with hit-and-run on April 26, with property damage of more than $1,000. Trooper B. Tripp of the state police investigated. Unsecured bond was set at $2,000.

Matthew Lawrence Biondo, 44, of Caracove Road in North East, Md., was arrested for being a fugitive from Maryland where he is wanted of a charge of unlawfully taking a vehicle. Biondo is being held without bond. He was arrested May 4.
United Way Surpasses Its Goal

Special to the Eastern Shore Post

The United Way of Virginia’s Eastern Shore recently announced it surpassed its $275,000 goal by over 14 percent and presented awards to the top contributors recently at a breakfast held at the Eastern Shore Community College Workforce Development building.

The 2017 campaign concluded in April with a total of $313,060 that will be distributed to approximately 150 nonprofit organizations which provide a variety of services to Eastern Shore residents.

Funds go to provide emergency food and shelter, family counseling, health services, youth development and recreation programs in addition to many other services needed in the community. In the 27 years since the founding of the United Way of Virginia’s Eastern Shore, more than $6.5 million has been raised.

Chairman Adam James thanked the businesses that conducted employee campaigns, the sponsors who covered the expenses for the campaign, and the campaign committee and other volunteers who worked to raise funds.

“It took all of us working together to reach our goal,” said James. “Our good work will benefit many worthy organizations on the Eastern Shore.”

Tyson Foods was the top fundraising organization with $47,482 raised, followed by Perdue with $35,062. Also in the top ten among Eastern Shore companies were Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital, Orbital ATK, Accomack County, Accomack County Public Schools, and Taylor Bank.

Businesses with 100 percent employee participation in this year’s United Way campaign were A&N Electric, BB&T, Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce, Eastern Shore Habitat for Humanity, Food Bank of the Eastern Shore, SunTrust, and YMCA Camp Silver Beach.

WESR, Waterford Printing, ADCO Signs were recognized for providing services without any cost to United Way without any cost that are vital to the success of the campaign. In addition, SunTrust Bank was cited for providing rent-free office space to United Way.

United Way officials and representatives of companies who received major awards are pictured at the awards ceremony held recently at the Eastern Shore Community College Workforce Development building. United Way board president Wayne Bell said with the help of local businesses who donate services only about 10 percent of the funds raised by United Way go to administrative expenses.

Mayor Jackie Poulson of Hallwood extinguished a fire 10 feet from his garage a few weeks ago. He thinks he’s still being targeted by the same person or persons who slashed his tires twice earlier this year possibly in connection to a town controversy regarding burned records and missing funds.

“I had a fire in the back of my building,” he said Tuesday. “I put it out and called them (local law enforcement) the next day. Where I put it out and a couple of people looked at it,” the evidence was disturbed, he said.

Now, he has surrounded his home by game cameras.

“I don’t know if they lit it with a cigarette,” Poulson said. But, he quickly reconsidered that notion because of the newer fire safe cigarettes (FSC) of today, also known as lower ignition propensity (LIP) or reduced fire risk (RFR), designed to go out faster than standard cigarettes.

It was “right in back of my home,” Poulson noted. “Had my boat and a new truck in it,” he said of the 40-by-30-foot wood-frame garage. “They didn’t get damaged. I heard my dog barking and I saw a lot of smoke,” he said. “I got up at 3 a.m., and it was back in a blaze again.” So, he had to douse the pine shadows with more water.

“I caught it in time,” Poulson said, adding, “Oh yeah, I know it was set.”

The mayor said he is still waiting for the state police to report what they found in an investigation involving the former town clerk, Angela “Angel” Hinman Taylor. Taylor’s car caught fire on Oct. 7, 2017, and all the town’s records stored inside were destroyed. It happened a couple of days before the deadline for a long-overdue audit.

Taylor lives about 350 yards from the town office and mostly did the town work at her home. The car fire occurred about five miles from Hallwood on Wessells Farm Road, which is in the other direction. The vehicle was hauled to a local salvage yard, crushed, and taken away before the town found out about it, Poulson said.

Poulson said she refuses to return the town’s laptop. He said the state officers wouldn’t retrieve the computer. “That’s a civil matter,” he said he was told.

Taylor has declined to comment while the investigation is underway.

“I would have thought it was all over with by now,” Poulson said. Still, the mayor continued, earlier this week he was told the investigator had been questioning a town contractor.

Northampton was selected by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to begin negotiations to receive two grants totaling $300,000 for the assessment of brownfields.

