Teachers Charge County Is Breaking Promise

Experienced Accomack teachers asked county supervisors at a public hearing Monday night to continue to allow school workers to earn a retirement benefit that was set up for them early in their careers.

No decision was made, though the supervisors agreed to meet with the School Board for further explanation.

“I do not want your sympathy,” said principal Rose Taylor of Arcadia High, a 33-year teacher and administrator. “I want what was promised to me … I was planning on working the 10 days after retirement … I hope no one here tonight thinks our community can grow and prosper without willing and educated teachers … we chose to work here and thank God we did.”

Some supervisors said they only recently learned of the program, which pays 10 percent of their salary upon retirement for 10 days of work. However, former Superintendent Dr. Bruce Benson mentioned the plan publicly to them as early as March 2013.

And many retired teachers like Supervisor Donald Hart, who was with Accomack Schools for 30 years, (and plans to abstain from voting on the issue) collected from the program. Supervisor Jack Gray, who retired as a principal, said he didn’t participate because he was too old (65) when he left the profession. After that, he served on the School Board for a few years.

The plan was established for teachers who had been with the division for at least 15 years and worked in Virginia for at least 30. It was started to bridge the gap between the 30-year mark and age 62, when federal benefits could kick in.

At some point, however, the time was extended past age 62 and other school workers were added to the mix. The division has been unable to find in board minutes when these changes occurred. Most of the officials agree the plan got “out of hand.”

Supervisor Wanda Thornton complained that in the latest plan recently adopted by the School Board, there is no stipulation about how many years one had to be with the system or state. There is a reference in the new papers that links the qualifications from the old plan.

Taylor said she would be “disappointed and ashamed” if county leaders “doubt the need to keep promises.” She asked the supervisors to “consider the lives you are tampering with.”

She also referenced Supervisor Ron Wolff’s recent comments about substitutes not teaching. “You would not say it is a fun day or a holiday” if you visited the school, Taylor said. “Witness what teachers do and what they have to contend with on a daily basis.”

Wolff, a former teacher, is a restaurant owner in Atlantic.

Tracey Robbins, a 27-year teacher, said experienced workers “stayed because they believed in Accomack County, including me.” She complained that veteran instructors were passed over “time and time again” so that the system could attract new teachers to the area by offering them higher salaries.

“Had I known I would be here begging, I would have gone north to Maryland (to teach) long ago,” said Melissa Holland, a 29-year teacher, who said she “is one year away from qualifying for the … work-for-pay option.”

She added that without the incentive, she would be at the poverty level in early retirement because the division stops helping with health insurance.

Chincoteague Combined School principal Chris Holland suggested that the School Board solve the abuses in the program. You’re “breaking a promise of 18 years,” he said. “Spending all this time trying to figure out how to break it.” Holland noted that 53 of 134 counties have the incentive. “I raised my family … I sent them to public school. I love Accomack County. We’re scared that you may eliminate it. We’re concerned about it. I could have qualified for this last year … what people are going to do; they are going to work longer. You’re going to pay for it in the long run.”

“You all have a big job,” Holland continued. “I will say this School Board right now is going in the right direction. … Give the superintendent and the new School Board a chance.”

A substitute teacher took Wolff’s holiday comment to heart. “I take my job seriously,” she said. “Each time I go over … lessons thoroughly. We do all that we can. … So when the teacher comes back they can pick up where they left off.”

Terrence Smith, a substitute at Arcadia High, said that when he was a student 10 years ago, it was true that
Northampton Officials Debate Use of Former Middle School

By Ron West

Northampton supervisors Monday again attempted to decide how to make use of the former middle school building in Machipongo.

The school, which last housed students nearly a decade ago, was home to the county administration offices for a year and continues to serve the Parks and Recreation Department and the county’s Extension agents.

Northampton’s Emergency Medical Services (EMS) has urged that space in the building be renovated to serve as its headquarters, house the county’s ambulance, and train EMS personnel. Currently, EMS resides in a rented facility half a mile away at Shadyside. Estimates to renovate the building range from $3 million to $6 million.

Supervisor Larry LeMond opposed putting funds into the 60 year-old building, especially with the need to replace the county high school. Projected costs for a new high school/middle school complex are in excess of $30 million. LeMond suggested it would be a better use of the county’s limited funds to add a garage to the property currently rented at Shadyside. Rough estimates for such an addition have been placed at $400,000 to $500,000. LeMond, who served on the School Board when the former school was closed, noted that it had been closed due to declining enrollment, as well as the projected costs of repairs.

Supervisor Larry Trala countered that the former middle school is not in as bad a shape as some would suggest and that he favors refurbishing it and moving the EMS Department there.

Supervisor Oliver Bennett, an educator who spent much of his career teaching at the middle school, indicated that he could support moving the EMS Department there if the county retains portions of the building, such as the auditorium, for the public to use for gatherings.

Supervisor Granville Hogg agreed with LeMond regarding the large capital outlay that would be required to refurbish the building when most of it remains unused. Hogg noted that the EMS is requesting roughly 7,200 square feet, plus additional space for a garage, in a building of 33,000 square feet. He questioned his colleagues about what they would do with the unused space.

County Administrator Katie Nunez said it costs approximately $110,000 annually to maintain the former school while housing the two county departments.

