4 Ponies Euthanized After Sickness

By Linda Cicoira

Four ponies from the famous herd that lives on Virginia’s Assateague Island died last week after enduring a hard battle with swamp cancer. The figure brings the death toll to seven ponies.

Denise Bowden, a spokesperson for the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Co., which owns the herd, made the announcement Friday. “After much consultation and much professional vet medical opinions, a decision was made to humanely euthanize the ... remaining ponies fighting this awful, awful fungus.”

“Shadow, Lightning, Calci’t’n, and Elusive Star, as well as the others, received the very best care money could buy,” Bowden continued. “They had surgeries, more medicine than you can imagine, round the clock care and lots and lots of love and attention. They just couldn’t fight this off and before we let them suffer any more than they have been, we feel the right decision was made.”

Three other ponies — Lyra, Essie, and Raindancer — had succumbed to the disease during the first half of December.

The pony committee of the fire company is working with Fish & Wildlife and four vets. “If anything good has come out of this it is that Dr. (Richard) Hansen is/has diligently worked on creating a preventive vaccine for this fungus and is now awaiting FDA approval,” the fire department official said on Facebook. “Cross your fingers that it gets approval and we can work to vaccinate our ponies very soon. Also, Fish & Wildlife Service is taking a good hard look at this fungus and will hopefully be doing everything they can to eradicate it from the refuge. It isn’t only a pony problem. It can affect any animal that comes in contact with it.”

“Throughout this whole swamp cancer process, we have consulted with Dr. Hansen and Dr. (Bob) Glass. They have been generous with their time and service. Our vet team has been hands-on practically 24/7.” Bowden said Monday that Drs. George Marble and Charlie Cameron from Eastern Shore Animal Hospital have also been working with the ponies.

“This has been a learning experience, an exhausting experience, and life experience,” she added to the department’s Facebook page. “I ask that when you say your prayers for 2019... (Continued on Page 8)

Crash Claims Life of Horntown Man

By Linda Cicoira

A Horntown man was killed in Templeville in a single vehicle accident New Year’s Eve, according to Sgt. Michelle Anaya of the state police.

Dietrich Geramane Davis, 45, of Fleming Road, was driving a 2005 Ford Focus at the intersection of Chesser Road and Sand Street at 9 p.m. when he lost control of the vehicle, ran off the road, struck several trees, and was ejected. Davis died at the scene. He was not wearing a seat belt.
Retired Doctor Asks Northampton To Take New Approach To Reduce Suspensions

By Stefanie Jackson

Every year in Northampton schools, two and a half times as many students are suspended compared to the state average. Accomack schools are not far behind, with nearly twice as many students suspended compared to the state average. Suspension rates are even higher for black and Hispanic students than for white students.

Throughout 2018, Dr. Arthur Carter, of Nassawadox, frequently attended Northampton school board meetings and spoke during public comment periods, advocating for restorative justice – an alternative to traditional, punitive discipline – as a means of reducing suspensions for Northampton students.

Psychologist and counselor Gerald Boyd, of Eastville, has also been a proponent of restorative justice in Northampton schools.

As evidence that restorative discipline is gaining acceptance in other Virginia school divisions, Carter shared information from the 33rd Annual Virginia School Boards Association (VSBA) Conference on Education in Richmond last July.

Principal Laurel Byrd, of Thomas Hunter Middle School, in Mathews County, said studies show that “zero tolerance policies and practices that punish have no long-term effect on student behavior.”

She suggested that “restorative practices” may help reduce the “school to prison pipeline” and an increasing amount of teacher frustration and referrals written.

Successfully incorporating restorative discipline in schools requires a “shift in focus,” she said. Traditional discipline punishes students for breaking the rules, but restorative discipline assists students in mending their relationships.

Punishment often leads to “lying and defensiveness,” but restorative justice encourages “honesty and truth-telling.”

It also redefines accountability as “taking responsibility for actions” rather than simply “accepting punishment.”

Instead of school authorities punishing a student and often isolating the offender, the restorative process involves everyone affected by the offender’s actions, including the victim, and seeks to rehabilitate the student within the school community.

Students who undergo restorative discipline are also less likely to re-offend.