The EPA defines brownfields as former commercial or industrial sites possibly contaminated with hazardous substances, complicating the reuse or redevelopment of those sites for future business.

Examples of brownfield sites are abandoned factories, warehouses, gas stations, and dry cleaners.

County Administrator Charles Kolakowski, who was responsible for pursuing the grants, said funds will be used to hire a consultant to perform what he termed “phase one” assessments of former commercial or industrial sites that may be contaminated.

One grant is specified for petroleum and the other for hazardous waste, but only one consultant is needed for the job, Kolakowski said.

The funds are for site assessment only, not for cleanup, he clarified.

The EPA grants were intended to help property owners sell their land or decide to redevelop it.

EPA is able to assist states and localities cleaning up brownfields through the Small Business Liability Relief and Brownfields Revitalization Act of 2002, amended by the Brownfields Utilization, Investment, and Local Development Act of 2018.

“We fully expect that these brownfield projects will provide benefits to the environment and economy of local communities,” Office of Brownfields and Land Revitalization Director David Lloyd stated in an April 25 congratulatory letter addressed to Chairman Spencer Murray, of the Northampton board of supervisors.

Lloyd attributed Northampton’s selection to receive the funds to the “outstanding grant proposal” prepared by Kolakowski.
Two local juveniles were arrested and sent to the Norfolk Detention Center this week after being charged with making bomb threats to three public schools, according to Sheriff Todd Godwin.

The first arrest was announced Monday and involved a 17-year-old who was charged with a count of threatening to bomb or burn a building. This report was made following bomb threats last Friday, May 4, at Nandua Middle, Nandua High, and Accawmacke Elementary schools.

Then Tuesday, a 12-year-old was arrested and charged with 14 counts of threatening to bomb or burn a building in connection with incidents that occurred at Nandua Middle and Accawmacke Elementary on Monday and at Nandua Middle on Tuesday.

Both suspects are being held without bond.

The Accomack County Sheriff’s Office (ACSO) was assisted by the state police, and officers from Exmore, Onley and Onancock police departments, the Worcester County Sheriff’s Office in Maryland, the Eastern Shore Drug Task Force and the FBI.

Superintendent Chris Holland of Accomack County Public Schools thanked the “combined efforts of law enforcement, particularly the ACSO, for their quick and responsive action to ensure the safety of our students over the last several days of bomb threats. This behavior will not be tolerated. The safety of our students is our number one priority.”

Anyone with information about this or any other crime is asked to call ACSO at 757-787-1131 or 757-824-5666. Tips may also be submitted through the sheriff’s website at www.accomackcountysheriffsoffice.org.

Rosenwald School the Subject of New Cape Charles Museum Exhibit

Submitted Article
The Cape Charles Museum and Welcome Center will open a new exhibition May 12. “Building a Community: The Cape Charles Elementary (Rosenwald) School” tells the story of the extraordinary working collaboration among educator Booker T. Washington, philanthropist Julius Rosenwald, and African-American communities across the rural south during the period of legal segregation, a collaboration which enabled the opening of the Cape Charles school in 1929. The remarkable education, values, and community spirit of that school are told through the original voices of former students and teachers.

In May 1928, the town purchased 2.5 acres from the Pennsylvania Railroad to build a new Rosenwald Fund school for local black children. The lot was located about a quarter-mile outside of town on the west side of Route 642, “over the hump,” the elevated road and walkway over the railroad tracks. The African-American children of Cape Charles were moved into the school in 1929. As an elementary school, only grades 1-7 were taught. Black children were bused out of Cape Charles to segregated county high schools for grades 8-12. The school was closed in December 1966 when Northampton schools were consolidated, four years before they were integrated. Although they remained in segregated classrooms, the students were moved to the Cape Charles High School during the 1965-66 school year, making Cape Charles one of the first school districts on Virginia’s Eastern Shore to technically integrate.

Like the underlying values of the Rosenwald School project, this exhibition represents a collaborative community effort. The Cape Charles Historical Society partnered with the Cape Charles Rosenwald School Restoration Initiative, the Cape Charles Northampton Heritage group, and members of the local and regional community to tell this important story. The exhibition has been funded in part by Virginia Humanities.

The exhibition can be viewed at the Cape Charles Museum starting May 12 and kicks off with a screening of the Aviva Kempner documentary, “Rosenwald: The Remarkable Story of a Jewish Partnership with African-American Communities” at the historic Palace Theatre on Saturday, May 12, at 1 p.m. DVDs of the documentary will be available for purchase. The museum is open during the week from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. (later on Tuesdays), Saturday 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., and Sunday 1 until 5 p.m. Admission is free, and donations welcome.

