Bench Beckons Birders

Birdwatching is a favorite pastime of visitors to the Chincoteague Wildlife Refuge. This bench on the Refuge Wildlife Loop is a great place for spotting birds in every season. Read more about birding at the refuge on Pages 4 and 5.
Chincoteague Cultural Alliance Debuts Open-Air Stage

Gather around the new open-air stage at the Chincoteague Cultural Alliance on Sunday, June 3, at 2 p.m., for a rousing performance of traditional gospel music by Troy and Clara Outten, Colton Kerchner, Mickey and Keagan Justice, and Connor Dendler. Troy Outten is the music teacher at Chincoteague High School and Kerchner is one of his students. Enjoy great instrumentals on banjo, bass, guitar, and mandolin, and harmony singing on classics including “Will The Circle Be Unbroken,” “I’ll Fly Away,” “Preachin, Praying, Singing,” and “Rock of Ages.”

There is no admission fee but a suggested contribution of $5 will help 17-year-old Kerchner accompany the Outten family this summer to the 46th Annual RockyGrass Festival in Colorado. Known internationally as one of the top traditional bluegrass festivals, it brings together “generations of legends and future-legends,” making it a perfect place for Colton, Chincoteague’s young banjo virtuoso, to learn even more.

The concert is outdoors at CCA’s Community Center for the Arts, 6309 Church St. (inside in case of rain). Attendees may bring chairs and coolers. Water and soft drinks will be available for sale.

Give a Person a Fish, She Eats for a Day; Teach a Person to Fish, It Becomes an Obsession

Fishing and crabbing are important parts of Chincoteague’s heritage and just about anywhere there’s water, there are people fishing. Born of necessity, they have become a preferred leisure activities — obsessions for some — and ways to form fun family traditions. At left, a family is crabbing at Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge. At right a woman casts from the former bridge, the remnants of which now serve as a pier.

Birding at the Wildlife Refuge: It’s a Four-Season Hobby

By Connie Morrison

When the Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge celebrated its 75th anniversary on May 12, it was also celebrating World Migratory Bird Day. The refuge is a stopover in the Eastern flyway for both the spring and fall migrations. It is a haven for birdwatchers and also houses nesting migratory shorebirds such as piping plovers, American oystercatchers, and least terns.

Some, like the threatened piping plover, are federally protected. Nesting sanctuaries were created for them by closing Toms Cove Hook and Assawoman Island. From March 15 to September 15 visitors are asked to help protect nesting shorebirds by staying out of these sensitive areas.

There are many ways to see birds and other wildlife at the refuge.

Hoof it. Take your binoculars and/or camera and set up along one of the many paths around the refuge. If you are unable to walk for any distance, binoculars and/or a telephoto lens can make the difference. Pull off the road and onto the shoulder where you can safely do so.

Get a bird’s-eye view. Get an all-around view as your reward for climbing the spiral steps to the top of the Assateague Lighthouse. Climb is available 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. daily. Lighthouse access is free to the public. Who knows what you might spy with your bird’s eye view?

Important notes: For public safety, the lighthouse will close when temperatures exceed 95 degrees. Lighthouse access may occasionally be canceled due to inclement weather, safety considerations, or staffing. Please contact Chincoteague Natural History Association (CNHA) to ensure that climbs will be available during your visit. The association can be reached at 757-336-3696 or www.piping-plover.org

Take the Refuge Trek. CNHA provides bus transportation on a seven-mile service road for visitors wishing to view wildlife. Birds are just one of the wild refuge residents spotted on this less-traveled road. Ponies, white-tailed deer, and sika elk are also frequently seen. Bus operators ask that you dress for the weather as riders are permitted to get off the bus at select locations. Insect repellent, water, cameras, and binoculars are recommended.

Refuge Treks are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at 10 a.m., and Fridays at 4 p.m. Beginning in mid-June, Refuge Treks will be offered daily, except Wednesdays, through Labor Day weekend. CNHA accepts Visa, MasterCard, and Discover for phone reservations. Refuge Treks do sell out, so plan and reserve accordingly. Bus rides cost $15/person and $7.50 for children 12 and under.