The county is required to set aside approximately $600,000 for public use as a result of the sale of the former Sustainable Technology Industrial Park (STIP) property in Cape Charles. The county had used U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) grant funds to construct the STIP and as a result of the sale, it became responsible for reimbursing the USDA for a portion of the grant. It has been suggested that those funds pay for renovating the school.

With the board split on how best to use the building, Chairman Rick Hubbard asked for part or all of the board to meet with county staff to discuss possible options for the building. Additional discussion on the issue was deferred until the April board session.

In other business, the supervisors scheduled a public hearing on the proposed FY 2016 budget for March 31.

Merritt Will Not Seek Re-election

Mickey M. Merritt has announced that he will not seek re-election to the Northampton County School Board in the upcoming November election.

Merritt, who represents District 4, has served on the School Board since February 2008.

He thanked the citizens of Northampton citizens for their support over the past years.
When Brook and Smith Parks of Exmore found out they were having a baby in 2013, they were over-the-moon excited. As the holidays approached, they made plans for his arrival.

The couple was in for a surprise. Their son, Richard Smith Parks Jr. (S.J.), was born six weeks early, on Thanksgiving morning.

Susan Turner, Eastern Shore Community director for The March of Dimes March for Babies, has announced that the Parkses will be the 2015 Ambassador Family, representing the Shore at the Walk for Babies this year. The walk is scheduled for Sunday, May 3, at Historic Onancock School, with the route taking a scenic tour of Onancock. Registration will begin at 8 a.m., and the walk at 9 a.m.

“On Wednesday morning, the day before Thanksgiving, my water broke at 4 a.m.,” said Brook. “My heart dropped because I was only 34 weeks.”

She rushed to Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital, where they transported her to Sentara Norfolk General. While in labor, she was given shots of steroids to help S.J.’s lungs develop. Despite the medical staff’s best efforts, S.J. came into the world at 5:53 a.m. on Nov. 28, 2013, weighing 4 pounds and 14 ounces.

“She had just laid down and I started getting comfortable,” said Smith. “It had been only five minutes, and here he came!”

After the baby’s birth, the scariest part of the ordeal began. He was on a ventilator for six hours, but spent a total of 10 days in the NICU (Neonatal Intensive Care Unit) and seven days on IV fluids. He was under lights for four days to treat his jaundice.

“The day we had to leave the hospital without S.J. in the car seat was heartbreaking,” said Brook. “The eight days he was there without me was the hardest.”

S.J.’s grandparents, Ethel and David Parks of Exmore and Maria and Donnie Stevens of Machipongo, helped the young couple with expenses going back and forth to Norfolk.

“They helped us get ready to bring S.J. home. His room wasn’t ready and no clothes were packed yet because we thought we had six more weeks,” Brook said.

Sixteen months later S.J., is well on his way to a country music career, at least as a back-up dancer. His favorite television shows aren’t cartoons or “Sesame Street.” No, this young boy is a die-hard country fan. He shakes and grooves to Miranda Lambert and Brad Paisley. Dancing isn’t the only thing S.J. does. He’s a flirt.

“There’s no stopping him,” Brook laughed. Since his days as a preemie, he’s progressed leaps and bounds, literally. Weighing in at a healthy 25 pounds, he walks and runs all over the house. He even had his first haircut recently.

“Just the top,” Brook explained. “No way were we cutting the curls.” Those blond curls and dance moves will surely leave his parents with their hands full as teen agehood approaches.

But for now, S.J. is content hanging with the parents. “His first words were ‘Da Da,’ ” Smith beams. Brook rolls her eyes.

Last year the Parkses participated in their first March of Dimes walk. This year, they have their own team, appropriately named Team S.J. They have set a fund-raising goal of $500. Anyone wishing to contribute to Team S.J. can find a drop box at Cape Charles Animal Hospital, Shore Bank and Shore Good Bakery in Exmore.

“We’re so thankful for all that the March of Dimes does because without them and all the technology and information we have because of them, my son’s story could have been completely different,” said Brook.

Fishermen’s Opinions Wanted at Monday Session on Offshore Energy

Offshore wind energy is coming to Virginia, and a consortium of local, state, and federal officials is urging commercial fishermen to attend an upcoming meeting to learn about the approximately 176-square-mile wind energy area off the coast of Virginia Beach.

The session is scheduled for Monday, March 30, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at Chincoteague Town Offices on Community Drive.

“This is really a chance for a good exchange of information,” said Connie Morrison, regional planner for the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission, which is hosting the meeting. “We know there are many questions about the wind energy area, and we need information too, from the people out on the water.”

“We know there are Eastern Shore fishermen working in and around this area, and we want to be sure they are included, and that their voices are heard as part of this work,” she said.

The meeting is part of a collaborative fisheries planning project to share data and information for the development of recommendations, best management practices, and a fisheries communication plan related to the design, construction and operation of wind energy facilities off Virginia.

“Accurate data about fishing activity in and around the commercial lease area are essential to achieving the best outcomes for everyone,” said Morrison.

“We have commercial fishing maps assembled from fishing vessel trip reports,” she said, “but we know there are gaps in the data, and that local fishermen can help fill those gaps so that when decisions are made in the commercial lease area about where to place turbines, for example, or when to start construction, they can be done in the least disruptive way possible.”

Questions about the session can be directed to Morrison at 787-2936, ext. 127.