Each District Has One Candidate for Open School Board Seats

By Connie Morrison
One person is all that is needed to fill a seat, and that’s all the Accomack School Board Selection Commission got for each of the three districts where it has school board openings.

The District 4 appointment will complete the term of Margaret Miles who moved out of the district. Connie Burford sought a seat once before, but Miles was chosen to return to the board for another term which she has now vacated. “I have been an advocate for Accomack County School employees and students,” she said, and added it is her intention to continue her advocacy work. “I have an extensive background in special education,” and she said that she would like to see a female replace Miles to retain balance on the board.

District 5’s school board seat is held by Camesha Handy, who submitted a letter of intent asking for reappointment. She was unable to attend Tuesday’s session, but “I need to place her name in the hearing,” said Chairwoman Jodie Greene. Under Virginia law, if a nominee’s or applicant’s name is not considered at a public hearing, he or she cannot be appointed. Paul Bull, school board member from District 6, supported Handy’s candidacy.

Bull is seeking reappointment to a seat he has held for five years. He is an Eastern Shore native and a graduate of Chincoteague High School. “I have two students in the school system, one in high school, one in middle school,” he said. He thinks the district is doing well, given the rural nature and demographics of the Shore, with 10 of 11 schools at full accreditation. “I’m proud of how we conduct ourselves,” he said of the board, and he is happy with current superintendent Chris Holland. Greene said she was impressed with Bull’s submittal.

All three terms expire Dec. 31, 2019. In November 2017, voters approved a referendum for an elected school board. The first school board election will be in November 2019.

The commission meets again Tuesday, May 15, at 3 p.m. for the purpose of appointing the three school board members. They could appoint each of the candidates, they could re-open the search and re-advertise for another round of meetings, or take some other action they determine.

A reporter’s request for letters and emails submitted in support of or against any of the candidates, as well as Handy’s letter of intent, was initially denied. At presstime Greene notified the Post that the letters would be forthcoming Thursday morning, but it was not in time to include information from them in this article.

Copter Crash Injures Pilot

By Stefanie Jackson
On May 6, Barry Y. Maggio was piloting an orange gyrocopter, heading south in Northampton County, when the engine suddenly cut off, causing the aircraft to plummet. The gyrocopter clipped a power line, which became wrapped around the propeller. It traveled about 226 feet before hitting the ground in a field.

The crash occurred on Candy Lane in Eastville, in the Smith Beach area. It was originally reported to Virginia State Police as an airplane crash at approximately 3:10 p.m. Sunday.

The Northampton County Sheriff’s Office notified state police that Maggio had been rescued and was transported to Sentara Virginia Beach General Hospital with injuries that were not life-threatening.

The recent warmer temperatures have ushered in the appearance of some of the area’s summertime fish species, as the first reported catches of sheephead and whiting (kingfish/sand mullet) were made last week.

Striped bass catches have been slowly on the upswing, while the best black and red drum fishing continues to come from the seaside waters. Flounder fishing success has been dependent on fishing during periods of clear water.

Lower Shore – Chris Snook at Chris’ Bait & Tackle is reporting that sheephead fishing has picked up. The shop had registered a Virginia Saltwater Fishing Citation application for 16-year-old Richard Dodge for his catch of a 14-pound fish. Dodge caught the sheephead while fishing with the Fish Freaks Guide Service. Catches of red and black drum were still coming from outside the breakers of Fisherman’s Island, while black drum fishing inside the lower bay was described as “hit or miss.” The shop now has fresh sea clams in stock for black drum bait.

The first sea mullet catch of the season was brought in, and a few surf-caught stripers have met the minimum trophy length requirements.

Striped bass fishing has been good on the seaside, especially out of Oyster towards South Bay and Running Channel, as well as farther south in the “Ditch.”

Wachapreague – Debbie Shrieves at Trident Tackle reported that flounder fishing during the shop’s ten-day tournament, which ended on Sunday, produced lots of flat fish in the 2 to 4-pound range for the contest’s 371 registered participants.