Important notes: Refuge Treks have limited space. Seats can be reserved in advance by calling 757-336-3696. The tours are occasionally cancelled due to inclement weather, safety considerations, or staffing. Before you visit, please contact CNHA to ensure the Refuge Trek will be available. The association can be reached at 757-336-3696 or www.piping-plover.org

DO NOT take to the skies. The use of drones within the refuge is strictly prohibited, both for public health and safety reasons and to protect refuge resources. Launching, landing, or operating unmanned aircraft from or on lands and waters administered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

Tom’s Cove, accessible from the Beach Road; the Snow Goose Pool, accessible from the Wildlife Loop; and the Swan Cove Pool, accessible from both the Beach Road and the Wildlife Loop are favorite locations for bird watchers.

There are, however, plenty of other areas to engage in birdwatching that don’t harm threatened bird populations.

“It is a four-season birding experience. You can go any season and see a lot of species,” said local birding enthusiast Roberta Kellam in an interview for the Hitching Post last fall.
within the boundaries of Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge is prohibited.

To find out which birds have been sighted recently in the park, check in with the rangers at the Herbert H. Bateman Educational and Administrative Center (the visitors center), open daily, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., or go online. Recent bird sightings can be found at www.fws.gov/refuge/chincoteague/birdsightings.html There is also a link where birders can add their own bird sightings https://ebird.org/home On Monday, May 28, more than 60 entries had been made by 10 a.m.

If you catch bird fever and want to take your new hobby home, the ebird site allows enthusiasts to view sited species by location so new birders will know what to look for at home. When the Hitching Post last wrote about birding in September 2017, 383 bird species had been recorded in Accomack County, and 411 in Northampton. Since then each county has added one species to its tally. Whether watching out the living room window at home or from a relaxing vacation destination, birding is a hobby that can go anywhere.

If you don’t have binoculars, the visitors center has them to loan, and the local libraries have several bird guides (under Sibley’s and National Wildlife Federation titles). If you want to purchase your own, the gift shop at the visitors center has everything a novice needs to get started.

This gull appears to be dancing. You'll never know what you'll see when bird watching.

A black-crowned night heron at the edge of the water in Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge.
For the second week in a row, the fishing remains more consistent than the weather. Croakers have made an early appearance on the seaside and cobia have begun to take the place of black drum in the lower Chesapeake Bay. Spanish mackerel have shown up in the ocean waters just off the Virginia Capes.

Lower Shore — Chris Snooks at Chris’ Bait & Tackle reports that flounder fishing has improved in the ditch off the refuge, with flatfish as big as 8 pounds reported. Red drum fishing remains very good off Fishermans Island, where black drum also remain. Cobia and large sharks have begun to show up, with shark releases as long as 8 feet registered for citations. Sheepshead catches are still coming from the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. Catches of sea mullet have been made from the pier at the Kiptopeke State Park. Croaker catches have come from the waters out of Oyster.

Jeb Brady at Bailey’s Bait & Tackle reports that they have enjoyed a good run of black drum and a few fish still remain. Drum anglers are starting to see increasing numbers of cobia bycatches, especially off Nautilus Shoal and around the bridge-tunnel. Flounder catches were being made out of Oyster and sand mullet were being caught off Guy’s Point.

Wachapreague — Captain Lindsay Paul at Trident Tackle reports that black drum catches are still being made out of Willis Wharf and Quinby. The shop registered a red drum release citation for Sam Sellard. Flounder fishing out of Wachapreague was described as “hit or miss,” but croakers have shown up along with sand mullet. Reports of yellowfin tuna catches have come from the Poor Man’s Canyon, but planned trips out of the port were scuttled due to high winds.

Chincoteague — Peter Vasilou at Captain Steve’s Bait & Tackle reports the black drum and striped bite off the beach remains steady. Kingfish (whiting), puffers, and toothy sharks are also being caught in the surf. In Chincoteague Bay the flounder population has spread out with catches coming from Queen Sound as well as in the Chincoteague Channel. Assateague Channel continues to be a favorite destination for a lot of the flounder seekers. Offshore, the black sea bass bite has been good over the wrecks. Reports of yellowfin and bluefin tuna have come from the canyon waters.