Parksley House Burns

It took units from Parksley, Bloxom, Tasley, Onley and Onancock about an hour and 40 minutes to control a fire in a house on Browne Avenue in Parksley last Friday, according to Parksley Chief Phillip Kelly. Reported at about 6:35 p.m., the fire in the two-story wood-frame structure was caused by an electrical problem on the first floor, Kelly said. When firefighters arrived, it had already spread to the second story. A family of six or seven was renting the house and did not have renters’ insurance. The Red Cross assisted the victims, who were not identified, by providing shelter in hotel rooms. The chief said no one was injured in the fire.
GRANT CYCLE

By Linda Cicoira

A wider Chincoteague Causeway with a bicycle trail/emergency lane could become a reality if a Federal Lands Access Program (FLAP) grant is obtained.

Accomack supervisors gave approval Monday for the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission (ANPDC) to apply for a $700,000 grant that would cover the entire project cost, including a preliminary engineering and feasibility study.

The goal is to take the trail from the NASA visitors’ center at Wallops Island through Chincoteague to the wildlife refuge visitors’ center on Assateague.

“It has been determined that a 20 percent local match is required,” Director of Planning and Community Development Rich Morrison wrote in a memo to the supervisors and County Administrator Steve Miner. “I have had informal discussions with (Chincoteague Planner) Bill Neville about splitting the match amount.”

If the town and county agree, each could pay up to $70,000 based on the estimated cost of between $600,000 and $700,000. The county “staff will also seek possible matches from the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) and other sources,” according to the memo.

“The program is federal and its purpose is, as its title suggests, intended to enhance access and enjoyment of publicly owned federal lands,” wrote Morrison. “The bike lane would also serve an important dual purpose for us by providing for a margin of safety on the causeway by widening it somewhat. The idea is that if it is safe enough for bikes, one should be able to get emergency vehicles through in case of an accident,” he continued.

Chesapeake Bay-Bridge Tunnel Officer W.T. Jones investigated the February incident. Trooper D.D. Branch investigated the second. Stubbs is being held without bail.

Cape Charles Gets New Town Manager

By Ron West

Cape Charles Town Council has hired Brent Manual as the new town manager, effective April 6.

Manual currently serves as assistant town manager for Woodstock, Va., and has 16 years’ experience in municipal government. Manual replaces interim Town Manager Bob Panek, who has served in that position since former Town Manager Heather Arcos left late in 2014 to manage a family-owned business in Cheriton.

Town Treasurer Deborah Pocock told Town Council that several items in the FY2015 budget had come in under budget, and as a result, council could re-allocate some funds. Council agreed to explore other uses, including the funding of six body cameras requested by Police Chief Jim Pruitt.

Harbormaster Smitty Dize Jr. presented a proposal to raise dockage rates by 25 cents to 50 cents per foot for vessels moored at the town marina. The fees will vary based on the payment plan selected by the boater. Boaters would be expected to pay for their slips by the 10th of each month or face a 3 percent late fee. Council agreed to the changes.

Council reviewed price estimates for the maintenance of manholes in the Town. Council had budgeted $100,000 for the work, but agreed to award a contract to Eastern Shore Landscaping Management for $41,972.

During the public input session, town resident Wayne Cree urged council to consider adding lifeguards or other staff at the town beach for safety.

Council discussed placing Private Aids to Navigation at the beach as a way to keep boats and personal watercraft away from individuals at the beach or in the water. Cree also urged council to replace the basketball goals that had been removed when the former school was sold two years ago.

Cheriton Considers New Data System

By Ron West

Cheriton Town Council announced Wednesday that it had received an unsolicited bid by Shore Scan Solutions on ways to secure and access town records.

Representing Shore Scan Solutions, Ken Carlsen explained that scanned documents transmitted to Shore Scan Solutions would be accessible to the town officials via the Internet. The company also would back up the data. Carlsen said that the process could save time locating files. The system also would back up the data. Carlsen said that the process could save time locating files. The system would cost approximately $3,500 to set up, with a monthly fee of $95 and an annual renewal fee of $495. Council took no action regarding the proposal.

Mayor Joe Habel told council the sidewalk and parking lot for the municipal building had been completed, though spaces still need to be marked. Areas around the building will be graded and seeded with grass.

Habel reported that the recently approved boundary adjustment had been completed with the county, but it had inadvertently omitted a narrow strip of land owned by Bay Coast Railroad. Council discussed the procedures for including this area, which likely will require an amendment to the original agreement as well as a public hearing.

Lifesavers Honored

Two Cape Charles police officers and a town resident were honored at last week’s Town Council session for saving the life of a visiting boater.

Shortly after 7:30 p.m. March 5, Keith Lewis was at the town dock and witnessed a boater who was on an ice-covered pier attempting to secure his vessel. Lewis saw the boater fall into the frigid waters of the harbor. With the boater thrashing around in the water, unable to get out on his own, Lewis dialed 911 to report the incident and then proceeded onto the dock to help the victim.

Officer Tom Potts arrived on the scene and also aided in the attempt to help the boater out of the water. Lewis and Potts crawled on the icy dock toward the man to hold him above the water. Potts said he feared the man was going to die right there in his arms.

Sgt. Jay Bell arrived and crawled out on the dock to help. The three men pulled the boater out of the water and drag him as they crawled back along the dock to a waiting ambulance.

Chief Jim Pruitt noted that following a trip to the hospital, the man made a full recovery. “If not for the heroic and selfless effort by all three men, this incident would have had a grave outcome,” Pruitt said. “The Town of Cape Charles and the Cape Charles Police Department are grateful for the quick thinking of Keith Lewis and both police officers.”