However, Jack Crouse’s 7-pound, 10-ounce doormat was almost two pounds higher than the next largest tournament catch. The winning flounder was worth a cool $2,500! Second place and the top catch by a female angler went to Cindy Tibbs for a 5-pound, 11-ounce fish, which was worth $600. Richard English, who took the event’s lead at 9 a.m. the opening day of the tournament, held on to finish in third place with a 5-pound, 8-ounce flounder worth $300. Other noteworthy catches were Shawn Rollins with a 4-pound, 14-ounce fish for fourth place and Jad Steele’s fifth-place finish with a flounder weighing 4-pounds, 12-ounces.

Archer Johnson earned the top youth catch award for anglers up to 12-years-old with a 2-pound, 3-ounce fish and Brian Joynes won the top local angler award with a 3-pound, 12-ounce flounder. Berkley Gulp and squid/minnow combinations were some of the top flounder producing baits, and Bullshead Channel was singled out as a productive area.

Shrieves added that black drum catches were being made inside Quinton Inlet on sea clam baits.

Chincoteague – Donna Rae at Captain Bob’s Marina reported flounder catches have been more scattered over the last week with catches coming from the area around the Queen Sound bridge, while catches in the Assateague Channel have dropped off some during the same period. The “Junkyard” above the Assateague Channel bridge is still producing some keeper fish, but the majority of the recent catches have been off Assateague Point, inside of Tom’s Cove. Pearl white Berkley Gulp swimming mullet with a live minnow has been the most popular bait combination.

Successful flounder catches have also been made with squid/minnow combinations, especially with squid that has been marinated in peeler crab scented oil.

Black drum catches were still coming from the beach, especially on clam baits. Small striped bass continue to come from around the bridge pilings, but no trophy-sized catches from the beach have been reported.

Jimmy Vasilou at Captain Steve’s Bait & Tackle reports that the surf fishing action continues to be productive, as striped bass have begun showing up. Black drum have been hitting peeler crab and sand fleas baits, with best action coming around the period of low tide. Vasilou recommends adding a piece of orange or clam-flavored Fish Bites to increase your odds.

Flounder catches have been good when the wind wasn’t blowing. Pink mylar East Coast rigs were the top rigs over the last few days, tipped with Gulp and live minnows.

Upper Shore – J.C. Morrison reported that rockfish in the 20-inch class were being made in the bayside shallows between Chessconnessex and Hunting Creeks. Morrison had not heard of any speckled trout catches as of yet.

Captain Matt Abell’s shop, the Sea Hawk Sports Center, was abuzz with activity on Monday morning. Abell reported that rockfish catches in the Maryland trophy fishery were picking up for angler fishing crab baits. Captain Matt also said that drum fishing was still good off the Virginia barrier islands and flounder fishing improved over the later portion of the weekend.

Bill Hall was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Salt Water Master Angler Status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year. Bill is an I.G.F.A. International Committee Representative and a longtime member of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament Committee. He is the Virginia Recreation Fishing representative on the ASMFC Striped Bass Management Panel and is a past recipient of the CCA-VA Virginia Outdoor Writer Conservation Leadership Award.

The Ethel Lampert Community Center has seen better days and may soon see its final days unless the teens, volunteers, and staff find a way to save it. It’s the basis for the musical “Don’t Stop Believin’,” scheduled for May 11-13 at the Palace Theatre in Cape Charles, but the threat of a community center struggling to remain open rings familiar for supporters of the Palace Theatre.

In the play, some sleazy town council members want to bulldoze the place to redevelop and commercialize the neighborhood and bring them gobs of sales tax revenue, but that’s not stopping the teens who frequent the community center. From basketball players to computer nerds to artists, these down-on-their-luck kids have no place else to go, and losing the center would mean losing their home away from home. When they hear of a new television reality contest for glee clubs, they decide to form their own and try out. By winning the top prize, they’ll earn enough money to keep the center open.

“This story really hit home for many of our kids,” said co-director Amy Watkins. “The Palace Theatre is home for them. They’ve actually grown up on that stage.”

“The fate of the community center in the play — we were actually looking at something like that happening to The Palace,” said co-director Wayne Creed. “After a series of worrisome decisions, Arts Enter’s finances were practically depleted. The board was looking at selling it off as a movie theater, or who knows what else. For a while, it looked like our kids were going to be locked out of the theater.”

“The resilience of the kids in “Don’t Stop Believin’” reminds us of our dancers and actors,” Watkins said.

“All that said, we have some very talented performers. Favorites McKay Shockley, Allison Shockley (star of “The Clam Digger’s Daughter”), forensics champ Connor Handwerk, Mel Stein, and Christy Iverson really make this a fun and dynamic show,” Creed said. “It also has very a contemporary feel. The music is very rock, new wave and also incorporates a lot of hip-hop.”