Recent data from Fairfax County Public Schools, which have implemented restorative justice, corroborates this claim.

About 94 percent of Fairfax students who participated in a restorative justice conference did not have a second violation of the school division’s code of conduct within one year. Of 1,086 offenders who attended a conference, only 65 committed a similar offense in the following year.

About 48 percent of the students who re-offended were in special education.

Reducing school suspensions is crucial to children’s future success, the Fairfax presentation suggested. According to 2012 data from the U.S. Department of Education and Department of Justice, middle schoolers who are repeatedly suspended are three times more likely to be involved in the justice system later in life.

Just one suspension reduces a student’s likelihood to graduate from high school by 20 percent, the data further suggested.

“Socioeconomic and racial disproportionality in the administration of school discipline” also continues to be a problem, according to an Albemarle County Public Schools report given at the VSBA conference.

In the 2011-2012 school year, the most recent year for which federal data on school discipline was available, black students made up only 24 percent of all Virginia public school students, yet they accounted for 51 percent of suspensions and 41 percent of expulsions.

To address this issue, Albemarle schools are implementing STEP (Short Term Education Program), an alternative to out-of-school suspension that helps students reach their academic goals and provides one-on-one counseling.

Carter has not yet received an official response from Northampton school board members concerning their position on restorative justice. About a month ago, he re-addressed the board.

“All we’re asking is that the school system join with a community committee to begin working on how we can obtain sustainable funds to implement restorative, inclusionary discipline” and “eliminate the disparities that we still have in school discipline … to do what we need to do – the right thing,” he said.

Legislators Queue Up Bills Ahead of Jan. 9 General Assembly Session Start Date - Part II

By Linda Cicoira

Virginia Legislators continued to introduce bills recently to the General Assembly and are awaiting a vote in the Courts of Justice Committee for the decriminalization of “simple” marijuana possession.

The marijuana bill, as written, comes with stipulations. It “provides a civil penalty of no more than $50 for a first violation, $100 for a second violation, and $250 for a third or subsequent violation. Current law imposes a maximum fine of $500 and a maximum 30-day jail sentence for a first offense, and subsequent offenses are a Class 1 misdemeanor.”

The proposal states “suspended sentence/substance abuse screening provisions and driver’s license suspension provisions apply only to criminal violations or to civil violations by a juvenile.” The court could suspend a driver’s license for a civil violation committed by an adult.

A conviction would prohibit the purchase or transport of a handgun and disqualification for a concealed handgun permit. Named Senate Bill 997 (SB977), it was introduced by Sen. Adam Ebbin with support from co-patron Del. Mark Levin. Both are from Alexandria.

The bill has been awaiting a vote since July 16, 2018. The General Assembly session will begin Jan. 9 and continue for 45 days. Introduced recently are proposed bills that would:

- Make it a Class 6 felony to leave “a loaded, unsecured firearm in such a manner as to endanger the life or limb of any person under the age of 18 ... Current law provides that anyone who reckless leaves a loaded, unsecured firearm in such a manner as to endanger the life or limb of any child under the age of 14 is guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor.”
- Direct the Joint Legislative Audit and Review Commission to study health care spending in the state.
- Create a procedure in which a Commonwealth’s attorney or law-enforcement officer “may apply to a general district court, circuit court, or juvenile and domestic relations district court judge or magistrate for an emergency substantial risk order to prohibit a person who poses a substantial risk of injury to themselves or others from purchasing, possessing, or transporting a firearm.”
- Prohibit public bodies from procuring articles produced by inmates or services provided by inmates. This includes volunteer EMS agencies, fire departments, sheltered workshops, and community service organizations.
- Prohibit broadband providers from offering or renewing services to consumers within any locality in Virginia in which certain media is throttled, blocked, or prioritized on the basis of its content, format, host address, or source.
- Allow the attorney general’s office to represent a member of the General Assembly in any civil matter alleging that such member in his official capacity violated the Virginia Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). The proposal was a recommendation of the FOIA Advisory Council.
- Remove the requirement that the owner a vehicle used as a taxicab attach a statement to that effect to the title of the vehicle prior to the sale, transfer, or disposal of such vehicle. The bill also would remove the requirement requiring the Department of Motor Vehicles to place an indicator on any new title for the vehicle indicating such prior use.
- Add parents who receive support or services from the deceased to the primary list of beneficiaries who may receive a distribution of wrongful death damages.
- Repeal provisions of Virginia code that, among other things, an employee of the state, a locality, or other political subdivision who goes on strikes or willfully refuses to perform the duties of his employment is deemed to have terminated his employment and is thereafter ineligible for employment.
- Remove the exemption from the Virginia Minimum Wage Act of any person who normally works and is paid on the basis of the amount of