Donna Rae at Captain Bob’s Marina reports flounder fishing has been “spotty” with a lot of undersized fish. Anglers have been averaging a couple of keepers out of every dozen or so fish caught. A lot of captains are fishing in Chincoteague Bay, especially in the deep hole in front of the high school. Undersized gray trout as well as bluefish have shown up in Chincoteague Channel. Donna said that the surf is still producing catches of black drum, but the number of fish is declining, while the number of striped bass is increasing. Croaker and kingfish have shown up in the inlet near buoys #11 and 12. Yellowfin to almost 70 pounds have been reported from the Poor Man’s Canyon.

Upper Shore — Captain Matt Abell of the Sea Hawk Sports Center reports fishing has been good considering the recent weather that we have had. He said flounder fishing on the seaside remains “okay,” as the fish have moved up on the flats with the best action occurring during the last of the flood through the first of the ebb tide. Red drum catches are still coming from the surf and some of the reds have met the slot limit. On the bayside, speckled trout fishing has been slow on the upswing, with fresh baits outcatching lures. The same holds true for rockfish. Red drum catches have been coming from the waters of Pocomoke Sound all the way up to South Marsh Island. Sheepshead catches from the waters off Chincoteague all the way down to the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel have recently been brought into the shop.

Bill Hall was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Salt Water Master Angler Status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year. Bill is an IGFA International Committee Representative and a long-time member of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament Committee. He is the Virginia Recreation Fishing representative on the ASMFC Striped Bass Management Panel and is a past recipient of the CCA-VA Virginia Outdoor Writer Conservation Leadership Award.

The Chincoteague Community Tennis Association (CCTA) held its annual Memorial Day Round Robin Tennis Tournament on Saturday, May 26, at the public tennis courts at Memorial Park on Chincoteague Island. The event was directed by Kim Halpin and was attended by many existing and new members including Kathy Seabrooks of Belle Haven, and Art and Margaret Carroll, of Uncasville, Conn.

The competition began at 9 a.m., and by noon the winners had been determined. First place was awarded to Terry Springle of Captains Cove. In second place was Peter Lukacs of Chincoteague, and third place was taken by Paul Knight of Captains Cove. Edda Grove of Chincoteague was awarded the prize for most games won by a female player. All of the players and many other members then enjoyed a potluck picnic at the pavilion.

The next event to be held by the CCTA will be the July 4th Family Fun Day & Picnic to be held on Wednesday, July 4th. As with all of the events organized by the CCTA you must be a member to participate so please consider joining our association. Contact Peter Lukacs at communitytennisassoc.2013@gmail.com or call 301-370-8439 for more information.

If you’ve ever gone over the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel you know one way to get back home is to follow the seagull signs. It’s that same bird you throw a french fry when you’re sitting in the car at a fast-food restaurant with the window down. They hang out in parking lots and on the beach. They like to rest on piers. They are a symbol of the Eastern Shore. Well, guess what I just read? They are not seagulls at all. That is correct and I am as shocked as you are.

According to www.spwickstrom.com/seagull, “Seagull” is an informal way laymen refer to any of the species that belong to the family Laridae, or the gulls. In all actuality,” the site says, “there is no such thing as a seagull.”

Can you really believe everything you read on the internet? Most likely not, but, I think this one is sad but true.

“There is not actually a single species called the seagull, but people all over the world refer to them as seagulls,” the site continues. “They are actually, and correctly, referred to as ‘gulls’ … most closely related to the terns and only distantly related to auks, and skimmers, and more distantly to the waders.”

And I thought waders were those high rubber boots watermen wore.

I went online to find out how to pronounce Laridae. What a crazy quest that was. The dictionaries kept asking me if I meant “lariat.” Word people don’t take “no” for an answer. Finally, I learned you say lair-a-day or lair-a-dee. The first one sounds like a loose woman and the second reminds me of the word “chickadee.” I will not be recommending it as the next baby girl name of the year.

It is a Greek word meaning “ravenous seabird.” I learned Laridae is in the bottom 10 percent of words by popularity. There are many, many species of gulls and I have seen them all. The Black-legged Kittiwake, the large Glaucus Gull, the annoying Laughing Gull, and the Ring-billed Gull look the most familiar to me.

There were some “fun facts” about gulls too. They are monogamous. They will gang up on an intruder with up to 100 gulls to protect their breeding colony. They can survive drinking salt water due to the glands just above their eyes that flush the salt from their systems out through their nostrils. They have excellent vision, are expert flyers, and are the state bird of Utah. And, I love to photograph them because they are not camera shy at all. Yippee!