“Our hip-hop instructor, Dana Schnezler, has done a great job with dancers. It’s so much fun to watch. One of the great things is the range of our performers,” Watkins said. “We have actors as young as 5 years old, and some in their 60s. It creates a very rich and textured feel for the show.”

“We were also lucky to be able to get the brilliant Peter Helk, who recently did the work for ‘Arsenic and Old Lace’ for set design and construction,” Creed said.

If you like music, this is the show for you. The show is bursting with large rock and pop chorus numbers and a powerful, anthemic finale. “Don’t Stop Believin’” is an energetic, contemporary musical that is sure to leave you dancing in the aisles.

Showtimes are May 11-12, 7:30 p.m., and May 13 at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $15 for adults and $5 for students (K-12).

Addie Smith is the best mom and grandma ever. She is loving, kind, caring, a fighter, and the backbone of our family. But most of all she is my best friend and my road partner. Love you ma dukes xoxoxo - LaShanna Cypress

My mom Katina Selby is a superhero of some sort. Growing up we had nothing, but somehow she still made sure all six of us had everything we needed while going without herself. It wasn’t about the materials or the big dinners or exclusive family events because we had none of those things, it was her as a person that made every day of struggling the best days of our life. She’s that angel on our shoulder when we think of doing something wrong, and she had unlimited sets of eyes all over her body that allowed her to know everything we did before we even thought about doing it. We are all hardworking adults now, and if the day ever comes that I win the lottery, it’s all mom’s. There’s not enough money in the world to pay her back for the life and wisdom she’s given us. And I pray that one day soon good karma finds her and sticks with her for the rest of her life just like she has with us. - Amiah Alexis

My mom, Lorie Thomas, is such an inspiration to me. She has devoted every moment of her life for the last 32 years to raising her three children. She raised us to have caring hearts, and to be kind and respectful of others. My brother and I are each married, with children of our own, but my mom still cares for our handicapped sister, Kelly, at home. She takes care of her every need and fight to bring every ounce of normalcy she can to Kelly’s life. She is my rock and my source of strength when I feel defeated. She lifts me up when I need it and tells me the things that I don’t want to hear; She is convicted in her faith and loves the Lord. She deserves so much from this world, but never asks for a thing. She is the very definition of what a mother should be and I thank God every day that he chose her for me. Happy Mother’s Day, Mommy! I love you to the moon and back! - Krista Nicole Kilmon

My mother is the strongest person I know. She had six biological children of her own, and took my father's daughter from a previous relationship in like she was her own. Although I know it had to be rough having so many children so close in age, I've never heard my mom complain about having to care for us all. Now that all six are grown, she has 12 biological grandchildren, two step-grandchildren, and one on the way; all of which she adores. Not only was she such a selfless mom, she does all she can to make her grandchildren happy.

A few years ago, my mom was first diagnosed with kidney cancer. She beat the cancer, but since then, it has came back and has rapidly spread throughout her body, but everyday, she gets up and does what she can despite her pain and physical weakness. She never lets her sickness get in the way of spending time with her children and grandchildren. She really is the rock of our huge family. - Sophia Elizabeth Vermeal

This is my great-great-great grandmother, Emma Edwards who I often call Emerson! She will be 100 years old on September 10th. I've never met a person as strong, smart, brave, kind and as special as she is. You started this crazy family long ago and your legacy just continues to grow, each and everyday. Even though our family is huge and each of us are different, we all have in common: our love for each other. Thank you for always supporting us, even when we didn't believe in ourselves and wanted to give up. You pushed us! Thank you for never giving up on us, and for being amazing in the kitchen. We've more than grateful and blessed to have you in our lives, our family. We're more than grateful and blessed to have you in our lives. Em, there's something about you that makes me strive to be just like you. I promise to make you proud, I love you my Emerson. - Jamya Quideria

My mother Gloria Tipps is not only a kind and sweet mother but she is also the most generous person I have ever known. She is the mother of four: Miechella Decker, Samantha Ann Tipps Colona, James Tipps, and Jamie Gentry. She also is an awesome grandmother. She was also a mother to some of our friends who had no one. So this Mother's Day I would like to say we appreciate everything you have done and who you are. We love you. God could not have given us a better mother. Love, Jamie. - Jamie Gentry

My mom was always there when we needed her or anyone else did. Caring, kind, strong, teacher/guidance counselor and so much more. Been gone for almost 20 years in June. Wish I could pick up the phone to talk with her and my dad.