Cheriton Council Debates Future of Town Policing, Discusses Drainage

By Stefanie Jackson

Since former Cheriton Police Chief Marc Marshall was the sole member of the town’s police force when his contract was terminated in late September, the police department was rendered inactive.

For the last three months, the Northampton County Sheriff’s Office has been under contract providing all police coverage in Cheriton, and deputies have written 105 traffic tickets there, generating approximately $18,500 in revenue for the town.

“I wish it had been more revenue,” Mayor Larry LeMond said, but he added that Cheriton paid the sheriff’s department only $3,600 for its service, meaning the town earned five dollars for every dollar it invested.

LeMond wanted council members to consider the expenses and revenue associated with the contract when deciding what to do with the town police car that remains parked and has a dead battery from not being driven in four months.

“It’s an asset of $35,000 sitting right outside the door here, doing nothing,” he said.

Because the police car is not being used, “it’s not an asset, it’s a liability,” Councilwoman Norma Spencer countered. She recommended selling the vehicle and all related police equipment.

Councilwoman Jackie Davis reminded her peers that they had previously discussed possibly sheltering the police car under cover until a final decision could be made about the vehicle’s fate.

LeMond added that Sheriff David Doughty is “definitely” interested in buying the police car when he hires a new deputy in early 2019.

Councilman Barry Downing agreed that “we should get rid of it,” and Councilman Robert Lewis favored selling the car to the sheriff’s department.

Councilman Matthew Yancy agreed with selling the car as long as the council wouldn’t be “closing the door” on possibly reactivating the police department.

LeMond suggested keeping the money made from selling the police car in a separate account instead of putting it in the general fund.

Drainage Issues

The mayor, council members, town staff, and residents discussed Cheriton’s drainage issues and who is responsible for maintaining its ditches.

The discussion centered on poor drainage at Cheriton United Methodist Church, situated between Sunnyside Road to the north and Wilson Road to the south. Both roads connect to Business Route 13 to the west.

On the east side of the property runs a drainpipe that was buried in 2003 or 2004 when the ditch that was there was deemed a safety hazard and filled in.

Town Clerk Stacy Salenski contacted Dale Pusey at the Virginia Department of Transportation to determine who is responsible to maintain the drainpipe.

VDOT maintains the culverts on Sunnyside Road and Wilson Road, but not the drainpipe by the church because VDOT has no right-of-way there, creating a liability, Salenski said.

Town Code Official Warren Wisneski said, “VDOT, a couple years ago, just decided they weren’t doing maintenance on private property anymore because, apparently, of some lawsuits,” and “everything reverted to the original homeowners.”

VDOT began publishing brochures as early as 2013 stating that “property owners are responsible for the maintenance of drainage facilities on their private property.”

Downing asked, “You have a piece of property and a ditch runs through... and is owned by the town, and it drains the whole town. ... VDOT gives up cleaning that ditch anymore so the landowner becomes responsible for the town’s drain- age ditch, is that what you’re saying?”

LeMond said, “If the ditch he’s referring to drains most of Cheriton, a lot of Cheriton, then this council and this town have a responsibility for the common good.”

Wisneski said, “If the town council wishes to take care of it … I don’t know of anything stopping you.”

Cheriton’s annual budget includes $20,000 for drainage projects.

LeMond recommended further discussion of the matter at a later date.

Residents Survive Fire, Pets Perish

By Linda Cicoira

A fire that swept through a two-story wood-frame Bobtown home near Pungoteague last weekend injured the couple who lived there and killed dozens of their animals.