This gull thinks he’s king of the tump — that’s a small hill or group of trees or shrubs — and it’s what some people call Chincoteague.
Library Challenge Gets Students Reading Over the Summer

Submitted Article

Children and their parents are invited to a Summer Reading Challenge Open House on Thursday, June 7, from 4-7 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

The challenge runs June 7 through Aug. 17. It is free and open to all children, locals and visitors, from kindergarten through 12th grade. During the reading challenge, children can select any reading materials and topics they enjoy. Studies indicate that children will read more when they can choose materials based on their own interests.

Stop in anytime from 4-7 p.m. on June 7 to register and pick up reading logs. If a child does not already have a library card, this is a great opportunity to sign up for one. A parent or guardian must accompany a child who wants to get a library card. Children who just want to register and get their reading logs and information do not have to be accompanied by a parent.

Children should turn in their completed logs to the library on Aug. 17 at 11 a.m. when a wrap-up party will be held. Refreshments will be served, and readers will receive a library bag of back-to-school supplies. Children who cannot attend the wrap-up party can still turn in their logs through Aug. 25 and receive their bags of goodies.

“Free and voluntary reading helps children become better readers, writers, and spellers,” notes the Chincoteague Island Library President Linda Ryan. “The Summer Reading Challenge encourages that reading become a lifelong habit and helps children keep up their skills over the summer months. And it is fun!”

Children who cannot attend the open house can still participate by signing up and picking up their reading logs at the library anytime during regular business hours between June 8 - June 23. The Chincoteague Island Library is located at 4077 Main Street. For more information call the library at 757-336-3460, or check the Chincoteague Island Library Facebook page or its website www.chincoteague.com/chincoteagueislandlibrary/
The tradition of Pony Penning started in 1925, more than two decades before the famous “Misty of Chincoteague” was born, and will begin again in July to the delight of thousands.

The South Herd roundup is the kick-off of week-long activities and is set for Saturday, July 21, at about 4 p.m. That’s when saltwater cowboys, or members of the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company, which owns the herd, will escort approximately 50 ponies to the Southern Corral on Assateague Island on the Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge, where they live. The public is permitted to gather around the coral for the event.

Then on Sunday morning, July 22, between 100 and 150 ponies will be herded to the North Corral. This part of the island is not accessible. However, reserve tickets for special bus tours are available by contacting the Chincoteague Chamber of Commerce.

“The swim occurs just south of Memorial Park on the east side of Chincoteague. There is no charge for parking or watching. Only buses are designated to park at Memorial Park. Those seeking handicap parking and all day-trippers are encouraged to go to Municipal Center on Community Drive and catch the free shuttle. Shuttles begin between 4 and 5 a.m. and end an hour after the ponies arrive at the carnival grounds.

The first foal to swim to Chincoteague will be named King or Queen Neptune and will be given away in a raffle drawing at the carnival grounds later in the day. You must be present to win. The ponies rest for about 45 minutes after swimming and then are paraded to the carnival grounds on Main Street.

The annual auction of ponies will begin Thursday, July 26, 8 a.m. at the carnival ground. Last year, 62 ponies sold (including 10 buybacks — ponies that are returned to wild, but the owner buys the right to name them) for an average of $3,385. The high bid was $15,000. The low bid was $1,100. Total sales were $209,900, a new record.

There are two herds of ponies on Assateague. One is in Virginia and the other is in Maryland. The two states share the island, and a fence separates the herds. The National Park Service manages the Maryland herd. A contraceptive vaccine controls its population.

A Rhyming Riddle!

"We are familiar creatures,
Each with different features.
One of us in a glass is set,
Another you will find injet.
The third is found inside a tin,
A fourth, a beautiful box within;
And the fifth, if you pursue,
It will never fly from you."

Try to Be Presidential

Solving This One!

In the grid to the left, there is room for the first names of eight of our past presidents. The following tricky hints should help you:

1. One who moves things.
2. Often found in the garden.
3. One of the Beatles.
4. The Tall Texan.
5. To add greater quantity to.
6. He was for clean government.
7. A catty president.
8. A type of stare.

There is a dark frame around one of the columns. The letters in the frame, top to bottom, will spell out the home of several of our presidents.