My Mom will be 89 in September, and she doesn't stop doing and going. From Wednesday prayer meetings to Sunday church. From covered dishes to birthday parties and get-togethers with family and friends. She has always shone my brother and I love and respect for everyone, no matter who they were or where they came from. She knows no strangers. She still drive wherever she goes, but don't cross her because you may not want to hear what she has to say! - Georgette Justice Press
New Plans for Cape Charles Harbor Development Roll In

Cape Charles is open to suggestions for drawing in visitors during the off-season, and one local has a big idea that may become reality sooner than expected.

Eastern Shore lifetime resident and local developer, Eyre Baldwin, recently unveiled a concept for commercial development on the north side of the town harbor. The “Tavi” property, named after the previous owner, runs parallel to Mason Avenue and is adjacent to Cape Charles beach.

Baldwin’s vision is a 1,300-foot long, 16-foot wide floating dock that could accommodate sailboats to 300-foot megayachts or larger, a four-story, 80-room hotel with a lounge, a dockside restaurant, and a tiki bar – which in conceptual art is similar in design to the gazebos at the beach and Central Park.

Consulting firm Vanasse Hangen Brustlin Inc. created the conceptual artwork. Baldwin is seeking parties interested in the hotel, restaurant, and other possible amenities, which will likely be developed further in the future, but the harbor may be ready to welcome 150-foot yachts in as little as six months, he said. Work is ready to proceed on the 30-foot concrete deck and bulkhead.

Baldwin said formal plans for the site could be submitted to the town in about two weeks.

During his April 19 presentation to Cape Charles town council, Baldwin dubbed the project the “ferry dock,” referring to the fact that the site is the former location of the Cape Charles ferry terminal. The ferry system was moved to Kiptopeke in the 1950s and shut down after the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel opened in 1964.

Baldwin said he loves the Eastern Shore and its unique character. His target demographic with the new development is not the megayacht owners, but the crew, who may not be able to afford the attractions and amenities at destinations like Martha’s Vineyard, Nantucket, and Annapolis, Md. He believes crews would appreciate the types of recreation and relaxation Cape Charles has to offer, restoring them to a sense of “normalcy.”

Baldwin sees the development as a place for megayachts to refuel, take on food and supplies, and possibly have some light maintenance work done.

He likened the Atlantic Ocean to Interstate 95 and the Chesapeake Bay to an exit – essentially equating Cape Charles to a convenient rest stop for boat crews.

The Cape Charles harbor would likely experience the most megayacht traffic in the fall until Thanksgiving for southbound vessels and in the spring until Dec. 1 for northbound vessels, Baldwin said.

Labor Day and the fall are the busiest times for the biggest boats, he said – when summer vacation ends and the shoulder season begins.

Baldwin has been interested in the site for several years. About 10 years ago, when the property was owned by Nimrod Tavi, the son of an Israeli actor, Tavi planned to build six condominiums and a hotel there with a total of 435 living units. But Tavi went bankrupt and his plans were never realized.

Baldwin describes a very different vision, and he finally found someone to share it with him about eight months ago, John Kemp. Baldwin and Kemp are now partners in what Baldwin terms a “joint venture,” with Kemp owning the larger share of the Tavi property.

Kemp embraced Baldwin’s concept and was willing to share the risk associated with it when others were not. A legal dispute concerning the harbor bottom could delay development of the site, but Baldwin is optimistic that a fair conclusion to that matter is forthcoming.

The concept appears to be well-received in Cape Charles. Mayor George Proto called the progress of the plan “good news.” Interim town manager, Bob Panek, said, “The town welcomes development of that site.”

Baldwin remarked, “People have been very kind and very receptive and supportive.”

The 50th Annual Chincoteague Seafood Festival

Story and Photos by Connie Morrison

Chincoteague’s 50th Annual Seafood Festival held May 5 at Tom’s Cove Campground drew visitors from across Virginia, throughout Delmarva, and beyond.

Chincoteague Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Eveylyn Shotwell said the 2,700 tickets sold out the day of the festival. About 250 volunteers work behind the scenes to pull off the annual event.

Commemorative T-shirts bearing the 50th anniversary logo were a hot item, selling out in the first festival hour. More are on the way, said Shotwell.

It takes the entire year to plan the festival, and the chamber of commerce is “already making notes and plans” for 2019, Shotwell said.

Master Naturalist volunteers Lisa and Spencer Gurney dump collected shells into a trailer. The oyster shells will be recycled for future oyster restoration projects.