Laura Chuquin-Naylor said she and her husband “escaped without major injuries … it would be premature to offer any comments as we are still working with the insurance company.”

Chuquin-Naylor, who owns Honeysuckle Rabbitry, posted on her rabbit rescue site on Facebook, “I’m sorry for not answering inquiries promptly during the past days. Our house and part of the rabbitry were destroyed by a fire and we lost all our means of communication. We were lucky to get out alive. The house and our possessions are all replaceable but what breaks my heart is that we lost one very special dog, our five beautiful cats, and 20 rabbits. All our pedigrees Lion heads and Sables are gone, as well as our breeding pair of Agouti Continental Giants and all our pet rabbits. Abuelito died hugging the ball he loved so much. I am devastated. All the rabbits in the ‘available’ posts survived with no issues and need to find new homes as soon as possible.”

Chief Adam James, of Onancock Volunteer Fire Department Inc., said, “Two people jumped out a first-floor window into the yard prior to the fire department arrival.” They were taken to Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital and later transferred “across the bay for smoke inhalation.” State police were called to investigate.

There was “heavy fire on the first floor with some extension to the second floor,” James said. It took about 45 minutes to control the fire and a couple of hours to overhaul and extinguish hot spots.

Most of the windows in the house have been covered with boards.

Chief Sam Baines, of Melfa Fire & Rescue Co., was in command. He did not answer an inquiry.

According to a spokesperson for the Eastern Shore 9-1-1 Commission, the house is on the 2800 block of Bobtown Road. Firefighters and EMS from Wachapreague, Melfa, Onancock, Painter, and Tasley responded.

Kerr Henderson

Mr. U.K. “Kerr” Henderson III, 79, of Onancock, beloved husband of the late Bonnie Watkinson Henderson for nearly 50 years, and loving father, brother, and grandfather, passed away peacefully Wednesday, Dec. 26, 2018. Born in Nassawadox March 31, 1939, he was the son of the late Dr. Upshur Kerr Henderson Jr. and Daris Greer Henderson.

Mr. Henderson attended Accomack County Public Schools until transferring to Hargrove Military Academy, graduating in 1957. He continued his education at Old Dominion University and began his career as a pharmaceutical sales rep. He aspired to follow in the footsteps of his namesake; however, it wasn’t long before he knew a suit and tie wasn’t for him. After a few years working for Custis & Brown Seafood, in Washington, D.C., he accepted a position as quality control supervisor at Perdue Farms, from which he later retired. Post retirement, Mr. Henderson took a part-time job as a delivery driver for NAPA Auto Parts. He looked forward to visiting the stores each day, and he especially enjoyed the many friendships made and stories shared over the years.

Raised in a Christian home, Mr. Henderson and his family were members of Drummondtown United Methodist Church. Like any true Eastern Shoreman, he loved feeling the mud between his toes, and there were few places he’d rather be than clamming on Cedar Island, fishing, or boating with his family. He was well known for his talent to refinish furniture, a passion that quickly turned into a side job for many years. He was an avid hunter during his youth and enjoyed shooting guns of all kinds, most of which were from his personal collection.

Survivors include his three children, Terry F. Payne and his wife, Melissa, of Onancock, Cindy P. Joynes and her husband, Arthur; of Accomac, and Lisa P. Scott and her husband, Scotty, of Onancock; sister, Joan Henderson Shaw, of Accomac; five grandchildren, Kelly Scott Dougherty and her husband, Jeff; Shannon Terry Joynes, Hayley Reide Payne, Everett Wilson Savage, and Martin Quinn Savage; great-grandchildren, Landon and Alex; nephews, Douglas Shaw and his wife, Cathy, and their daughters, Claire, Kate and Nathalie, of Annapolis, Md.; numerous cousins and their families; and perhaps most importantly, his dog, Beggar, whom he adored. In addition to his wife, Bonnie W. Henderson, and his parents, Mr. Henderson was predeceased by his grandson, Christopher Kerr Hart; and brother-in-law, Brooks L. Shaw.