Mayor George Proto presented both officers with a certificate and thanked them for their service.

Officer Tom Potts (left) and Sgt. Jay Bell received certificates from the Town of Cape Charles in appreciation for saving the life of a boater in distress. Also recognized, but not present, was Keith Lewis.

Substitutes made students “happy because we did think it was going to be a holiday. Now with SOLs (Standards of Learning tests), they have to provide lesson plans” and administrators make sure there is teaching.

Shelia Savage West, a county employee for 30 years, said she wasn’t debating what teachers deserve when she asked for something for all county employees. “When you consider this plan … look at both sides … look at employees who work at Public Works … the County Administrator’s Office. What is good for the goose is good for the gander,” she added.

West referred to a program that helped provide health insurance for county retirees and is no longer available.

Former Supervisor Gregory Duncan of Gargatha, who is employed by the county, also spoke about the incentive including all county workers. “I’m not standing here speaking against anyone else getting the benefits,” he said. “Lots of employees feel they are at the bottom rung of the ladder. … When de-

But she added, “When we have a retired teacher as a substitute, with or without lesson plans, the beat goes on. Learning continues and instructional time is not lost. So I would like to thank you, Supervisor Wolff, for bringing it to the attention of everyone how valuable our retired teachers are as substitutes.”

“I don’t see how you can give out a blank check like this,” said Ace Seybolt. He complained it is unclear how many workers will rush to retire and that it could cost “$2.4 million before it is over.”

Supervisor Robert Crockett said even with twice the retirees, 20, joining this year, the program will cost less every year, with about 10 retirees being phased out at age 62 per year.

The supervisors cannot approve the proposed fiscal 2015-16 budget until next week.

Following Monday’s hearing, County Administrator Steve Miner and Schools Superintendent Dr. Kregg Cuellar were able to reach most of the supervisors and School Board members to set up a joint meeting for 5 p.m. yesterday (March 26).

The Eastern Shore Post had already gone to press when the meeting started.

Look for a story in next week’s edition.

Wallops Test Flight Will Necessitate Short Closure of Route 175

A remotely piloted airplane will conduct a test flight at NASA's Wallops Flight Facility April 1 that will require the closure of Virginia Route 175 for about 20 minutes.

The test flight is scheduled to occur for 20 minutes between 1 and 2:30 p.m. and will require the closure of Route 175 between just east of the intersection with Atlantic Road and the entrance to the NOAA tracking facility, also known as “pump house turn.”

This will be the first flight of this aircraft from the runways at Wallops and thus requires the closure of Route 175 for public safety. Once the aircraft has proven that it can operate safely from the Wallops runways, a road closure will not be required for subsequent flights.

Backup flight days are between 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. April 2, 3, 6, 7 and 13 through 17.

Researchers from NASA's Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va., are using the Bat 4 aircraft, developed by MLB Company, Santa Clara, Cal., to test custom avionics systems and flight research technologies. The Bat 4 has a wingspan of 13 feet and is 8 feet long. The technologies being tested are designed to improve aviation safety and are focused on enhancing the fidelity of flight simulators used to train pilots to avoid in-flight loss of control from events such as aerodynamic stall.

Flying from the NASA Wallops Flight Facility allows the researchers to access many test-range support services while safely conducting state-of-the-art flight research.

Emmanuel Church
‘Writes’ Easter Eggs
Emmanuel Church in Jenkins Bridge has been delving into a centuries-old custom that is familiar to anyone who has an Eastern European background — making Pysanky for Easter.

A Power Point presentation introduced participants to the theological, cultural and artistic influences of Pysanky, often known as Ukrainian Easter eggs. Weekly sessions began with a brief meditation and prayer, followed by a brown-bag lunch time. Then everyone got out their kiskas, bees wax and eggs and began working. Eggs are “written” on with bees wax using a kiskas instrument and colored with non-edible dyes in a batik or wax-resist method, often with intricate traditional designs and colors. The eggs will be blessed on Easter Sunday and go home to be decorative displays for years as they serve as symbols of the hope of resurrection.

Erika Peterson Honored for Work With Migrant Community

To celebrate its 30th year of working to create practical solutions at the intersection of poverty, migration, and health, Migrant Clinicians Network has launched “30 Clinicians Making a Difference.” Among these is Erika Peterson of the Eastern Shore.

By Claire Hutkins Seda, Editor

Migrant Clinicians Network

When a migrant farmworker mother discovered that her daughter was being sexually abused by her husband, she was upset, confused, and scared. If she reports her husband, will he be deported? How can she stop the abuse?

“I was the first person she thought to call,” said Erika Peterson, who took that call the day before the interview for this profile. “I’m sort of a clearinghouse for the Spanish-speaking community, when they don’t know where to turn.”

Peterson, the migrant program manager and outreach worker at Eastern Shore Rural Health Systems, Inc., interfaces with thousands of migrant workers on this small peninsula.

“When the migrants first get here, I blanket the labor camps, I go on the school buses when they pull up to the gas station to get their soda in the morning, I’ll go to the Laundromats, I’ll go out to the field at lunchtime and have the crew leader call them over and I’ll give a presentation and get out my card,” she explained. “I get the word out, but it’s from repeated contact that they build that trust relationship, that they feel comfortable enough to come to you when they have a problem.”