Virginia Secretary of Veterans and Defense Affairs Talks Vet Healthcare

Submitted Article

With many baby boomers reaching retirement age, the need for medical access will increase. For veterans who rely on Veterans Affairs (VA) for healthcare coverage, access is increasingly limited and fragmented. Eastern Shore veterans using VA healthcare must travel across the bay to visit one of three VA medical treatment centers, including the Hampton VA Hospital. Many veterans instead opt to travel to the Pocomoke City VA community-based Outpatient Clinic (CBOC). The main drawback to using the CBOC is veterans needing services beyond the clinic’s scope of practice must travel to Baltimore to receive treatment. Consequently, those veterans who choose to stay connected with VA in Virginia must travel across the bay to either the Virginia Beach CBOC, Chesapeake CBOC, or Hampton VA Hospital.

Virginia’s Eastern Shore has approximately 5,000 local vets based on VA data, according to Thomas Herthel, Director of the Department of Veteran Services. A major concern about veteran healthcare is the lack of a coordinated VA presence, which gives way to complications and difficulties surrounding access, distance, restrictions, and payments, avoiding hurdles such as reauthorization for single appointments, transportation, resources, wait time, and responsiveness.

Eastern Shore Rural Health System Inc. (ESRHS) CEO Nancy Stern informed newly appointed Virginia Secretary of Veterans and Defense Affairs Carlos Hopkins that ESRHS recognizes the inconsistencies and believes a partnership with the VA could address many of the concerns and needs of ES Veterans. Stern suggested that ESRHS has the care system in place to alleviate some struggles with which the VA contends and could serve as an ideal CBOC for veterans under the VA healthcare umbrella.

Hopkins mentioned that Gov. Northam’s main priorities are education, employment, and entrepreneurship, and that healthcare initiatives are included within these priorities. In addition, Medicaid expansion is also a top issue within the state’s budget.

This was not Hopkins’ first visit to the Eastern Shore, and he welcomed the opportunity to meet with local veterans and discuss medical access with them. He pointed out that veterans coalitions (e.g. private sector support) are essential to expand veteran resources, especially in areas like southwest and southeast Virginia where scattered veteran populations exist.
In the middle of a red brick foundation, possibly four feet deep, a slate floor was uncovered last week at the site of an archaeological dig believed to be a trading post in the early 1600s.

It began last year after artifacts were found under a felled maple tree and expanded earlier this month into an expedition that has proof of at least five buildings that once stood at the end of Eyreville Road near Cheriton.

“Every day we find new things and have to figure out what they are,” said Mike Clem, Eastern Region Archaeologist for the state Department of Historic Resources.

“They were not building on top of the old” buildings, he continued during a lecture at the Eastern Shore Public Library last week. Instead, the structures, which are from the 1630s, were spread across owner Roger Buyrn’s yard.

Other finds include Dutch pipes and yellow bricks; Native American pipes with running deer designs and cornstalks, none of which look like they were done by the same person; British and Irish coins; a pig’s head; straight pins; a large fish hook; book clasps; clothing clasps; more than 50 tiny glass cobalt beads; and a Dutch disc that was struck like a coin, made in Nuremberg between 1580 and 1620, “and used by merchants of the time” as a calculation instrument for reckoning.

The 200-year-old tree that fell was standing over a 400-year-old home site that is about a half mile from the place where more than a decade ago, scientists studied the Chesapeake Bay impact crater that was formed by a large meteor about 35.5 million years ago.

All are in a county that has the oldest continuous court records in the country.

The 2017 dig brought volunteers from as far away as Minnesota and Las Vegas. At the recent one, someone came from Iowa to take part. There are usually 30 to 35 people digging, probing, or sifting at any time. Of course, members of the Eastern Shore of Virginia Archaeology group are among them.

The places that were dug were filled in with sand so the excavation can reconvene for a couple more weeks in the fall. “We want to keep coming back to get to a point that we understand it,” Clem said.

“This is where we want to be and this is what we want to do,” said State Archaeologist Mike Barber, who is overseeing the dig. “I’m about 15 months behind in my other stuff.”

“They started their own trade and ignored others,” he said. There were more finds here in a month than in 25 years in Jamestown.

The Dig Involves Sifting, Searching, and Finding.

Below is a Dutch counter that dates to the early 1600s.
Vacant for years, the 1799 two-story brick house at end of Eyreville Drive was once the estate of the Webster family, owners of the nearby Cheriton cannery. Archaeologists and volunteers were on the grounds earlier this month digging for proof that a trading post did business there about 400 years ago.