It was Mr. Henderson’s wish for his loved ones to gather privately at the family home, Willow Hill, where they will lay him to rest with Bonnie. It was also his wish that friends celebrate his life as they enjoy the water, fishing, clamming, or just enjoying the beauty of the shore.

In honor of Mr. Henderson’s love for animals and the barrier islands, memorial contributions may be made in his memory to the SPCA, P.O. Box 164, Onley, VA 23418, or to the Barrier Island Center, P.O. Box 206, Machipongo, VA 23405.

Theodore Charles Markulin

Mr. Theodore Charles “Ted” Markulin, 82, husband of Edna Suiter Markulin and a resident of Melfa, passed away Monday, Dec. 31, 2018, surrounded by his loving family. Born July 12, 1936, in Rahway, N.J., he was a son of the late Charles Markulin and Eugenia Ratzin Markulin.

Mr. Markulin was raised in Avenel, N.J., and it was there that he met the love of his life, Edna. As neighborhood high school sweethearts, they were married soon after graduation, immediately followed by his enlistment in the U.S. Air Force. Mr. Markulin served his country for decades, both in the U.S. Air Force and the Air National Guard, retiring as an aircraft technician with the rank of senior master sergeant. His military training focused on mechanics, and over the years, he became a jack of all trades. Mr. Markulin was a highly skilled aircraft and auto mechanic, a talented carpenter and woodworker, and grew an impressively large vegetable garden every year — trades he taught each of his children throughout their childhoods.

Mr. and Mrs. Markulin happily opened their home to anyone in need, and all who received their beautiful gift of hospitality soon became family. Theodore Charles Markulin was a true patriarch who led by example with dedication to his family, his work, and unwavering love to all.

And that meant Linda’s father lived out his last days with dignity

Some years back, when Terri Shook was doing oncology nursing, she witnessed firsthand the importance of end-of-life care for patients and families. Because of that experience, Terri became a part of Riverside’s hospice team – the team that helped Linda’s father live out his final days in a setting of comfort and compassion.

Shore Swim Makes Splash Over the Holiday Break

By Krystle Bono, Submitted Photo

Shore Swim hit the road last Friday to participate in a rare invitational at the Cambridge YMCA in Maryland. As one of eight teams taking part in the event, Shore Swim took a break from the usual competitive meet, and instead, took part in the “fun” invitational, with events such as a doggie paddle relay while barking.

Other fun events included a wet T-shirt relay, where one swimmer swam with a shirt on and then had to maneuver the wet shirt off and onto the next swimmer. All the events were relays, instead of the normally scheduled meets that also include individual events. All of these elements made the event different and just plain fun for all the athletes who were able to participate.

Lacy Gouldin, Luke Parks, Lauren Johnston, Patrick Lilliston, Donathon Johnson, Nora Bahn, Allie Penland, Cade Williams, McKaley Parks, Jamie Wert, and Taylor Thornes all took time out of their holiday break to make the trek to Maryland for the fun, but beneficial, event.

Head coach Bryan McElwain said the team had a blast. “It was a great event put on by the Cambridge team. It gave our swimmers a reason to practice over the holiday break. The meet got them something to look forward to. It was also great to reward the swimmers with a fun and exciting event for a change, for all the hard work and pool time they put in too,” reflected Coach McElwain.

Shore Swim will dive into the second half of the season, having six of its eight meets in January, and are set to host their next swim meet at the Eastern Shore YMCA in Onley, Jan. 11, against Pocomoke High School.

Morgan Selected as Virginia Small College Wide Receiver of the Year

By Krystle Bono

Broadwater Academy alumni Major Morgan was named by the Touchdown Club of Richmond as the Small College Wide Receiver of the Year Dec. 14. The Hampden Sydney junior recorded a season high of 13 catches at Ferrum Oct. 27, and 220-yards and three touchdowns against Randolph-Macon Nov. 10.

Morgan has previous accolades that include third-team All-South Region and first-team All-ODAC (Old Dominion Athletic Conference). He led the ODAC with 81 receptions, 1,143 receiving yards, and was second overall with 12 receiving touchdowns. The former Viking also led Division III in receiving yards per game with 127.

Last season, Morgan registered a total of 778 yards, ranking him fifth in the ODAC, and his 56 catches earned him sixth overall.