Peterson grew up on the Eastern Shore, but wasn’t aware of the migrant workers living in her own community. After receiving a bachelor’s degree in forestry, she returned to the Shore to begin work in a conservation area. To keep up her Spanish — she had studied in Mexico as a forestry exchange student — she began volunteering at the local migrant health clinic.

“Even though I grew up in this community, I became aware of a whole new world that existed under my nose that I hadn’t been aware of, I hadn’t seen it before,” she admitted. “A lot of the local people who live here, we see the buses with the workers driving up and down the highway, we might come in contact with them at the grocery store, but that’s about the extent of our contact and our knowledge. ... It really opened up a whole new world when I started working here.”

Soon after, her forestry position was at risk of being cut with the downturn in the economy and the health center where she was volunteering had an outreach worker position opening. The move to migrant health seemed like a natural fit. “I’m from here, I knew the growers, I speak Spanish, and I was familiar with the health center already,” Peterson explained. She’s never looked back.

With fields of tomatoes as the backdrop, Peterson’s outreach work hit roadblocks, many of which were language-based. “In the camps where I was doing outreach, there was a majority indigenous Mexican workers, a lot of Zapotec and Mixtico workers. Their first language was not Spanish,” she said. “It was difficult. We had to rely sometimes on another member of their group who spoke enough Spanish. I still haven’t found interpreter services for a lot of the indigenous languages.”

The barriers were cultural as well, particularly with the indigenous populations. “I think that the indigenous people take a lot longer to win their trust to an outside person, especially me being from the United States,” Peterson surmised. She has learned that “even within their own country, a lot of times indigenous workers are abused or exploited by other Mexicans who are not indigenous, so they are more wary of outsiders because they have this history of being exploited.”

Peterson overcomes the barrier, and others, through persistence, working closely and regularly with the migrant workers she serves. “It’s from repeated contact that they build that trust relationship, that they feel comfortable enough to come to you when they have a problem,” she explained. “I feel a lot of times that it’s an honor that they’re willing to share good or bad news with me. It makes me know that I have the relationship of trust with them.”

Often, Peterson’s persistence must continue for months, but the payoff is felt for years. When a bus transporting migrants to the fields got rear-ended by a tractor-trailer, one worker suffered brain injuries and needed surgery. “He didn’t have any family here,” remembered Peterson, who managed the patient’s communication with the hospital, negotiated with worker’s compensation insurance, and arranged for transportation for health appointments. She also kept in contact with the patient’s family in Mexico.

“Once he was healthy enough, he went back to Mexico. It made him realize life is finite and he wanted to spend it with his family rather than be far away, even though he wouldn’t make as much money,” she said. The family still calls Peterson from Mexico every year on her birthday and at Christmas. “It makes me feel sure that I’m doing something that has a positive impact,” she said.

That worker’s epiphany — that spending much of one’s adult life away from home and family might not be worth it — is the biggest struggle for many of Peterson’s immigrant patients, not just the migrant workers, but the immigrants who have settled on the Shore. “The biggest challenge for them... is the fact that they had to migrate to be able to make ends meet,” said Peterson. Their inability to be able to make a living in their home country is devastating communities back home, explained Peterson. “It’s really changed the culture, their communities, and their family structure because we have a generation of children who are being raised by grandparents and only know their parents through a weekly phone call,” and the money they send home.

To assure that Rural Health employees understand the realities of the local migrant population, all new board members and employees — plus any medical students in rotation at the clinics — must meet with an outreach worker and visit a migrant camp as part of their orientation.

“They see firsthand the living conditions” and better understand what outreach services provide for the farmworkers. “We try to have them sit down at the camp at a table with a family and just talk, and hear from them, from the migrant perspective, what their issues and challenges are,” said Peterson. Most of the participants find the experience eye-opening. “It helps a lot with the level of care and compassion ... when they come into the center to be seen,” Peterson said.

Rural Health also collaborates with a non-profit called Student Action for Farmworkers by hosting college interns interested in migrant health. “I get to train them when they get here, but then also to watch them grow over the season,” Peterson said. She believes the interns go through “really transformative experiences that really shape what they’re going to do with the rest of their professional lives.”

Rural Health also has a partnership with the College of William & Mary to place students into the health centers for medical interpretation, which provides direct interaction with farmworkers, Peterson said.

Peterson intends to continue to dedicate her life to her work. “As long as the need is there to serve the migrant farmworkers, and we continue to get our 330G funds,” said Peterson, referring to the Bureau of Primary Health Care’s funding for federally-qualified health centers, “I’d love to stay in migrant health.”

This phenomenon of filling out brackets for the NCAA basketball tournament and then watching your teams go down in flames is becoming an annual rite for me. When I became sports editor at the Post two years ago, I asked if I could get in the office pool when the pairings were announced for the tournament. It turns out they had never filled out brackets before. In fact, one of the Post staffers thought I was talking about baseball because that is the sport played in spring.

Well, I thought, winning the pool at this office will be easy. Naturally, I was the guy with all the good information, having watched a ton of college basketball during the season. I knew what the analysts were thinking. I had the feel for the dark horses, the Cinderella teams and the can’t-miss favorites.

And Linda (thinking it was baseball) won the first year while Angie claimed the pot the second year. I haven’t even come in second out of our five staffers yet.

I said this year would be different. It just might be. I went heavy with the ACC teams, but that included putting Virginia in my Final Four. You probably know they were eliminated Sunday. The Hoos were the only ACC team of six entries not to make the Sweet 16.