Under RAMP, veterans can expect to receive a review of the decision on their claim faster than if they stay in the legacy appeals process. The program will allow participants the option to have their decisions reviewed in the Higher-Level Review or Supplemental Claim Lane outlined in the Appeals Modernization Act. Veterans with active appeals, or those looking to appeal before February 2019, will be under the current appeal process. However, VA will continue to process any RAMP elections received after February 2019.

Herthel told the Eastern Shore Post that “we sincerely appreciated the opportunity to meet with the local veteran population and hear both their positive feedback and concerns. Most importantly, we were honored to recognize our Vietnam veterans and present them with a 50th anniversary commemorative lapel pen.”

However, there were some veterans in attendance visibly concerned with the timeliness of their claim, lack of responsiveness and follow-up, and appointment with providers. Stratton believed this was a great first step identifying some of the major needs of veterans on the Shore. He is already looking into hosting another veterans event in the near future. Anyone who is looking into submitting a claim for VA disability or compensation should seek a qualified claims representative through the VA.

Veterans should only use qualified representatives such as the Virginia DVS team or other qualified veteran service organizations such as the American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, or American Veterans.

This month we spotlight Steve Doan from Belle Haven. Doan is a retired Army Lt. Col. with over 24 years of active duty. His career started out in artillery as a young private after being drafted in the Army. He would later attend OCS and become an Army officer when he served in Vietnam. He also served in Germany, Italy, Fort Sill, Okla., Fort Knox, Ky., and as a professor of English at West Point. In his later years, he became an ordained minister and chaplain in the Army. Jasper
Everyday sights and sounds can trigger thoughts of others with sharp recollection. It can be like a step back in time. That happened for me last month when forsythia, the shrub with the bright yellow flowers, bloomed at my next door neighbor’s house. I passed them daily as I rushed out to meet the world. It was good to be reminded that my mother was still looking after me.

The season is full of that woman although she has been gone for 18 long years. My peonies, which just started blooming, also make me think of good memories with her. She would have loved my peonies because they aren’t the bushy kind, they are fuchsia-colored petals with yellow centers and spectacular. But she did favor the other ones too.

Every day is Mother’s Day in my mind.

When I go to the pharmacy and they ask my birthdate, the first thing I think of is that Mom would never have told them her birth year. No one knew that unless they worked at the DMV or had gotten a glimpse of her driver’s license, which she guarded.

She would not have liked www.google.com because I just found out on that website how old she would be. I tell the pharmacists and techs my age without hesitation, although I’ve learned you only have to say the month and day to complete the transaction.

Lilacs remind me of Mom because we grew them in our yard in New York and then brought a cutting from that home to the Eastern Shore. She would clip the flowers and I would take them to my teachers with the stems wrapped in foil. That bush was cut down by the next owners of her house, so I can’t ride by and see them. But her precious crape myrtle tree is still in the front yard and getting bigger. She took a photo of it every year for comparison.

I can’t go to the grocery store without thoughts of Mom. Cool Whip is something I seldom buy, but Mom loved it on ice cream and probably bought it twice a month. I think of her when I eat eggplant and fish and when I drink a good cup of hot tea. She liked her tea with three heaping spoonfuls of sugar and lots of milk.

Last week, I got a look inside an old house in Eyreville and there in a little pantry off the kitchen was a circa 1950s refrigerator like the one we had back in the day. I instantly thought about Mom chanting, “Close that door.” Yes, of course, we would stand there just peering inside before grabbing the gallon of milk. And yes, of course, my brother and I would leave the door ajar, holding it with our feet, while we poured a glass.

I remember our “icebox.” It was not a frost-free appliance and grew an iceberg down the center until it was defrosted, a task we all dreaded and the reason for calling the iceberg, “The Monster in the Refrigerator.”

Did you know seeing a cardinal fly by or land is the sign of a loved one? I glanced out the window while typing this column. And thought, “Oh, another sign of Mom.” And then I thought again about how ridiculous that was because Mom was terrified of birds. She also feared lightning and would be upset at the way I sit on the front porch and watch a good storm. I used to call her when the thunder started to tease her because she was sure the lightning would strike the phone line. Before caller ID she would have to answer just in case she was needed by her family.

Yes, I guess I was a brat. I’m sorry, Mom. Wish you were here. Happy Mother’s Day in Heaven!