Lessard Breaks Personal Record
Youth angler Gregory Lessard hooked a 54-pound, 13-ounce rock Dec. 26, besting his previous week’s catch of 45 pounds, 3 ounces.

The public is invited to attend, and new or prospective members are welcome.

Final Push for Hunters for the Hungry

The Eastern Shore chapter of Hunters for the Hungry is in its final few weeks of deer donations for this season. The deer harvest season closes on Jan. 5. Since 1997, the program has received and processed over 4,000 deer donations. The deer donated have been processed into over 500,000 servings of this nutritious lean meat to the clients of The Food Bank of the Eastern Shore and other agencies. There is no charge to the hunter to donate the deer. The deer must be properly harvested and registered, field-dressed, and taken to one of the processors or collection points. The chapter goal this year is 150 deer.

The program raises funds from local individuals, businesses, and civic organizations to pay the processing cost of the deer. This year the cost of processing a deer is $50. The processors help the program by processing the deer at almost half their regular cost. Since the program pays a per-deer processing fee, please consider a larger bodied deer. Processors have the right to refuse any deer donation that has not been field-dressed or cared for in a manner that ensures quality usable meat.

The processors this year are Brent Powell, Powell Processing (21397 Trower Rd., Wachapreague, 757-787-7107) and Scott Hines, Eastern Shore Outfitters (4306 Main St., Exmore, 757-442-4009).

Collections points are The Food Bank at Tasley (24530 Coastal Blvd., 757-787-2557) and B&B Market (13001 Lankford Hwy., Machipongo, 757-678-7236).

The program is a 501(c)(3) charitable organization and donations are deductible as allowed by law. The program is a listed agency for the local United Way campaign. There currently is a dollar for dollar match for donations from businesses, civic organizations, and Ruritan clubs.

Donations, made out to Hunters for the Hungry may be sent to P.O. Box 1702 Parksley, Va. 23421.

For further questions, to arrange a speaker, or to help out call or email the local director Worth Saunders at 757-710-0049 or worth@davisrehab.com.
January is Cervical Cancer Awareness Month. Cervical cancer is a highly preventable and treatable cancer, thanks to improved screening and vaccination.

According to the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force, cervical cancer screening should start at age 21. Screening can identify changes in the cells of the cervix that could lead to cancer. Screening might include a Pap test and, for some women, testing for human papillomavirus (HPV).

About one in four Americans are currently infected with HPV virus. HPV is the main cause of cervical cancer in women. The HPV vaccine is successful in protecting people from HPV-related cancers. It is extremely important for boys and girls to receive the vaccine at age 11 or 12. The vaccine is the most effective when preteens receive the vaccine before exposure to HPV infection. The HPV vaccine is given in a series of two shots. For more information, refer to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) guide to HPV vaccines for preteens and teens.

The two screening tests that can help prevent cervical cancer or find it early are:

- The Pap test (or Pap smear), which looks for precancers, cell changes on the cervix that might become cervical cancer if they are not treated appropriately, and
- The HPV test, which looks for the virus that can cause these cell changes.

Both tests can be done in a doctor’s office or clinic. During the Pap test, the doctor will use a plastic or metal instrument, called a speculum, to widen your vagina. This helps the doctor examine the vagina and the cervix and collect a few cells and mucus from the cervix and the area around it. The cells are sent to a laboratory. The cells will be checked to see if they look normal.

When getting an HPV test, the cells will be tested for HPV.

Women 21 to 29 Years Old
It is recommended to start getting Pap tests at age 21. If a test result is normal, the doctor may have the patient wait three years until the next test.

Women 30 to 65 Years Old
Talk to a doctor about which testing option is right:

- A Pap test only: If the result is normal, the doctor may have the patient wait three years until the next test.
- An HPV test only: This is called primary HPV testing. If the result is normal, the doctor may have the patient wait five years until the next screening.
- An HPV test along with the Pap test: This is called co-testing. If both of the results are normal, the doctor may have the patient wait five years until the next screening.

Women Older Than 65
The doctor may tell the patient that she doesn’t need to be screened anymore if

- she has had normal screening test results for several years, or
- she has had her cervix removed as part of a total hysterectomy for noncancerous conditions, like fibroids.