But I also had Baylor and Iowa State in my Sweet 16. They both went down in their first game. I didn’t see Wichita State taking out in-state rival Kansas. And, though I should have known better, I went with my heart in choosing VCU over Ohio State.

Of course, we know the odds for a perfect bracket at this stage are ridiculously long. Out of 11.5 million brackets filled out for the ESPN Challenge alone, there is only one perfect bracket left after the first weekend. He told a reporter that he did not watch a full college basketball game all season. The show-off only filled out his bracket when his brother called and said he had just 15 minutes left before the deadline.

In case you’re interested, this guy picked Kentucky to win it all. So did I, and probably millions more, although I am now rooting for Duke to take the title. I remember the winner in my office bracket a decade or so ago was someone who picked the teams based on what mascots she liked best. This is why they call it March Madness.

Of course, when I mentioned that term in the office one year, a female staffer asked me if I was talking about a shopping spree.

No one in recorded history has filled out a perfect bracket to the end of the tournament, but the alluring possibility makes March Madness addicting to many. The chance of picking a perfect NCAA tournament bracket are 1 in 9.2 quintillion.

That doesn’t stop people from trying. The American Gaming Association estimates that 40 million Americans will fill out more than 70 million brackets and wager approximately $9 billion on the NCAA tournament.

The $9 billion is more than double what the AGA estimated was bet on the Super Bowl ($3.9 billion) in the United States. The total number of brackets estimated to be filled out will be greater than the number of ballots cast (nearly 66 million) for President Barack Obama in the 2012 election.

And even the president takes time from his job to fill out a bracket. He annually makes his picks on television for all the world to see. He also picked Kentucky to win it all, but he has them beating Villanova in the title game. Villanova, like Virginia, is toast. Did I tell you Virginia is in my Final Four?

But then you don’t care about my bracket, unless you are in my office pool. And I don’t need any more competition there.

You only care about yours. And, more than likely, your bracket is as busted as mine.

The Nandua baseball team has enjoyed a good run for several seasons, dominating the Eastern Shore District and winning its fair share of non-conference games while advancing deep into the state tournament the past three years.

But with five freshman in the starting lineup Monday, the Warriors were no match for Northumberland, dropping a 16-0 decision. Nandua trailed only 3-0 after four innings, but a 13-run onslaught in the fifth inning by the visitors made the final score seem more lopsided than the game actually was.

Nandua managed only two hits in the whitewashing, with John Kilmon and Ben Marra each producing a single.

Hurting the Warrior cause was the absence of juniors Derek Bjorlo and Jake Guy, both vital cogs in the Nandua offense last year. Bjorlo was nursing a minor injury while Guy is recovering from arm surgery with no timetable for his return. When healthy, the pair would anchor the pitching duties for Nandua.

Sophomore Brandon Brewster started for the Warriors and allowed three runs in three innings. Billy Kellem, Trevor Wessells and Michael McCluskey pitched the final two innings, and all were on the mound in the final inning when a series of hits, walks and errors led to the 13 Indian runs.

“We are very young this year. We played a decent four innings, but the fifth inning hurt with a lot of walks and errors,” said Nandua coach Luke Brankley. “Errors and walks will always kill you.

Nandua takes on Norfolk Christian tomorrow at home in a 4 p.m. start.

In other action, Northampton lost to Alliance Christian 23-0 last Thursday.

Chincoteague stormed back from a one-run deficit in the bottom of the sixth inning with an eight-run scoring spree on nine hits, including a two-run single by freshman Dustin Holloway with the bases loaded to take a 12-4 decision over Holly Grove on Tuesday at the Pony field.

Joe Thornton led off the key inning with a double for the Ponies, now 2-0 and hosting Broadwater on Saturday with a double header set to start at noon.

“It was a back-and-forth game until the sixth inning, and we found a way late in the game to push across runs. It was good to build confidence going into Saturday’s games,” said Chincoteague coach Will Thompson.

Junior Trevor Reed pitched six innings to get the win, allowing four hits, two walks, two earned runs and striking out a pair. “Trevor gave us what we wanted all game and took control,” said Coach Thompson.

Sophomore Trey Fisher got the save with one inning of work, sealing the win by striking out the first and third batters of the inning.

At the plate, Thornton was 2 for 4 with a double, Holloway had two singles and a pair of RBIs, Ryan Mason had two singles and an RBI, Mason Marshall had two singles and a RBI, and Fisher had two singles and a stolen base.

Farlow, Hart Lead Vikes to 7-4 Win Over PC

Broadwater won its season opener over Portsmouth Christian 7-4 Monday on the road as Ben Farlow pitched five innings with no earned runs to get the victory. Andrew Hart was a major contributor at the plate with a home run and a double to collect two RBIs. Farlow helped his cause as well with a homer and two RBIs.

The game was scoreless until the Vikings took a four-run lead in the top of the fifth and remained that way until the hosts scored an unearned run in the bottom of that frame.

Broadwater then struck for three runs in the top of the seventh inning to take a 7-1 lead before Portsmouth Christian came back with three of its own before the Vikes got the final out.

Farlow struck out nine and walked only two while allowing only two hits. Austin Murphy pitched the final two innings, striking out three batters while allowing two earned runs.

In addition to Hart, Major Morgan had two hits, Murphy had a double and Cortland Bunce had a single.