Test Results
It can take as long as three weeks to receive test results. If a test shows that something might not be normal, the doctor will contact the patient and figure out how best to follow up. There are many reasons why test results might not be normal. It usually does not mean cancer.

If test results show cells that are not normal and may become cancerous, the doctor will let the patient know if she needs to be treated. In most cases, treatment prevents cervical cancer from developing. It is important to follow up with the doctor right away to learn more about the test results and receive any treatment that may be needed.

If test results are normal, the chance of getting cervical cancer in the next few years is low. The doctor may tell the patient that she can wait several years for her next screening, but she should still go to the doctor regularly for a checkup.

How to Prepare for a Pap or HPV Test
Do not schedule a test during a period. If a test is scheduled in the next two days:

- Do not douche (rinse the vagina with water or another fluid).
- Do not use a tampon.
- Do not have sex.
- Do not use a birth control foam, cream, or jelly.
- Do not use a medicine or cream in the vagina.

Arcadia High School
Students Donate to ASPCA

Arcadia High School special education students raised awareness and gathered donations for the Virginia ASPCA (American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals). During the month of December, the class collected over 100 items, such as cat litter and dog treats, according to their teacher Charlotte Wagner.

“The students were inspired by a story they read in class and decided to mobilize their efforts to helping animals in need,” noted Wagner. Parents, teachers, and other students dropped off items at the high school, which had donation boxes setup throughout the building. Once collected, the donations were given to the local ASPCA on Dec. 17.

“The students accomplished a lot and I am so proud of them,” Wagner said.

Referrals Can Be Costly

By Richard L. Saunders
Special to the Eastern Shore Post

Over the past decade or so, a new business model has become much more prevalent: referral clearing houses. They exist in any number of fields, all being advertised as being FREE to you the consumer. But are they really free? The answer can be hard to determine.

Let’s look at some facts. These referral organizations are not nonprofits. Therefore, they must have a significant revenue stream from somewhere, if it is “free” to the consumer.

So the question naturally arises, where does the money come from? Is it from the entities that get referrals from these third party middlemen? A logical conclusion. Consider that possibility when using the much-advertised entity that offers itself as a source for home repairs. Consider that possibility when using the much-advertised service that finds low-cost insurance for you. These and other “clearing houses” spend a lot on advertising. You and other users of these referral companies are ultimately paying this money. Companies that list with these referral operations no doubt pay for that privilege, either up front or as a piece of business realized through the referral agency. This cost is no doubt passed on to you, the ultimate consumer. It is simple math. Remember the following acronym: TANSTAF (There Are No Such Things As Free Lunches).

Doing your own comparative shopping may sound more burdensome, but may be better in the long run. Also know that if you use these middlemen you will probably be deluged by phone calls and emails as I was once when I reached out to a certain service dealing with mortgages.

Remember also another growing endeavor over the past couple of decades: data mining. Much is known about you (unless you have lived in a cave for the past 20 years). The particular surface mail advertisements you get, the ads that pop up on your computer screen, the emails you get are often not random. They are the result of aggregated data collected by data mining operations and sold to commercial (and sometimes political) users. Even your food consumption habits are tracked and stored if you utilize a supermarket loyalty card. The same is true about healthcare products if you utilize a pharmacy loyalty card. This is not necessarily a bad thing for the consumer, just understand the tradeoff. Health insurance companies used to subscribe to something called the Medical Index Bureau. I know this from my long ago days as a health insurance claim approver for a large insurance company. All healthcare claims, whether approved or not, would be passed along to this database, subscribed to by most large insurers. I do not know whether the MIB still exists or in what form.

I mention all this about data mining because these referral clearinghouse operations collect data from you if you engage their “services.” This data can be valuable. What do you think happens to it when you are done with your immediate use of the particular referral service? Does the service sell the data to data mining enterprises? It would be a way for the referral entity to enhance its revenue stream.

The point of this column is not to steer consumers toward or away from anything. Rather it is to hopefully raise the critical thinking quotient of consumers in response to some of the products and services they see advertised.