The Vikings travel to Chincoteague Saturday for a double header which starts at noon.
Lady Jacket Bats Beat BA 5-1; Williams Homers

Story and photos by Bill Sterling

Northampton softballers topped Broadwater 5-1 Tuesday at the Viking field as Briana Williams hit her third home run in as many games as she has played at Broadwater in her career.

Williams tied the game at 1-1 in the third inning after Broadwater took a 1-0 lead when Olivia Kellam escaped a rundown while stealing home.

In the fifth inning, Taylor Nadeau had an RBI double after the Vikings chose to walk Williams intentionally. Cassie Nadeau followed with a two-run single in the decisive fifth inning, one of her two hits on the day. Heather Guagenti was 2 for 4 at the plate.

Sara Weber pitched a complete game, allowing only four hits and a walk.

For Broadwater, Parker Murphy was 2 for 3 with a triple, and Anna Sexauer was 2 for 3 with a double.

Natavia Wharton pitched five innings for the Vikings, striking out four while allowing seven hits and two walks in giving up four runs. Murphy pitched the final inning, giving up an unearned run.

Viking coach Noble Palmer said Kellam played an outstanding game at second base. He said defensive contributions also were made by Elizabeth Floyd and Palmer Smith, who saved runs by spearing a line drive with two outs in the second inning.

Palmer also said Jacket shortstop Michaela Lewis “was awesome in the field,” handling eight chances without an error.

Jackets Win Opener

The Lady Jacket softball team opened its season with a 20-0 victory over Alliance Christian. Sara Weber pitched a one-hitter and allowed only two walks. Cassie Nadeau led the team at the plate, going 3 for 3 with five RBIs. Meghan Walpole was 2 for 2 with two RBIs, and Taylor Nadeau, Briana Williams, Heather Guagenti, and Makayla Wilson each added a hit as well.

“It was a great team effort to start the season,” said Jacket coach Devin Allen.

Vikes Top WC, 16-3

On Monday, the Viking softballers trounced Williamsburg Christian 16-3 as Greta Bunce went 4 for 4. Madison Wessells and Elizabeth Floyd contributed a pair of hits.

Viking coach Noble Palmer said his team played solid defense in picking up a conference win.

Ponies Blanked 6-0

The Chincoteague softball team was blanked 6-0 Tuesday afternoon by Holly Grove on the Pony home field.

Pony coach Jimmy Bloxom said his young team was up against a tough pitcher in Holly Grove’s Darby Fitzpatrick.

Pony pitcher Emily Haugh pitched effectively for five innings, with Madison Tyndall relieving for two innings. “Four of their six runs were unearned,” so the girls pitched well,” said Coach Bloxom.

Despite some miscues in the field, Bloxom said second baseman Ronney Malone played an outstanding game in the field, turning an unassisted double play.

At the plate, Krista Reed was 2 for 3 and Madison Hudgins, Kristen Fox and Haugh each had one hit.

Chincoteague hosts Broadwater in a double header starting at noon tomorrow.

Jesus Maldonado scored three goals to lead Northampton to a 5-0 win over Appomattox Governor’s School Tuesday at Northampton. Elion Morales scored a pair of goals for the Jackets.

“We are working together well and coming together as a team,” said Northampton coach John Gorman, who has 10 seniors on this year’s squad.

“Some of the players have developed and matured over last year; then we also have some sophomores making nice contributions.”

Nandua Girls Win Pair

The Nandua girls’ soccer team won the season opener last week 4-1 over Northumberland.

Ryan Wright scored a pair of goals while Rosa Marquez and Belen Roblero scored one each.

“I was very proud of the girls. It was an awesome start to our season,” said Nandua coach Dana Wright.

The Nandua girls defeated Bruton 1-0 Tuesday night on a Ryan Wright goal.

“The defense played very well. We had numerous chances to score,” said Coach Wright.

Nandua hosts King William tonight at 5.

Firebirds Win on Road

Monday night the Arcadia Firebirds traveled to Northumberland High School and earned a solid 6-0 win.

Two goals were provided by captain Pedro Francisco and Jonathan Esteban, while captain Caleb Lucy and Billy Rhodealair netted a goal each.

The Firebirds were able to keep a clean sheet with strong goal tending by Kain Turner. The defense, led by captain Josh Sanns, moved the ball well into transition from its half of the field and into an all attack against the opposition. Defensive players Horacio Gomez, Richard Perez and Jordi Velasquez moved the ball well to attacking players and held Northumberland to only four shots, according to Arcadia coach Patrick Cornwell, who added that Edgardo Martinez and Louis Lopez provided remarkable ball distribution while controlling the midfield.

“The Firebirds dictated play most of the game with help from supporting players captain Donovan Underwood, Ublester Baltazar and Donald Ayers. The Firebirds are looking to build off this first game and continue into a great season,” said Cornwell.

Jacket Girls Blank W&L

“All the girls played well despite the cold temperatures, moving the ball well, keeping the ball on W&L’s side the majority of the game,” said Jacket coach Tabi Webb, who noted that Kennedy Webb did an outstanding job distributing the ball at the midfield position. Webb said Michelle Martinez and Karla Benavides had outstanding games at the outside-back position.

On Wednesday, Northampton played West Point to a 1-1 tie, with Taylor knotting the score with a late first half goal. Coach Webb said Kennedy Webb played an outstanding game and goalie Elizabeth Lilliston made some key saves.

Nandua Boys Fall 4-3

The Nandua boys dropped a 4-3 decision to Bruton Tuesday night at home.

The scoring went back and forth with Bruton getting the final goal. Northumberland scored three of Bruton’s goals came on free kicks.

Cristian Esteban, Seth Lewis and Efrain Ruiz scored for the Warriors, with Victor Esteban getting two assists.

“We are a young team and we played well enough to get a W,” said Nandua coach Paul Nolz. “Giving up goals on free kicks is fixable, and Bruton has always been strong in those situations.”

Nandua hosts King William tonight at 7.

I used to always climb the stairs rather than step even one toe on an elevator. Even as an infant, I'm told, I hollered in those contraptions. But, what if the thing broke down and I was in there for days with a stranger? What would we talk about? Getting out? How long could we last on limited air? The weather?

When you're walking down the aisles of a grocery store, it's easy to strike up a conversation with others who are also in the shopping mode. There are hundreds of items around to get the words flowing. But the inside of an elevator isn't very motivating. Hmmm. "I had a metal wall panel like that once. We used it to slide down a hill in the snow." That would do, I guess.

My Facebook friends said good topics of conversation with strangers include one's favorite things like books, movies, vacation spots, food, cars, bands and painters. OK, I like mysteries; comedies and dramas; Disney World, beaches in winter and mountains in spring and fall; eggplant and chicken tacos, Mini-Coopers; rock and roll; and almost all art.

But what if this stranger thought that country music and steak were the best? Would we have a stare down? And there's that question of raw versus steamed oysters. I like them au naturel. Don't you?

I must follow my mother's instructions to avoid politics and religion. Oh yeah, and I like to eat roasted duck that was domesticated. That could make a hunter shake his head.

One friend told me to talk about family and pets. My dog Ratty did live to be 26. I could talk all day about how he loved the Eastern Shore because it is flat land. When his eyes failed, he still could walk around the outside of the house exactly three times for exercise. Uh, I think that story would just make me want out of the elevator even more. It would definitely be time to bang on the wall and yell for HELP.

I don't drink soda anymore, but we could pretend we were taking the Coke and Pepsi test. I do know the difference. Does a cell phone pick up in an elevator? I think so since mine doesn't go dead when I go through the tunnels of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. So we could call someone if we were equipped.

If this getting stuck occurred last week, I would probably be wearing the green. If the other person wasn't I would wonder why. And I would ask and probably not like the answer. Ah, another topic to avoid.

One of my Facebook friends told me to tell my best fishing story. His involved a 13-foot shark that chased him while he was fishing in chest waders. He's still alive so I guess he got away which means that fish is the one with the story.

My best fish story also involves a shark. It was caught at the dock in Wachapreague and a guy from Saxi-is took it away in the trunk of his car with the head flopping out on one end and the tail on the other. It could have been the same shark that chased my friend. Both were ornery cusses.

Oh, and by the way, the first fish I ever caught was a most beautiful and tasty flounder. I hear the season is coming soon and I'm ready. I only need a boat and a driver.

Now if I could just get out of this elevator.

Take Back Our Nation

Dear Editor:

Our society seems to be getting out of control. I believe Godly people need to take back our nation. Prayer has been taken out of our schools since 1962-63. There is no longer “One nation under God.”

Our younger generation is confused about who they are; they have little or no morals and values. Once in a while when shopping in a grocery store, I might hear a child cursing at their parent. Youth are not concerned about getting their first job. Instead they are only interested in when their parent is going to buy them the next electronic gadget, not concerned in the least where the money comes from. Most youth act that way mainly because they just were not taught structure or respect.

Television and the Internet have made a negative impact with young viewers, seeing excessive violence, hate, and disrespect for one another. The days of coming home with a bloody nose because you disagree with someone are now gone. Kids are walking around armed, and are using guns to resolve their differences. As a result, some are winding up in a coffin instead of needing an ice pack. Newspapers and other media are full of stories about violence, hate, drugs, and crime.

Our society seems to be focused on how to disrespect, demoralize, and destroy one another. The definition “high on life” is seeing one of God’s creations or a feeling when you help someone in need, not how a person feels when they smoke weed, shoot up, or take pills. It breaks my heart to see so many young people throw their lives away, not thinking about the consequences. I don't think parents are realizing how much of a negative social environment their kids are living in, and the impact that it is having on our youth.

When I grew up, we used to be scared if we did something bad and our actions had gotten out of control what the repercussions might be. Fear of getting in trouble is what kept us out of trouble. I remember being taught, “Honor thy mother and thy father;” “Love thy neighbor;” and that stealing or taking someone’s life is a sin. Godly people have structure and guidelines to live by, a life of respect, honor and love. Godly people are not perfect, but it seems to be a positive way of life.

In doing a small amount of research, I was pleasantly surprised to find that in 1990, the Supreme Court ruled in favor of the Equal Access Act, allowing student-led religious groups. Students are able to gather before or after school hours to pray and practice their religious beliefs.

Praying for the homeless and the less fortunate would plant seeds of goodness. If we could take the people standing around in the streets rioting, and put that energy into projects to help one another, it would be accomplishing something for the good of mankind. Maybe there is hope after all. I believe we can get beyond the hate and disrespect if we could turn negative energy into positive energy. So I believe if we were to put God and prayer back into the picture, and not be so selfish always thinking of ourselves, we would be thinking of love, peace, and helping others. We could take back our “One nation under God” and all live in a better place for now and the generations to come.
